

From the Left Hand

by Bud Besser

Today marks 54 years since I went into the army. What's transpired during these years is mind-boggling.

In 1944 the allied invasion at Normandy changed the face of the world. During that same year Congress passed the G.I. bill which changed the face of America. One year later the atomic bomb explosion in Almgordo, New Mexico led to the ending of World War II.

In 1946 the returning G.I.s created an unprecedented history in America. A couple million of them went to college, paid for by Uncle Sam. This caused a revolution in our country. Most of us who took advantage of this federal largesse were the first in our families to go to college. This creation of tens of thousands of new engineers and doctors and scientists and teachers changed the face of America.

That same G.I. bill enabled hundreds of thousands of returning veterans the chance to buy homes for $500 down with a 4-1/2% interest mortgage. Homes meant buying new refrigerators and stoves and washing machines and furniture - it put the economy in overdrive and we began an astonishing prosperity which has continued, with a couple of glitches, for fifty years.

In 1956 President Eisenhower pushed through the Federal Aid Highway bill which created the interstate

CUB plan puts area code split on hold

The Citizens Utility Board, a well-known consumer rights group, has come up with a plan to stave off another area code change, at least for awhile.

Ameritech officials endorsed the CUB proposal May 14 that would delay the splitting of the 847 area and the creation of another area code.

CUB officials say that their "number pooling" plan will ultimately solve the numbers problem.

Niles officially opens new Village Hall

by Kathleen Quirsfeld

In an "All Niles" evening, the stately new Niles Village Administration Building at the corners of Waukegan Road and Oakton Street was the gathering spot for over 400 business owners and their families when the Village marked the official opening of the new municipal hall.

Officials from the District school boards, clergymen and women from neighboring churches and synagogues, Trustees from the Park District and Library District, Commissioners from the Village Plan Commission and Zoning Board, Trustees from the Village Board, and Mayors from neighboring suburbs were among the honored guests at the elegant welcoming party on Thursday, May 15 from 5-7 pm, Kathy Harbison of the Mayor's office said.

Mayor Nicholas Blase and his wife, Faye, were also in attendance and stopped to chat with the many prominent guests who came to visit the new hall, chat with their friends and customers, and catch up with their neighbors.

1,300 guests were invited, Kathy Barnat, Benefits Coordinator for the Village Administration, said, and 402 sent their R.S.V.P.s indicating they would be coming. "But, we're expecting a few more

Morton Grove girl loses battle with AIDS

Whitney Williams, 15, the Morton Grove girl who was diagnosed with AIDS in 1992 when she was just 10 years old, lost her battle with the deadly disease May 13.

Featured by Richard Roeper in his Chicago Sun-Times column, Whitney became an inspiration to countless numbers of children and young adults throughout the country.

Whitney was one of about 80 U.S. children with aids who was classified as NIR, No Identifiable Risk. The cause of her disease could never be determined.

25-year businessman chosen to tackle park finances and personnel problems

Niles' Joe Loverde Jr. to head troubled Niles Parks

by Kathleen Quirsfeld

Elaine Heinen, Vice President of the Niles Park District told The Bugle that a new Park Director had been chosen by the Board for the coming year.

Joe Loverde was selected for the position from 75 people who had answered an advertisement placed by the Park District for the job.

Loverde, a Niles resident, has been a businessman for 25 years and active at St. John Brebeuf Parish.

And, although he "has no recreation experience," according to Heinen, she said that he has children who are active in Park District programs. Consequently, Loverde has been around the District for many years.

Heinen said that the Board's May meeting, scheduled for May 20, would be rather interesting. She was referring to the three new Trustees (James Hynes, Charles Barbaglia, William Terpinas, Sr.)

who would be installed that night, along with Loverde as Director. But she also noted that several of the former Commissioners would be saying their farewells, which would add up to a rather busy evening for the Park District.

No guns used in Grennan Hts. melee

by Rosemary Tirio

The peace of one of the only pleasant evenings we've had this spring was shattered around 7:30 p.m. Monday at Grennan Heights Park in the 8200 block of Oketo Avenue when a fight broke out among five juvenile and two adult males over the missing juvenile sister of the girlfriend of one of the boys.

The five victims, all juvenile males from Park Ridge, became involved when the girlfriend of one of them asked him to find her 15-year-old sister who had left the family home. It is not known how long the girl was missing, but Niles police said that no missing persons report had been filed on the girl.

The sister's boyfriend and his brother, ages 15 and 16, gathered up three friends and went in search of the missing sister.

In a scenario all too reminiscent of the popular Broadway hit of the '50s, West Side Story, they found the girl sitting in a car near Grennan Heights Park with two 18-year-old males, one from Niles and one from Chicago.

Towing incident leads to battery charge

by Rosemary Tirio
 When he saw his car being towed out of the Ballard Point parking lot, 8998 Kennedy Dr. Des Plaines, around 1:15 a.m. May 18, 38-year-old Diedrich Charles Bork of Spring Grove decided to go for a ride on the wild side.

Red's Towing of Glenview had been dispatched to tow Bork's car, which displayed neither a resident sticker nor a guest pass. The truck driver drove out of the lot with Bork's vehicle in tow and entered the left turn lane facing eastbound on Golf Road waiting at a red light to turn northbound on Greenwood.

Bork came running westbound on Golf crossed Greenwood and stopped in front of the tow truck. He proceeded to punch the hood of the tow truck causing a dent and then smashed the closed driver's side window and grabbed onto the truck driver, throwing numerous punches and striking the victim in the shoulder area.

The truck driver made the left turn into northbound Greenwood with Bork hanging onto him through the smashed out window. The truck driver pulled the truck, a 1996 Ford 450 Super Duty, into the service station at Golf and Greenwood in an attempt to disengage the arrestee.

While the victim was driving, the left rear tire axle of Bork's car fell out of the towing apparatus and was dragged by the tow truck to Milwaukee Avenue and Greenwood where Bork proceeded to remove the two magnetic tow lights from the hood of his car and throw them down onto the pavement damaging them. Bork then entered his vehicle and sat in the driver's seat applying the brakes.

In the meantime, the victim had his dispatcher contact the Cook County Sheriff's Police who responded to the scene. Both the tow truck driver and Bork were treated for slight abrasions.

Bork was taken into custody and transported to the Niles Police Department where he was charged with battery and criminal damage to property.

Bork's bond was set at $1,000 and he was assigned a July 2 court date.

Operation Spring Clean Team

Spring cleaning! Ugh! The light at the end of the tunnel will shine a little quicker if you work together as a family! There will also be more time later for enjoying a movie or other family diversions. Follow these tried-and-true tips offered by Whirlpool Home Economists.

Think of spring cleaning as spring clearing! Clearing away clutter and dirt allows you and your family to be more productive.

Here are some double-duty ideas to try:

- Instead of telling the kids to get rid of the toys they don't want, go through the toy box with them. Donate the toys they no longer play with to a charity.
- While the kids are sorting toys, mom and dad can organize books.

- Straighten the linen closets and have the older children change the bed sheets.
- Get dad to pull furniture away from the walls and give the kids the feather duster to clean behind the furniture.
- Clean out the refrigerator and challenge the kids to make dinner (or a stew) from the leftovers.
- Take the whole group outside. The kids can wash the patio furniture and dad can scrub the grill.
- Attack the "junk" area of the house. Have family members assess their contributions to the "mess" and either organize the clutter or plan a garage sale. For incentive, tell the kids they can sell their junk for cash at the sale and keep the profits.

Among the many definitions of cheat listed in Webster's Dictionary is the following: "To deceive by trickery." This definition seems to aptly describe the wrench cheating technique; an unorthodox technique used by the unwary to get extra power by adding a length of pipe or other extension to the wrench handle to gain extra leverage. The trick is that the tool user is in a sense falsely telling the wrench it can do more than it was designed to do. When this is the case, something has to give and it could result in damage to the tool, damage to the fastener, injury to the tool user or all three.

The Hand Tools Institute, a trade association of American hand-tool manufacturers, says that persons using this dangerous technique, knowingly or unknowingly, are in a sense playing a game of Russian roulette and the odds are stacked against the tool user.

Simply stated, the main function of a wrench is for holding and turning nuts, bolts, cap screws, plugs and various other threaded parts. Since the threads of the product being turned act as a remorseless wedge, it is possible to strip the threads by applying excessive torque. Threads can be an integral part of costly equipment.

Here are some additional safety tips from HTI when using wrenches:

Don't cheat with wrenches

1. Select a wrench whose opening exactly fits the nut. Too large an opening can spread the jaws of a wrench. Too large a box- or socket wrench can mar or turn the corners of the nut. Exercise care in selecting inch wrenches for inch fasteners and metric wrenches for metric fasteners.
2. Never use a wrench as a hammer.
3. Always pull - never push - on a wrench and adjust your stance to prevent a fall in case something lets go.
4. To free a "frozen" nut or bolt use a striking face box wrench.
5. Always wear safety goggles when using hand tools to avoid eye injury.

Appliances on the move

Believe it or not, moving day can be tough on your appliances too. Removable parts are easily lost or damaged in the process. Whirlpool Home Economists compiled a few precautions to make sure that the appliances arrive safe and sound. These suggestions will also help make the setup faster and easier at your new location.

• Disconnect
Before disconnecting a gas-fueled appliance, contact the gas utility for assistance.

Make sure to shut off the water supply and drain all hoses before disconnecting an appliance that uses water.

• Empty out
Be sure the appliance is empty. Then, gather and wrap all removable parts. Label the parts so they can be reinstalled properly. Pack in a sturdy box, making sure all the parts are kept together. If you still have the installation instructions, pack them with the appliance parts for use in your new home.

Clean the interior and dry thoroughly. While the appliance is disconnected, use the opportunity

Where there's a will, there's a way

Nothing's more frustrating than being in the middle of cooking a huge family dinner and finding out your oven isn't heating to capacity. After you cool off, Whirlpool Home Economists suggest following the advice issued by the Major Appliance Consumer Action Program.

To get maximum results and help solve your appliance problems, you need to stay close to the following guidelines:

- Clearly describe your current problem. Use facts.
- Clearly state how the manufacturer can make things right.

to clean the exterior, particularly areas that can't normally be reached. This will also make the move a little less messy.

Tape the power cord and any water hoses to the appliance. Secure doors, lids, drawers, etc. with a quality strapping tape that won't damage the finish or leave a sticky residue.

Finally, if possible, use the original packing materials so the appliance is properly braced.

Filth and bacteria in flood water contaminates food

Most food that has come into contact with flood water is contaminated and should be discarded.

If the kitchen has become flooded, it is crucial to inspect all food and determine which foods to discard and which to save. Flood waters may carry silt, raw sewage, oil or chemical wastes. Filth and disease-causing bacteria in flood water will make food unsafe to eat.

Foods can become contaminated even when they are not fully immersed in flood water. Water may have dripped on food products or seeped into them.

As a general guideline, discard these food products that have come into contact with flood water: opened containers and packages, unopened jars and bottles, containers of spices, seasoning and flavorings, flour, grains, rice, sugar and coffee in canisters or bags, and all foods in paper, cloth, fiber or cardboard boxes, even if the contents feel dry. This includes "sealed" packages of crackers, cookies, or mixes within a larger paper box.

Commercially-canned foods that are dented, bulging, rusty or leaking must also be thrown away. Also discard cans which have been tossed about and are found far from their normal storage spot. The seams on these cans may have been weakened or their seals broken, causing contamination or spoilage.

Also discard home-canned foods, commercially-bottled carbonated beverages, foil or cellophane packages, all fresh fruits and vegetables, and fresh meat, fish and poultry.

Basically the only foods that can be saved are commercially-canned foods that are undamaged by the flood. All cans must be washed and sanitized before they are opened, however.

To disinfect cans, follow these directions, remove the labels, which may harbor bacteria. Next, wash cans in a strong detergent solution with a scrub brush and remove all silt.

After washing cans, immerse them for 15 minutes in a cold (60-70 degrees F) chlorine solution. If the chlorine bleach contains 2 percent chlorine, add 2 teaspoons bleach to 1 quart of water. If the bleach contains 4 percent chlorine, use 1 teaspoon to 1 quart of water. For 6 percent chlorine bleach, use 1/2 teaspoon for 1 quart of water.

After soaking for 15 minutes, remove containers from the solution and allow to air-dry before opening. For additional safety, thoroughly cook the canned food before eating it.

The basic recommendation about food safety applies following a flood: if in doubt, throw it out. Don't risk becoming ill from eating contaminated food.

Campaign for Better Health Care

House Bill 626, the Managed Care Reform Act, passed by the Illinois House on April 25th with 73 votes in favor and only 45 opposed, was assigned to a subcommittee of the State Senate Insurance committee for further "study" rather than passed out for a full Senate vote this spring. "We are outraged that the Senate has delayed action to protect consumers in managed care plans. Even more outrageous is the for-profit HMO/Managed Care industry's ability to so thoroughly control this process," said Jim Duffett, Executive Director of the Illinois Campaign for Better Health Care, Illinois' largest grassroots health care coalition.

House Bill 626, if passed, would establish comprehensive rights for consumers in managed care plans in Illinois. The bill, referred to by consumer advocates as the 'Consumers' Bill of Rights in Managed Care', would establish enforceable standards for quality, choice, access, confidence, public information, consumer representation, and other protections such as an expedited independent grievance procedure. "House Bill 626 has the overwhelming support of Illinois residents around the state. Once again, consumer interests struggle to compete with the lobbying power of a wealthy and influential industry," Duffett continued.

Despite a packed room of supporters at a meeting of the Senate Insurance Committee today and thousands of phone calls made to State Senators in support of HB 626, the 6 Republican members of the Insurance committee voted to move the bill into subcommittee to be studied this summer. The 4 Democratic members of the committee voted against this motion to delay consideration of the proposal. Both State Senator Denny Jacobs (D-East Moline) and State Senator Cullerton (D-Chicago) made motions for a vote to move the bill out of committee today. But the chair, Madigan (R-Lincoln) overruled them before calling a vote to assign the bill to the subcommittee. "It is very unfortunate that the State Senate leadership did not have the same bi-partisan interest as the Illinois House in protecting consumers from the worst abuses of managed care," said Duffett.

"Members of the Insurance committee who voted to delay the bill for further study aren't interested in the rights of consumers, they are taking directions from the deep-pocketed lobbyists of the HMO/Managed Care corporations in Illinois. Intense debate on consumer protections in managed care has occurred in the Illinois General Assembly for three years now.

The Campaign for Better Health Care and other advocates are calling for public hearings around the state this summer on HMO/Managed Care Reform.

Perio disease may provide clues to other maladies

Most Americans know that red, inflamed gums indicate the presence of periodontal disease, the condition that occurs when bacteria in plaque create toxins that irritate the gums and break down the attachment of gum tissues to the teeth.

But inflamed gums also can provide important clues to conditions in other parts of the body.

"For example, any dentist can tell when there is a smoker in the dental chair," explains Erwin Barrington, DDS, a periodontist who practices in Chicago's loop. "Not only do we see red, puffy gums in smokers, but we also encounter bad breath and see lesions or white patches. As dentists, it is our duty to tell patients that smoking not only can cause oral cancer but can contribute to heart and lung disease among others."

Dr. Barrington cites numerous examples in which periodontal tissue serves as a clue to other events in the body.

• Pregnancy or use of oral contraceptives increase hormone levels which can cause gum tissues to react more sensitively to the toxins in plaque and accelerate growth of certain bacteria. The gums are more likely to become red, tender and swollen and to bleed easily.

• Systemic diseases, such as AIDS or diabetes, can lower the tissues' resistance to infection, making periodontal diseases more severe.

• Poor diet may cause periodontal disease to progress more rapidly or increase the severity of the condition, according to some researchers. There also is some evidence that an unbalanced diet makes mouth tissues less resistant to infection.

Employee Business Expenses

by Robert W. Brock
IRS District Director

This month I'll cover employee business expenses. As an employee, you may be able to deduct some of your unreimbursed business expenses on your tax return. To be deductible, the expense must be:

- paid or incurred during your tax year.
- for carrying on your trade or business as an employee, and
- an ordinary and necessary business expense.

An expense is ordinary if it's common and accepted in the type of trade or business you're in. The expense is necessary if it's appropriate and helpful in your trade or business.

Generally, unreimbursed expenses that meet the ordinary and necessary requirements are deductible. They are deducted on Schedule A of your Form 1040 under "Miscellaneous Expenses."

The following are just an example of the types of employee business expenses you might be able to deduct: business liability and malpractice insurance premiums; depreciation on a computer or cellular telephone if your employer required you to use it in your work; dues to the chamber of commerce if the membership helps you do your job; dues to professional societies; and education that is employment related.

You may also be able to deduct job-search expenses in your present occupation; medical examinations required by your employer; subscriptions to professional journals and work-related trade magazines; travel, transportation, entertainment and gift expenses related to your work; and union dues.

The following expenses are not deductible as employee business expenses: lunches with co-workers; meals while working late; commuting expenses; and illegal bribes and kickbacks.

You can claim the amount of expenses that are more than 2% of your adjusted gross income.

The 2% limitation is applied after you apply any other deduction limit, such as the 50% limit on business-related meals and entertainment.

If you have a physical or mental disability that limits your being employed, or substantially limits one or more of your major life activities, such as performing manual tasks, walking, speaking, breathing, learning, and working, you can deduct your impairment-related work expenses.

Physical or mental impairment-related expenses for attendant care service and other expenses connected with your place of work, that are necessary for you to be able to work, are deductible. They are not subject to the 2% limitation.

After you complete Form 2106 or 2106EZ, you report your deductible employee business expenses on line 20 of Schedule A (Form 1040). You must use Form 2106, Employee Business Expenses, if any of the following apply:

- 1) You were not reimbursed by your employer for your expenses.

- 2) Your reimbursement was less than your expenses.
- 3) You were reimbursed and claim car expenses on a vehicle for which you previously used the actual expense method to compute expenses.

Do not file Form 2106 if none of your expenses are deductible because of the 2% limit on miscellaneous itemized deductions.

Remember, good recordkeeping will make it easier when you sit down to prepare your tax return. You can get more information in Publication 552, Record-keeping for Individuals.

Both publications can be found on the IRS Homepage on the Internet at <www.irs.ustreas.gov>. Or you can have them sent directly to your home by calling 1-800-829-3676.

Exploring Niles' History: St. Hedwig's Part I

A generation may have passed, but the area of Harlem and Niles was well known by Toulis residents in the area. The imposing buildings, the spacious grounds, the arrangement itself gave an impression of a bastion, protecting the buildings and all who resided there from the outside world easily encroaching. Those who lived within these buildings may have needed this type of security and serenity. For more than fifty years, St. Hedwig's was home to children as young as two and as old as nineteen who were without family to care for them. Officially incorporated under the names "The Polish Manual Training School for Boys" and "St. Hedwig's Industrial School for Girls," some 7,000 youngsters resided there between 1911 and 1961.

After St. Hedwig's was officially closed, the buildings were used by Niles College until 1994 when the announcement was made that the archdiocese of Chicago would be selling the complex. These who have travelled in the area more recently have seen the buildings that were St. Hedwig's reduced to rubble about two months ago and large condominium and apartment buildings rise in their place.

The buildings may be gone but the meaning of St. Hedwig's lives on in the thoughts and memories of many who lived on the premises. Now calling themselves the St. Hedwig's Alumni Association, they publish a newsletter and meet at various times of the year. A few months ago they met with some of their teachers and counselors, the Felician Sister, at the Niles Historical Society.

Photos, postal cards, and other memorabilia of St. Hedwig's were introduced by Marilyn Brown, president of the Niles Historical Society. Several Felician Sisters, who taught at the home, spoke of recollections of life at St. Hedwig's thirty and more years ago.

Tom Suchomski, Class of '48 listened with rapt attention. He was engrossed and appeared to be making mental notes of the presentations. Under his arm Suchomski was carrying "An Historical Study of St. Hedwig's Home, An Institution for the Care of Dependent Children, Archdiocese of Chicago" written by the Felician Sister, Mary Dulcissima Malolepszy, for her thesis to receive a degree of Master of Social Service at Loyola University in 1945.

As integral a part as St. Hedwig's was in Suchomski's life in the 1940's, it was again assuming an increasingly major influence in his daily activities.

After hearing of the sale of the property and its imminent demolition, Suchomski found himself attracted to the St. Hedwig's grounds as the bulldozers and trucks knocked down and hauled away chunks and pieces of the buildings that once were St. Hedwig's.

Returning home to Western Springs, Suchomski began a journal. He would weave recollections of a young elementary-age student with his thoughts almost fifty years later. He found himself returning more and more frequently. As each building was levelled, the pages in the journal increased.

Suchomski entered into discussions with the demolition crew about preserving the large cross atop the main building The Niles Historical Museum was also in negotiations to preserve the cornerstone.

However, as Suchomski was making the visits he took along his camera. The last days of each of the buildings that once were St. Hedwig's Suchomski preserved on film.

The Niles Historical Museum, thanks to Suchomski's foresight, was able to obtain a copy of Malolepszy's study and other items relating to St. Hedwig's. Perhaps, in the future it may receive a copy of the journal kept by Suchomski. It would, no doubt, serve well those interested in learning how the past, no matter how distant, remains a living explanation of who and why all of us are what we are today.

Next week we will explore some of the many activities of The St. Hedwig's Alumni Association which come as close to "living history" as any group one is likely to encounter.

Recycling dead batteries helps environment

With a growing number of Americans concerned about protecting the environment, more are recycling their old batteries and not just throwing them away. This is particularly important in the case of the nickel cadmium batteries used in cellular phones which can pose a big environmental hazard.

To help consumers in their recycling effort here are some battery information and recycling tips from the experts at Ameritech:

- A nickel-cadmium battery can be recharged about 500 to 700 times, on average one to two years, before it needs to be replaced.
- It is time to recharge your battery when your call clarity starts to diminish or you can no longer complete a call.
- It's time to recycle your battery and purchase a new one when recharging it fails to restore clear, uninterrupted service.
- Although there are times when cellular phone users think their phones are not working correctly, it's often the battery and not the phone.
- Customers can charge their batteries/phones in their cars by using a cigarette lighter adapter. This can provide continuous talk time while charging the battery in your car. The adapter will not only restore the battery's usage but also will not overcharge.

To encourage people to recycle their used cellular phone batteries, Ameritech Cellular and Paging has designed a Battery Drop Stop. The "Battery Drop Stop" program is an opportunity for Ameritech customers, as well as all cellular users, to preserve the environment where they live, shop and work and properly dispose of their used cellular phone batteries," said Herb Hribar, Ameritech Cellular & Paging president.

All costs associated with implementing the program are being absorbed by Ameritech Cellular and Paging and the Rechargeable Battery Recycling Corporation. The batteries will be recycled at a state-of-the-art recycling facility in Pennsylvania.

The nickel and cadmium are separated there and the nickel is used to make stainless steel and the cadmium is used to manufacture new batteries.

To find the nearest Ameritech Battery Drop Stop, call 1-800-MOBILE-1 (in Missouri, call 1-800-MOBILE-4).

Teacher Tenure: Why?

Teacher Tenure is in the news today. We hear of stories of teachers who cannot be fired because of tenure. Some people feel that tenure is nothing more than a perk giving teachers a guaranteed job for life. They feel that if we eliminate tenure all of the problems in education would magically disappear.

Others feel tenure is almost sacred, that it is the bastion of protection for teachers' under siege and that teachers cannot afford to give up any prerogatives they now have. Others claim that the attack on teachers is a smoke screen being used by those whose real objective is to undermine public education.

PLAIN SPEAKING with BILL BLAINE, seen on TCI channel 65/68, features a discussion of Teacher Tenure: Why? through June 1st.

Join Bill as he discusses teacher tenure with Shirley Forpe, President, American Federation of Teachers, Local 1211 and Dr. Vicki Markavitch, Superintendent of High School District 219, Niles Township.

PLAIN SPEAKING can be seen on TCI channel 65/68 on Tuesday, 5:30 p.m., Wednesday 11:30 a.m. and Sundays at 6 p.m.

Adoption education needed in high schools

When more than two hundred high school sophomores were asked how much they know about placing a child for adoption, nearly 65 percent responded "not very much" or nothing at all!

The survey - conducted by The Cradle, a private, not-for-profit, non-sectarian, state licensed adoption agency located in Evanston - polled 221 students during a recent high school health fair.

"Adoption has changed drastically in recent years," explained Pam Prosch, Director of Outreach for the Evanston-based agency. "Four out of ten students we questioned were not aware of open adoption." Open adoption allows birth parents to select and meet the family that will adopt their child. As the child grows up, birth parents can stay in touch with the child they placed through letters and photographs, or even phone calls and get-togethers.

Of the students surveyed, more than 70 percent reported that knowing about open adoption makes them even more supportive of their peers who may be considering placing a child for adoption.

The survey results also show that 85 percent of the students asked felt that adoption was an appropriate topic for health class. However, nine out of ten of those responded that they never had a classroom presentation on adoption.

Prosch continued, "Many high schools have been teaching students about AIDS prevention and birth control as part of health classes for years now. It's time for school administrators and health class instructors to seriously consider including adoption as part of their health class curriculum too."
