Hospice to collaborate with Rush

Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Medical Center, as a community-based health care system, should have the primary responsibility of addressing the needs of its service area. If it were to contract with outside sources to provide hospice services, it would remove itself from the community it serves and would further the cause of for-profit hospices. The hospice service is a unique one. Its goal is to protect the life of the dying person and to provide a dignified death. To achieve this, the hospice nurse must be available and be the focus of the care program. Rush Medical Center cannot provide this service.

Nurses address financial planning

Nurses increasingly are being called on to address the complex financial considerations that affect patients’ health care. By delivering hospice care in the home, nurses help patients and families cope with the emotional and financial challenges of caring for a dying family member. They also play a key role in developing care plans that are both effective and affordable.

Hotline offers advice on back pain

The American Chiropractic Association offers free telephone advice on back pain topics from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday. The hotline is available for public and professional use.

Resurrection to offer free foot screening

A free foot screening will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 3, in the grand lobby of the St. Vincent Hospital. The screening will be held from 2-4 p.m. and will be staffed by volunteers from the hospital. The screening will include a variety of services, including blood pressure, vision screening, and diabetes screening.

Forest schedules - parenting program

The Forest Park Public Library is offering a parenting program for parents and their children. The program will cover topics such as discipline, communication, and positive reinforcement. It will be held on the first Thursday of each month at 7 p.m., and will be led by a certified family therapist.

Holy Family names new director

Holy Family Academy, a Catholic high school for girls in Forest Park, has named Sister Mary Jane, O.S.F., as its new principal. Sister Mary Jane has served as the principal of Holy Family Academy for the past five years.
