Discrimination charged in MG motel closing

By Rozomary Tiris

The Interfaith Housing Center of the Back to Basics Group filed a lawsuit against the village of Mundelein, alleging that the motel was closed because of discrimination against minorities.

The lawsuit claims that the motel was closed due to the village's policy of not allowing residents to stay in the motel, even though they pay the same rates as the majority of the population.

The motel is located on the corner of River and Washington Streets, and the group is seeking compensatory and punitive damages.
