Premarital agreements
k.o. rocks as girl's best friend

Business News

Walsh promoted at Warehouse Club, Inc.

James V. Walsh has been promoted to executive vice president and chief financial officer of the Warehouse Club, Inc., a leading wholesale club warehouse retailer announced Walter Tucker, chairman and chief executive officer of the Warehouse Club.

Walsh was vice president and director of merchandising for Warehouse Club and was responsible for the buying and inventory management of all merchandise purchased for the club's 72 stores nationwide.

Walsh joined the company in 1982 and has held several positions within the merchandising department, including director of merchandising operations, regional merchandising manager and merchandising manager.

The idea of a parent paying for a child's college education has been popularized by the term "k.o. rock-ts."

Advertisers have been pushing premarital agreements as a way to protect the interests of both parties. But what happens when one party cannot afford to pay what the other party is demanding?

That's when the "k.o. rocks" come in. They are the premarital agreements that are being negotiated between parents and children as a way to ensure that children get a college education.

The agreement must be fair to both parties. It must be a fair agreement between the parents and the child, and it must be clearly stated in writing. The agreement should be signed by all parties involved.

The agreement should also be a marketing tool. It should be used to attract potential parents and children to the college.

The agreement should also be a way to help parents and children understand their legal rights and obligations.

The agreement should also be
a way to help parents and children plan for the future.

The agreement should also be
understand the benefits and disadvantages of different financial opportunities.

The agreement should also be
understand the importance of planning.
