Election returns follow familiar voting pattern: Blase

by Shellya Hackett

No review of the April 2 Niles election can ignore the basic premise of politics: it is hard to unseat the incumbents.

Niles incumbent trustees, running as the Leadership With Economy party, easily won re-statement in the contest. Even in a possible site of voter backlash, precincts 1 and 96 in the Ballard Road and Cumberland Avenue area, near the new pumping station and reservoir, returns showed little change from previous voting patterns, Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase noted.

Overall voter turnout was Continued on Page 31 who heads the welcome committee.

About two dozen Italian visitors will tour the metropolitan Chicago area for about a week as guests of the Sister City

School districts could challenge commercial appeals for lower taxes

Schools back proposed tax appeal change

by Nancy Keraminas

Pending state legislation allowing other government bodies to challenge a business' appeal for a lower property tax rate will have more of an effect on school districts, which derive most of their income from real estate taxes.

"One of the problems has been that local districts haven't had any standing," said East Maine District 63 Finance Director Paul Halverson. "We find out after the fact if there's been a reduction. This (legislation) would help."

"Are we suspicious of some properties?" commented Morton Grove District 70 Superintendent John Graham. "While I'm totally in support of the legislation, we're not going out on a witch hunt looking for industries trying to avoid their fair tax rate."

Graham was one of several area representatives attending a real estate tax sub-committee hearing of the Illinois House of Representatives Revenue Committee on House Bill 427 last Thursday, April 4 in Skokie.

State Representative Jeff Schoenberg (D-56) supports this proposed law. Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase also spoke in favor of the legislation.

"This bill would be a great thing for schools particularly," Continued on Page 31

by Bud Besser

Would a caucus system of choosing village officials be preferable to the present system we now have in Niles and Morton Grove?

Nick Blase told us after last week's village elections such a system is now in place in several surrounding communities and he implied such a system might be workable.

It was ironic Nick should breach the subject. Here's a guy in complete control. He's dominated the village of Niles and Maine Township politics for 30 years. He picks 'em. He runs 'em. And he wins. For thirty years. For fifteen village elections and at least seven township elections Blase has pretty well run his own show. Now, after all this time he suggests perhaps there's a better way of running local elections.

In bygone years we were supportive of school caucus programs. But as the years went on, we soured on their programs. A very small cadre of people would select their school choices and that would be the end of any further Continued on Page 31

Niles police charge man with sex offenses

Police in Niles, Glenview and Cook County have lodged various complaints against a 22-year-old Glenview man who has been committing indecent acts in the past several months against various women.

According to Detective James Zimmerman of the Niles police, the offender chased one woman in the Venture parking lot at 8500 Golf Road and in a second incident ordered food at a drive-up window of an unspecified Niles restaurant. In the former incident, he was totally naked and in the second, was unclothed from the waist down.

"We originally arrested him March 21," Zimmerman said, referring to an incident in which the suspect reportedly exposed himself to a 28-year-old Des Plaines woman in Golf Mill shopping center's parking lot.

"He was identified by the victim and we used his picture in a photo lineup," Zimmerman said. The Niles victim also witnessed Continued on Page 31

It's amazing how many successful companies start as backyard ventures.

Sometimes all it takes is a good idea and old fashioned hard work. But more often that not, a little seed money is needed. And that's where we come in.

Telephone cables create a nuisance

Dave LeMonier of 7855 Oconto Ave. in Niles shown with the snarl of telephone multi-conductor cables that have been lying in his parkway for the last couple of weeks. His requests to the telephone company to restring the cables have been ignored.

Not only has Dave LeMonier, of 7855 Oconto Ave. in Niles, had to put up with weeks of street construction work along the side of his corner home, but now telephone cables hang from the tree in his parkway and snarl across the ground where youngsters could easily find them an "attractive nuisance."

LeMonier lives at Oconto and Kirk and Kirk has been undergoing extensive underground sewer repair for the last couple of months leaving the street impassable at many times.

During the work, one of the heavy machines snagged the telephone cables crossing Kirk putting the local residents out of telephone communications for a day-and-a-half.

Illinois Bell workers' improper work was the cause.

Man dies after collision near underpass

A head-on collision into construction equipment at Dempster Street and Prospect Avenue, Niles, April 4 seriously injured a Glenview man. He died from his injuries April 5 in Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

Steven Meinholz, 24, of Glenview, was driving east on Dempster Street the night of April 4 when his car crashed through detour barriers and hit a parked construction trailer, west of construction at the Milwaukee Avenue/Dempster Street underpass.

The crash ripped off the roof of Meinholz' car and the car became wedged under the trailer.

According to Niles District Chief Don Kobylecki, firefighters used pillow-type air bags and hydraulic equipment to extricate Meinholz and take him to Lutheran General Hospital.

Fire Department officials said on-the-scene evidence indicated the car was traveling at a high rate of speed. There were no skid marks.

BBs cause $2,000 worth of damage at MG school

The sound of BB pellets hitting the windows interrupted a Board of Education meeting at Parkview School, 6200 Lake Street, Morton Grove, the night of April 1.

Nine windows were hit, at various locations around the school and damage was estimated at $2,000.

Parkview Principal Les Lange reported he saw two male youths fleeing over a fence on the north-east side of the school property. Through the darkness, he saw the suspects run towards the east, through the wwo ds to Moody Avenue, he said.

Serious crimes were down in Morton Grove in 1990, with the exception of vehicle burglaries, which increased to 84, 14 more than the previous year.

National crime index offenses consider serious crimes those of homicide, criminal sexual assault, robbery, aggravated battery and assault, burglary, theft, and arson.

While these offenses are considered serious, the annual report of the Morton Grove Police Department indicates responses to that type of call, and lesser offenses such as criminal damage to property, disorderly conduct and traffic violations, occupy only 12.9 percent of police officers' time. The bulk of their work 79.4 percent -- goes to service calls such as citizen and motorist assists; checks for well-being; citizen complaints; premise checks and animal control complaints. Traffic accidents took up 7.6 percent of officers' time.

Even though home burglaries were fewer in 1990, statistics indicate October of that year saw the most activity in residential burglaries, with 20 complaints, followed by the months of February and December with 16. The figures include attempted burglary.

Police saw juveniles with the average age of 14.1 years primarily involved in curfew violations, disorderly conduct and criminal damage to property.

They record 18 juveniles needing authoritarian intervention, a category covering runaways or uncontrollable young people. Follow-up here involves talking with the minor and possibly referring him to a social service agency.

District 63 sets June 7 as last day of school

by Eileen Hirschfeld

The calendar of East Maine School District 63 was amended by board consent in order to reflect nine days not needed as snow days this winter, according to action last Tuesday.

According to the revised calendar, Friday, June 7 will be the last day while Thursday, June 6 will be scheduled for graduation at Gemini Junior High School.

A teacher present at the school board meeting protested the lengthy amount of snow days without an amendment to delete unused days. She told The Bugle it was unlikely the district ever would need this many snow days.

According to her, teachers put in an unnecessary half day last year and will again this year.

In other matters, board members voted to enter into a contract with American Youth, Inc. to provide school accident insurance.

YOUR PARENTS AND YOU

A minor miracle like Edna's

This is a story about a great lady. I'll identify her only as Edna. Her story is well worth telling because it offers hope to so many people. Because others can do what Edna did with grit, determination and a little help from her friends. Edna a bright, intelligent, likeable 99 year-old woman who lived with friends and was fully able to care for herself until she fell and broke her hip. After a hospital stay, Edna found she was unable to walk without parallel bars. It took two people to help her sit and stand. She also needed help with bathing and dressing. Things looked bleak for Edna until what I call the magic equation began to work. That equation was the patient's courage and will to get well plus a specially designed rehabilitation program devised by the skilled staff at Ballard Nursing Center. During her month-long stay at Ballard, Edna "worked out" with three to four therapy sessions a day. Dr. Norton Planagan, physiatrist and Ballard's Director of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation monitored the program and fine-tuned Edna's exercise. Between Edna's courage and will to recover and the skill of our staff, Edna began walking, sitting and standing without help. She's now home, able to bathe and dress herself. In fact, she just celebrated her 100th Birthday. A nursing center with skilled staff and an excellent rehabilitation program, like Ballard's, can work one of these minor miracles like Edna's. If you would like more information about how to get yourself or a relative back into the swing of things, call Jill Sirotki at Ballard Nursing Center, (708) 299-0182.

RTA REDUCED FARE CARD
The Regional Transportation Authority's Reduced Fare Program provides an approximate 50 percent discount on Pace, Metra and CTA services. Unfortunately, because of the great value the program offers, it has been the target of persistent fraud attempts by people who are not eligible for this benefit. To safeguard the program from such abuse, and to preserve the reduced fare benefit for its rightful recipients, those senior citizens who have registered, the RTA is revising its Reduced Fare Program. Between March 1 and August 31, all eligible special users travel card holders must re-register if they wish to remain active in the RTA's Reduced Fare Program. Call the RTA Travel Information Center at (312) 836-7000 to find a nearby Reduced Fare Program registration center.

Rapid Transit visits Skokie

No, we are not talking about a new metro line, the Skokie Swift is still the fastest form of transportation in Skokie, but we are talking about Rapid Transit, the entertainment foursome with a reputation for providing fast moving early "Manhattan Transfer" type harmony. The Skokie Park District is bringing Rapid Transit to the Oakton Community Center on April 14 at 2 p.m. The concert is the second in the Matinee Melodies series, which provides entertainment for the whole family on Sunday afternoons. Tickets are on sale now at the Devonshire and Oakton Community Centers for $5. Tickets are also available at the door for $6.

Developing proper lawn maintenance program

Proper mowing and use of fertilizer are important to any lawn maintenance program.

Correct use of fertilizer maximizes the environmental qualities of lawns by making them denser. This prevents erosion and runoff of irrigation and rainwater.

Over fertilization can directly damage a lawn or make it more vulnerable to insect and disease pests. Under fertilization allows room for weed growth. Northern cool season grasses should be fertilized in the spring and fall, while southern warm season grasses benefit from late spring, summer, and early fall fertilizations.

Mowing is a critical part of the program. For best results your lawn needs to be mowed with a sharp mower set at the mowing height that is ideal for the variety of grass you are growing. Sharpen your rotary mower monthly during the season, more often if you hit stones or sticks. The table below shows the ideal mowing height for common lawn grasses.

Match your mowing schedule to the growth rate of your lawn. You may need to mow every four or five days in late spring, but by summer you may only need to mow every 10 to 14 days. When you remove more than a third of the leaf height in a single mowing, root growth stops and the lawn becomes weaker, thinner, and loses its dark green color.

Ideal mowing height is: 75 to 1.25 inches - Bentgrass, Bermudagrass, and Zoysia; 2.50 to 3 inches - Kentucky Bluegrass, Fine Fescues, Ryegrasses & Centipede; and 3 to 3.50 inches - Tall Fescue, St. Augustine, & Bahia.

Most furnaces burn more than just gas.

Proper distance electioneering allowed from polling place debated

Dear Editor:

The right to electioneer around the polling places in terms of proper distance is 100 feet away from the polling place room; that's for people and signs. Now for those that were uptight about that aspect in the last election and complained to the judges that those rules were not being adhered to, I would like to state the following:

In one polling place where the electioneering procedure seemed to be violated, the electioneer said he was being harassed and called in election board attorneys. They defined the limits as such - you must be 100 feet beyond the door, archway, ect. that defines the room that the election machinery is actually in. It is not necessarily the doorway of the building that you have to access to reach that room even though that outside door area may be decked with election notices and the flag. So if there's a hallway or whatever passageway between the entrance door the building and the room where polling is taking place, then that space is part of that 100 feet and the electioneering can take place outside of the building entrance beyond the distance that further makes up the 100 feet.

This knowledge was gained the next day when a friend who was an election judge experienced the action indicated above. My observations on election day told me that there was more to the 100 feet limit than met the eye, but common sense is not an argument for right. Laws can only define that.

However annoying electioneering may be to some people we are in America and the right to carry out actions, within the law, deemed necessary by someone should be tolerated. What's important is not what anyone may think is legal, but what is actually legal.

At the polling place where I electioneered, not the one mentioned above, the polling room was some distance inside the building entrance door. The judges admonished us for being too close and defined a sidewalk off the parking lot, more than 100 feet, as the acceptable distance. When I challenged their edict based on what I had seen going on at other polling places in my travels that day, they couldn't be sure what was right. But so what, they were the apparent authority at hand. At that time I could not challenge them legally because I did not know about the ruling by the attorneys at the other poll, and I didn't realize I could have called up for a legal opinion of what was proper.

One polling place in particular seemed to have flagrant violations and that was at St. John Brebeuf where candidates up for election stood less than 20 feet from the building front door. I knew in this case that the polling room was quite a distance from the front door. These candidates were upright and knowledgeable people and I knew from what I observed that what appeared to be a violation could not be so because these people have more smarts than to put themselves in such a situation and antagonize the electorate. Common sense told me that what was happening here was what in all likelihood was legal, but as I said before common sense does not cut the mustard for winning an argument.

By the way at Grennan Heights the inside second entrance door was the defining entrance to the room that one precinct was in, but I noticed candidates electioneering well within the 100 feet as at the junction of the public sidewalk and the private walkway into the building and in some cases further in as voters proceeded inside. What's good for one is good for all, so let's apply the rules equally.

The electioneering signs seemed to fall within the law, but I wonder how effective they are because the electorate seemed to have their minds made up, from my observations of their manners and determination to reject handout materials. They may be polite and take it, but that can't be converted to votes because the average voter is knowledgeable to the point that satisfies his judgment to cast a vote for the candidate he thinks deserves it. The park district candidates had so many signs up on wooden sticks that I felt I was walking through a forest. Again the electorate seems to be saying "don't bother me with the facts," (that you are handing out) "my mind's made up" (from the facts as I know them).

Sister Irene expresses thanks to Bugle

Dear Bud Besser and all my friends at The Bugle:

You have always been "special friends" to me and to St. Benedict Home. For sharing your friendship and love with the older saints of God and with all the staff these many years I am sincerely grateful.

Thank you also for the excellent article on St. Benedict Home and the Sisters' ministry to the aging. We received many compliments and more congratulatory wishes.

In reviewing the article in the March 14, 1991 edition of The Bugle, I was happy to note that the aging people of God enjoyed prominent space.

For thirty years I kept reminding myself that, "we must expand because these older saints of God must be given a Home not an institution wherein to spend their twilight years."

Congregate living can become a real family experience among adults. Peace, love and harmony are a must in any group living.

Many thanks, Mr. Besser for generously sending extra copies for the residents and for the visitors. The beautiful, framed news article will be a daily reminder to me of my "special friends" at the Bugle Publishing Office.

God bless you and all those you love.

Sincerely,
Sister Irene Sebo

Nilesite addresses zip code controversy

Dear Ms. Hackett:

I have some thoughts concerning your article of March 28, about the problem of Niles ever having its own unique zip code. I read your article after I myself learned some things about how our lives can be ruled by what zip code we live in.

I recently made an inquiry to an insurance company for a quotation on health insurance for myself and my employees. This particular company needed ages and addresses of all parties, who would be included in the insurance coverage. I asked why the rates would depend on where everyone lived. A number of people live in Chicago but most live in the outlying suburbs, with myself being from Niles. The zip codes were what the company really wanted, and I was told that I may live in Niles, but I am rated with Chicago because of my 60648 zip code. Incidentally, there is a significant difference in rates charged to Chicago versus suburban residents. Because of my zip code I would have to pay a higher rate than my other suburban employees.

Sometimes things seem to be so simple when in actuality they are not. Things that appear so obvious, in the mind of the common everyday individual, for some inconceivable reason become so out-landishly complicated in reality. Other suburbs have their own zip code, some like Schaumburg have more than one. Why is there a problem with Niles? I don't live in Chicago; I don't want to live in Chicago; I am very happy in Niles. Why should we be penalized because of a set of five numbers?

Governmental agencies, I assume, were appointed or elected to serve the people. Why then does life have to be complicated to such a degree by various governmental agencies. Somewhere along the line things have become so complicated that the common man has no hope of ever understanding the ever-changing statutes. Look at income tax, and I think you can see what I mean.

If Niles ever having its own zip code is actually an "impossible dream," then I feel something is terribly wrong. Zip codes are an essential part of our everyday life, especially in regards to mail delivery. It seems so logically simple that each suburb has its own zip code. If the community wants this, why cannot it be so?

Has government advanced to such a stage that it cannot see the obvious? Have the triplicate forms, the excessive legal terminology and the "system" in general become more a servant unto themselves and not to the people who pay the taxes, pay the salaries, and carry the load? If a simple thing like a zip code cannot be corrected, maybe the time has come for major changes.

Sincerely,
Charles Gawronski

Smart borrowing advice

by James Verintan, president
Madison National Bank

Almost everyone thinks twice about applying for a loan. Taking on debt is a big step, and we like to feel confident that we can manage the payments easily. At the same time, credit is an important financial tool that helps us reach many goals. For example, borrowing for a home or a car and using credit cards to make purchases are simply the American way of life!

People borrow for a variety of reasons. Home ownership leads the list. Home improvement loans are also very popular. Let's say that you want to add a room, install central air-conditioning or put in a new kitchen and bathroom. All of these improvements add to the value of your home, and that is certainly a smart reason to borrow.

Home equity lines of credit provide a way for you to tap the equity that you have built up in your home and use the money for any purpose: at all-college expenses, home improvements, buying a car, taking advantage of investment opportunities, paying off credit card debt or even taking a vacation!

Finally, installment loans are available to help meet expenses when your budget is tight, to buy a car, or to purchase furniture or major appliances.

All lenders, including finance companies, will ask the same basic questions when you apply for a loan:

- How much do you make?
- How much do you already owe?
- Where do you live—in an apartment or do you own your home?
- How long have you lived at your current address?
- Where do you work?
- How long have you been employed?

In addition to asking you for information on these points, the lender will also check your credit history through credit bureaus and prior lenders. All lenders decide whether you are creditworthy based on your credit, ability to repay, and any collateral you may use to secure your loan.

When you are ready to apply for a loan, fill out the simple worksheet provided below. It will be a useful "first step" to determine your financial condition by showing you your total income and expenses.

As a general rule of thumb, your monthly mortgage payments and other monthly loan payments combined should not exceed 36% of your gross monthly income. This is not a hard and fast rule, but it will give you an idea of how much you can reasonably expect to borrow.

Prior credit history is an important factor in a lender's decision to extend credit to you. However, since no one is born with a credit record, we must establish one and keep it strong if we want to accomplish our goals with the privilege of borrowing.

In certain circumstances, it may be difficult to obtain a loan if you have always paid cash for things. Here are a few suggestions for establishing a credit history for the first time:

- Apply for gasoline or department store credit cards. Your initial credit limit may be small, but don't be discouraged. Make several purchases by using your credit card, and be sure to pay the bills on time.
- Open a savings account or certificate of deposit with your bank. Then, apply for a small personal loan at the bank by "pledging" your savings account or certificate as collateral. Once again, be sure to make all payments on schedule.
- Open a checking account and handle it in a responsible manner. Once you have qualified for one or more loans, your responsibilities as a smart borrower continue. You certainly will want to protect your credit rating.
- Be alert for the "danger signals" that often indicate the likelihood of credit woes down the road:
 - Sudden difficulty in making loan and credit card payments on time;
 - An increasing credit card balance each month instead of a decreasing balance, which means that you are charging more than you are paying off;

"Since no one is born with a credit record, we must establish one and keep it strong if we want to accomplish our goals with the privilege of borrowing."

- Frequent need for cash advances from bank cards, for example, because there was inadequate cash on hand in a checking account;
 - Inability to save even a nominal amount regularly; or
 - Tapping an increasing number of credit cards or personal lines of credit.
- One or more of these danger signals could mean that you are misusing your credit privileges. Take corrective action immediately, which usually means buying less until you are back in control of your personal finances.

After performing your self-assessment of your financial well-being, set up an appointment to discuss a loan with your bank. I'm sure they'll help you borrow smart.

Will your older years be your golden years?

by Jeffrey Cardella
Edward D. Jones & Co.

Most people hope to accumulate enough of a nest egg during their earning years to spend their golden years in comfort. A recent survey, however, showed that three out of four people fear they will be forced to lower their standard of living during retirement.

When it comes to your retirement dreams, don't leave the fate of your future in the hands of Social Security and a company sponsored retirement plan. After all, these programs may or may not meet your retirement needs.

It is important that you start saving now to meet your retirement needs, and an excellent way to do so is by using Individual Retirement Accounts. Many people believe IRAs went out with the Tax Reform Act of 1986, but the truth is they remain one of the best ways to save for a comfortable retirement.

Anyone under the age of 70 1/2 with earned income can contribute up to $2,000 annually to an IRA. The tax deductibility of the contributions is determined by two factors: whether you and your spouse are covered by an employer-sponsored retirement plan and your adjusted gross income. IRA contributions are fully deductible if anyone is not covered by an employer-sponsored plan.

The tax-deferred growth of IRAs make them a great way to save for retirement. You pay no taxes on your IRA earnings until you withdraw them. The longer you save, the larger your IRA will grow.

IRAs come in many forms. Many people believe that the only way to save for retirement is in a CD backed IRA, however, many other options are available. Many plans can offer unique benefits to suit your individual needs for growth and safety. Mutual funds provide the diversity that adds safety to retirement savings, along with the long-term growth that the stock market can provide. A self-directed IRA allows the investor the ability to choose the investments for the tax-deferred growth. The choices are many, including stocks, mutual funds, corporate and government bonds or annuities.

If you already have an IRA, now is a good time to examine it and decide if it is working as hard as it can be. Even a small increase in the rate can make a big difference when you're ready to retire. The most costly mistake you can make is waiting too long to begin. Providing for a secure retirement is a long-term goal that requires a long-term investment strategy.

"Punctuating Parents" Guide

Children's growth should be charted

When should a parent be concerned about their child's size and growth? An important role for parents is to keep track of their child's growth.

How many times have you, as a parent, compared your child to that of a classmate or playmate. Have you noticed how often they tend to grow out of their clothes or shoes? Observations such as these will assist in an early diagnosis of a growth problem.

Every child grows differently, but there are signs which may help parents in early identification of potential problems. One of the most important things a parent can do is have their child examined regularly by a pediatrician or family physician. At each visit, the child's height and weight should be measured and plotted on a growth chart.

By the age of three, every child should be measured at least annually. It is advisable that children under the age of three be measured more frequently. Measurements should be taken approximately every three months if abnormal growth is suspected, or until a growth pattern is clear. By the time your child is two to three years of age, they should fall into a normal growth pattern. After the age of two or three, any abnormal growth patterns should be further evaluated.

There are many causes of short stature and growth failure. A child's physician will evaluate their present growth rate by plotting

Children's vision, hearing clinics set

Parents who are concerned about their children's vision and hearing can receive free screenings through the Cook County Department of Public Health.

Unlike most health problems, vision and hearing difficulties are hard to detect in the young. "Children often do not know if they are seeing or hearing properly, meaning that problems can go unnoticed for a long time.

The inability to see or hear correctly may affect a child's development and ability to learn," said Dr. Karen L. Scott, director of the Cook County Department of Public Health (CCDPH).

To avoid developmental and learning delays, parents of preschool children should investigate any problems. The Cook County Department of Public Health offers free vision and hearing screenings to pre-school children, three to five years old, living in suburban Cook County. "Screening is a free service given by trained vision and hearing technicians to identify children who need a vision or hearing examination by a physician. Screening is not a substitute for regular doctor visits," said Dr. Scott.

CCDPH's vision and hearing clinics are held monthly at the 6th District Circuit Court Building in Markham, the Worth Park Public Library, the Melrose Park Public Library and the 3rd District Court Building in Rolling Meadows.

For more information or to make an appointment, call the Cook County Department of Public Health at (708) 865-6120.

Whooping cough immunizations offered

Perussis, better known as whooping cough, is a bacterial infection that can have serious effects on young children.

Complications caused by perussis include an increased risk of pneumonia, convulsions, and more severe brain problems. Perussis is a serious illness for children under five years old; children under one year old who get perussis are often hospitalized. It can cause severe coughing, which interferes with eating, drinking, and breathing.

Out of all the illnesses which can be prevented by immunizations, perussis is the second most common disease. Measles is the only other childhood immunizable disease, which is more common than perussis in this area.

Parents can protect their children against perussis by getting them immunized. People of all incomes who live in suburban Cook County can receive free immunizations against perussis, diphtheria, tetanus, and other diseases at any of the Cook County Department of Public Health's (CCDPH's) ten immunization clinics.

Residents of suburban Cook County can find out which immunization clinic is nearest them by calling (708) 818-2860 in the north suburbs, (708) 344-6052 in the west suburbs, (708) 974-6160 in the southwest suburbs, and (708) 210-4500 in the south suburbs. No appointment is needed. Please bring immunization records.

Day care center seeks community support

In a time when it is difficult for working mothers to find acceptable day care for young children, Glenview offers nationally-accredited day care at Wesley Day Care Center, which unites efforts with award-winning School District 34, and cooperates with the popular park district system to guide children through a nurturing and stimulating school day.

But now, help is needed. Working as a not-for-profit day care center, Wesley offers high quality services at affordable prices and therefore works on a "bare-to-the-bones" budget. Unfortunately, the center needs more consistent financial support to be able to continue to offer the Glenview community such services.

Friends of Wesley has been organized to stimulate community involvement for the welfare of its very young residents.

Father's rights attorney defends joint custody

Many divorced fathers feel they have no control in ensuring they may visit their children, especially when holidays arise, says Jeffrey M. Leving.

"Children should have a positive relationship with both parents. The mother and father may be desperately needed by the children," Leving said.

Leving is a prominent Chicago attorney, who protects father's rights in divorce matters. He also helped write the Illinois Joint Custody Law.

Leving believes that the courts should enforce all court orders equally, and that each parent should be expected to do their part to make their child's life run smoothly.

A variety of clients and situations are represented by Leving. He had obtained visitation rights for a father to visit his child in Norway and in the United States. The mother allegedly concealed the child from the father in Norway.

Leving also successfully defended a father falsely accused of sexually abusing his 3-year-old child.

In discussions with many fathers around the holidays, Leving noted that some people forget that divorced fathers are still fathers.

An interview with Leving was conducted, and the following comments are the questions asked and his responses:

1. Is joint custody of children after divorce in the best interests of the children?
After the parents are divorced, the children are not divorced from their parents, and children should be allowed to have maximum access to both parents.

2. In reference to our family structure, are times changing?
Mothers are working, and some fathers are primary caregivers to their children. Even in more traditional situations, it appears that a child's relationship with each parent is multidimensional and the mother and father may be primary caregivers for different reasons.

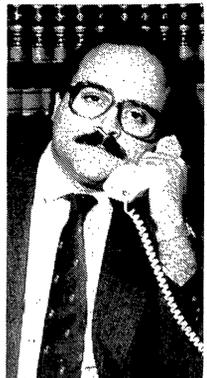

3. If one parent was hostile during the marriage, is joint custody a good idea?
Children generally are emotionally attached to both parents and need to be loved by both parents. The children's fear of losing one of their parents is more serious of an endangerment to the children than joint custody and the possibility of the children having two homes instead of one. Sole custody may be more convenient to the custodial parent, but, it generally is not in the best interest of the children when joint custody is the other option.

4. Does joint custody disrupt the stability of the custodial parent's environment by shutting the children between two different homes?
Many divorced mothers are now working and the children are shuttled back and forth between baby sitters, relatives, and day care centers.

5. What was our old joint custody law in Illinois?
Specifically, former Illinois revised statute Chapter 40, Section 603.1, provided that joint custody would not be awarded unless both parties agreed. Therefore, if a joint custodial arrangement was in the best interest of the children, but one party was angry that day and would not agree, the judge could not order joint custody. The judge was powerless. This is not the case under the new law.

6. Do you think joint custody will cut down on the problem of fathers not paying child support?
I defend fathers in post-decree proceedings whereby mothers were attempting to collect child-support arrearages. Many of the fathers paid little or no support because the mothers had sole custody and the fathers felt unwanted and rejected, and they had unhealthy angry relationships with their children. Joint custody may be one way to solve this problem.

Jeffery Leving

Sole custody may be more convenient to the custodial parent, but, it generally is not in the best interest of the children when joint custody is the other option.

Many divorced mothers are now working and the children are shuttled back and forth between baby sitters, relatives, and day care centers.

An alleged problem arises when non-custodial parents are included in this group of caregivers. The real problem is in the custodial parents fear of losing control and change. Why can't the non-custodial parent be one of the children's already multiple caregivers? And, why is geographic consistency in the children's home environment more important than their frequent interaction with both parents?

Specifically, former Illinois revised statute Chapter 40, Section 603.1, provided that joint custody would not be awarded unless both parties agreed. Therefore, if a joint custodial arrangement was in the best interest of the children, but one party was angry that day and would not agree, the judge could not order joint custody. The judge was powerless. This is not the case under the new law.

A judge can now order a joint custodial arrangement if appropriate. Children are at times used as pawns in matrimonial proceedings, and therefore a judge must have power to enter whatever order is in the best interests for the children.

Programs for fall 1991-'92 will include two mornings for 2 1/2 to 3 year olds, Tuesday, Thursday; three mornings for 3 and 4 year olds, Monday Wednesday and Friday; and five mornings and afternoons for 4 and 5 year olds.

All children must be class age by September 1, 1991. A lunch and after school program until 2 p.m. for all morning classes is offered.

"Punctuating Parents" Guide

Lead poisoning poses special risk to children

Lead poisoning is a silent epidemic that threatens children from all walks of life. Once thought to be a special danger to children of poverty, lead is a pervasive problem that crosses all socioeconomic boundaries.

Found in paint, plumbing, air and soil, it is a permanent environmental problem that the American Academy of Pediatrics has labeled "one of the most significant hazards facing young children."

An estimated three to four million children in the United States may be exposed to environmental sources of lead.

While poor, inner city children are most at risk, due to exposure to the deteriorating, older housing in which many of them live, any child may face the possible consequences of lead exposure. Exposure to lead is also a problem of suburban children whose parents buy and renovate older homes.

Children are more susceptible to lead poisoning than are adults because they can ingest lead more easily and their growing bodies can absorb lead more easily. Children with nutritional deficiencies, especially in iron, zinc and calcium, are especially prone to absorbing lead into their systems.

Prolonged exposure to lead can lead to hearing impairment, kidney damage, stunted growth, attention disorders, lowered IQ scores, brain damage, convulsions, coma or death.

Children exposed to lower levels frequently have few or no symptoms. In chronic cases of lead poisoning, symptoms may be similar to other illnesses, making diagnosis difficult.

Anemia is the main symptom of chronic lead poisoning; anemia can be detected through blood tests. Paleness, fatigue and frequent infections for no apparent reason may be signs of anemia. Other symptoms include dizziness, loss of balance, poor growth—due partly to loss of appetite, irritability, joint pain, headaches, stomach aches and behavior problems.

The highest concentrations of lead are found in lead-based paints, as well as from the house dust and paint chips that come from deteriorating painted surfaces. Other sources include soil near industrial areas and expressways where leaded products have been used, and air-borne lead.

Water is often carried through metal pipes containing lead. In hard water areas, calcium carbonate often collects on the inside of the pipes and forms a shield, keeping the lead from coming into contact with the water. Softened water offers less protection.

Lead is also found in glazed and ceramic containers that are not well-sealed; these can deteriorate when exposed to acidic foods like tomatoes. Antique pewter and lead crystal, especially crystal pieces manufactured in South and Central America, also may contain high concentrations of lead that may be harmful over time. And some imported cosmetics and toys use lead paints.

Once lead gets into a child's body, it never can be eliminated completely. It's a problem more easily prevented than treated. According to the Illinois Department of Public Health, children's lead levels should be regularly screened through the age of six, as part of an annual preventive health exam including blood and urine tests.

Treatment is as much a challenge as detection. Children diagnosed with lead poisoning require close medical supervision; however, the effects frequently are irreversible and treatment can be a painful process, requiring hospitalization.

Preventing or eliminating a child's exposure to lead is the best of all cures. Parents should inspect their homes for peeling paint and have the paint analyzed to see if it contains lead. If it does, remove the paint, including all its dust and residue, promptly. Check with your local health department and family physician or pediatrician for more information on the incidence of lead in your area.

Misericordia has set up a "hot line" to handle calls from people who would like to help out. If you would like to coordinate volunteers in your town, organize an intersection in the City of Chicago, or simply "tag" for a few hours, please call (312) 508-KIDS.

It's never too early to plan for the future!

When it comes to investing for your retirement an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) continues to offer important advantages.

Here's why:

- You may deposit any amount up to $2000. You may still be eligible to make full or partial tax deduction for your deposit.
- One of the primary benefits of an IRA remains intact: The money your IRA earns, continues to grow tax deferred, which means it grows faster than if held in a similar investment outside the IRA.
- Finally, unlike many investments, an IRA can be opened for as little as $250.

-Special Penalty Provisions Apply-

To learn more about an IRA, call or visit our customer service department at the First National Bank of Niles today.

Telephone cables ...

vised a temporary repair by stringing the cables across Kirk using LeMonier's tree as a telephone pole, but during the heavy winds of two weeks ago, the plastic cable ties holding the make-shift repair gave way and the cables and splice blocks came tumbling down on LeMonier's parkway where they have remained since.

LeMonier contacted the village about the potential danger involved in leaving the cables in their present position, but was told he would have to advise the street-work contractor about the situation.

The contractor's office told him they could not help and he should notify the telephone company. After finally getting through to the right party at the phone company, LeMonier was promised the matter would be attended to on Wednesday, April 3. When no one called up from the phone company by Thursday, LeMonier contacted them once

Also, board members voted to purchase a maintenance agreement for a high volume line printer, originally costing $6,000. The agreement will be in the amount of $672 and is expected to increase by about $80 a year.

Again, an agreement with National-Louis University and District 63 will provide the university with clinical and student teaching opportunities for both undergraduate and graduate students beginning at the time of board approval.

About 21 policies were considered as being new, revised or renewed, according to recommendations by the Policies Committee. After first reading last Tuesday they will be placed on display for possible adoption Tuesday, April 23.

Simunovic is licensed in Norridge to sell revolvers, pistols, rifles and shotguns, according to a Chicago police spokesman. An undercover policeman allegedly made two purchases of fully automatic weapons within five months from Simunovic's business.

An interesting irony to these choices is that Nick Blase, the consummate political party man, has made excellent choices through the recent years. His present village board is probably the most talented and knowledgeable village board Niles has ever had.

The people serving on caucuses were usually the same people who previously served. They would be representatives from homeowners groups, Lions Clubs, Chamber of Commerce members and other associations in the community. The same names would pop up at each succeeding caucus meeting. One year a representative would serve from a homeowners' group and the next year from the Lions Club. Thus, the same people would choose the candidates who inevitably won school elections.

The vote of the electorate merely rubber-stamped the caucus choices. Subsequently, the same people moving around from one organization to another would up being the choosers for the electorate in the every-other year school elections.

How different was this caucus choosing from the choices made by a political party? The party normally would interview candidates and then make their choices. As the political party dominated more and more elections, their nominated choices became the choice for election. Caucus members' candidates seldom lost. Thus, the caucus-selection process took over the role of the electorate. Whoever was chosen by the caucus would win the election. Candidates running against caucus candidates had little chance of winning.

Would a caucus system for village elections give us better representation than we have today? Perhaps. And perhaps not.

Obviously, the troops in the community seem to be content with what they now have. And whether we like it or not, we've always believed the wisdom of the masses is preferable over the choices of the few.

We would like to see new people get involved in the political process. And we'd like to see more people take an interest in electing officials. But all things considered, we rather like the process of making our own choices, even if those choices may come out second in the race.

Schools back tax change...

Blase noted, "Our thing primarily is sales tax."

Given a choice between a $1 million Wal-Mart building and a manufacturer valued at $20 million Blase said he would choose the Wal-Mart "because more money would be coming to us out of sales tax."

"Isn't this just another example of our confusing tax system," commented Morton Grove Finance Director Spiro Hountalas. "Anytime commercial properties are under assessment it places a burden on other taxpayers."

"We're (Morton Grove) going to get the same amount of money from property taxes, regardless," Hountalas explained relative to the fact that schools levy at a rate, whereas municipalities level taxes in a total dollar amount, distributed over the entire taxing base.

District 71 Superintendent Eugene Zaleski praised the legislation as well, distinguishing his district with those who are taxing at their highest allowable rate.

"I think it's an excellent bill. We would never know if a company's tax rate was subject to review otherwise," Zaleski said.

Supporters hope to get the legislation enacted before the June 30 recess.

Schools plan 'Adult Night School'

The Niles West Parent Teacher Student Association and Niles North's Viking Volunteers/PTSA are sponsoring a spring program meeting called "Adult Night School" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 11 in the library at Niles North, 9800 Lawler Ave., Skokie.

The program for parents of eighth graders and high school students will include a series of three mini-seminars, of which participants will be able to attend two. The seminars include eating disorders, AIDS and student medication.

For more information, contact Sharon Wolf-Georges (708) 674-6625.

Election returns...

about 30 percent of the usual, he estimated, but higher than in 1987, a comparable election year with no township offices at stake.

Write-in candidates Carol Panek and Mary Marusek gained a total of 1,026 votes, according to the official canvass.

April 7, Panek said the write-in campaign was "Worth it...we dealt with each situation as it came up, (after) being taken off the ballot...it was an uphill fight."

She believes the stylus method of voting is "...not geared for write-in candidates...some people had never done it before; some places didn't even have pencils...I'm told under 100 ballots were rejected."

For an effective campaign, three or four workers would be needed in each precinct, she said. She and Marusek had 20 workers and they concentrated on poll watching and checking ballot tapes.

Will Panek try again in '93? She answered "Who knows?...if the opportunity's there...but not as a write-in... Some people say please don't give up."

Panek's fellow write-in candidate, Mary Marusek, has not decided whether she will seek public office again. She said "...the response we got indicates a need in the community for some alternative and some discussion; that process has to continue. We knew it was very difficult; we gave the option to vote (to those who would)...it would have been very different if we were on the ballot. People went to a lot of effort to write in." Unsuccessful candidate Kathy Nosalik left for California the morning after the election and was not due back in Niles until April 10, after The Bugle deadline.

Candidate Betty Marie Beech said she worked hard for her candidacy, but "...didn't make it." Would she try again? "Sure. You can't keep a good Irishman down...it was a fair fight."

Prior to the election, Beech stood outside a Jewel store soliciting votes, she said, and election day found her performing the same job she has for 12 years, serving as an election judge in an unincorporated part of Des Plaines.

She hopes she has brought seniors' concerns to the fore, especially her pet project, a walking machine to facilitate seniors' exercising at Niles Trident Center.

Veteran Trustee Bart Murphy, initially appointed to the Board of trustees, was elected for his fourth term April 2. He and Trustee Jeffrey Arnold were greeting voters in front of the polling place at 8301 N. Harlem Ave. in the 27 degree temperatures at 6 a.m. election day.

Murphy told The Bugle he had rung doorbells in precinct 8 which turned in the largest vote totals.

Murphy said he did not know whether the 3,075 votes earned by female candidates, collectively, indicated the electorate wants more women on the village board.

He feels voters have their choices on the qualifications of candidates, not their genders. Mayor Blase also came out a winner when candidates from his Leadership With Economy party won re-election. He confirmed he expected party candidates to be working the polls election day.

He said "They understand it's part of the job. All (of them) work the precincts...people like that." When he is a candidate, he does the same, Blase noted, "I'm out there beating the drums, not sitting behind a desk somewhere."

Pisa delegates...

Committee, including a stop at the half-scale replica of Pisa's Leaning Tower, which stands at 6300 W. Touhy Ave. on YMCA property.

The Pisa visit, meant to cement the two communities' sister city relationship, has been re-scheduled several times due to various political and scheduling conflicts. Owing to the health of one of the principle Pisa delegates, it will not coincide with the international Sister City convention, to be held in Chicago in late summer.

Just as Pisa's marble landmark symbolizes that city, the concrete model has become the pictorial symbol for Niles, notes a representative of the Leaning Tower YMCA, featured on telephone books and used in candid photos by visitors from various countries and all over the U.S.

"Anytime someone needs a physical symbol for Niles, they tend to use that tower," the Y's Jim Koehler commented in an interview last fall.

Hoped-for renovations - estimated to cost at least $300,000 and including $50,000 for landscaping - will not be completed in time for the visit. The tower's facade is slowly crumbling and once-glorious Italian tiles which line the steps are chipped and faded.

"Unlike the real tower, ours is more porous and more susceptible to moisture damage," Koehler explained.

Both the committee to renovate the Leaning Tower and the Sister City Committee are from the private sector, although the Village of Niles has appointed Business Development Director Ralph Bast as village liaison.

That latter committee has raised more than $15,000 to entertain the Italian delegation, which will include both the former and current mayors of Pisa.

That committee is also offering commemorative sweatshirts and T-shirts. For information, call Judith Tritz at 647-0400 during business hours.
