Remembering Maine East teachers: 'There are such special people'

Three teachers employed, Judy Wehrlen, Lynn Allinder, and Donna Prokop, have taught at Maine East High School in Des Plaines for over 20 years. They say their students are the best.

Paging through their 1993 Maine East High School yearbook, which was compiled and published in 1976, seeing their names in the time tables and on the rosters is a welcome sight.

"What a former student remembers after twenty or thirty years is usually not the teacher but the people. It's a friendship. Looking through the 1966 yearbook we see Lynda, Dennis, and Bob, who all left us at Maine East High School in 1966. Many of these students have seen their friends graduate, have children, and have moved away. Yet, they all return to Maine East High School during our annual reunion," Prokop said.

The yearbook was created by English teacher Barbara Wittke who is now retired. Wittke saved all the yearbooks from Maine East High School for the years 1966 through 1976. The last yearbook is 1976, when Wittke retired.

In our community, our teachers are the key to our young people's future. Many former students return to Maine East High School for their reunion to relive the memories of their high school years. The yearbook is a way to remember our teachers and how much they mean to us.

"We remember him as, simply, one-of-a-kind. There was no teacher, in high school or college, who could match his enthusiasm for what he was teaching," said her students.

"I'd like to see Maine East bring the yearbook back," said her students. "It's the only way that people can see all the old teachers and who they were. They are each exceptional teens and we are continuing to teach English and we are struck by the examiners."

There are always will be such special people. Some are remembered for their academics and others for their extracurricular activities. There always will be such special people.

"We want students to know that the yearbook program is a great way to remember our teachers and how much they mean to us," said her students.

"We want to make sure that the yearbook program is a great way to remember our teachers and how much they mean to us," said her students.
