Buglebits.....

Baseball great Ted Williams said on Monday night TV Mark McGwire's home runs aren't just home runs. He said when he hits the ball he "crushes the ball." The 250 pound hitter doesn't get any homers which just barely elude the outfielder's glove. Williams also discounted today's baseball might be a bit juiced up which accounts for so many 50-home run hitters this year. Former Dodgers' manager Tom LoSorda thought the expanded major leagues have diluted the amount of good pitching in the major leagues and did contend the ball is wound up a little tighter which contributes to this year's home run barrage.

.....The TV networks, always seeking a way to hype their programs, are exploiting the one year anniversary of Princess Diana's death to increase their viewership. Once again, while they distort the newsworthiness of this event, they're ignoring the one year anniversary of the death of Mother Teresa. While the Princess Diana story is a lot sexier the Mother Teresa story is much more significant.

Area police register local sex offenders

by Rosemary Tirio

In accordance with the Sex Offender Registration and Community Notification Act as amended July 24, 1997, six Niles residents convicted of sex crimes against victims under the age of 18 have been registered in the village.

Sgt. Roger Wilson said that all have properly registered with the state, Cook County and Niles. "People [offenders] are reporting, that's a good thing. The community's being notified, that's a good thing," Wilson said. "Hopefully the law will do some good."

Registration of sex offenders has been state law for two years. Convicted offenders have 10 days to inform local authorities that they have moved into their jurisdiction. They must register every year for 10 years after their conviction. Failure to do so results in further charges and a court appearance, according to Sgt. Roger Wilson, Niles Police.

Vets, historians push to preserve Hangar One

by Rosemary Tirio

Before the memory of the glory days of the Glenview Naval Air Station when it was an important training center for thousands of World War II aircraft-carrier pilots is ground up with the abandoned runways currently being removed to make way for civilian development of the huge tract, a group composed of 400 historians and veterans has banded together to preserve Hangar One as a veterans memorial and aviation and science museum.

Although the Hangar One Foundation, as the group is known, has not yet received the endorsement of the Village of Glenview, local authority for the redevelopment of the abandoned base, they have been invited to

Mayor turns down $10,000 offer to beautify tower location at Milwaukee and Howard

Blase stands firm on AT&T tower opposition

by Rosemary Tirio

Mayor Nicholas B. Blase is standing firm in his opposition to the AT&T cellular phone tower at the intersection of Milwaukee Avenue and Howard Street, which technically lies within the bounds of the city of Chicago.

Despite the giant communications firm's offer of a $10,000 grant to beautify the 92-foot tower, Blase maintains that the tower is too dangerous to remain in its present location.

The third and perhaps most defiant in the series of protest signs to be erected on the Niles side of the intersection since the tower was built nearly two years ago in September 1996, reads, "AT&T Is Offering Us Money To Beautify This Dangerous Tower. How Would Beauty Make This Tower Less Dangerous? Keep Your Money, AT&T. Nicholas B. Blase, Mayor of Niles."

Blase continues to oppose the tower, beautified or not, because of its proximity to the busy intersection where it might be struck by vehicles posing what Blase considers an unnecessary peril to persons and property.

In a phone interview, Blase said that he had sent a photo to AT&T of an accident that occurred in the intersection about two months ago in which an auto ended up at the base of the tower.

"A car was o.k.," Blase said, "but if it had been a truck, the tower would have been going [down]."

"I don't know if it's just obstinacy or if they [AT&T] don't want to look like they're giving in," Blase said were some reasons

AT&T is continuing its refusal to relocate the tower to a safer spot.

Blase suggested that the firm's reluctance to move the tower might be due to a long-term lease they had signed with the owner of the property. "It might be more expensive to break the lease than to move the tower," Blase suggested. "We don't know who the landlord is or how much they paid for it [the lease]," Blase added.

Blase termed the fence AT&T has constructed around the small island of land supporting the giant tower "ugly," likening it to the stockade fences used in the days of the original settlement of the area.

AT&T did make an inquiry about moving the tower across the street where it might have

Emerson Middle School gets A+ for opening on time, under budget

by Rosemary Tirio

For the first time in 15 years, school bells were heard ringing again on the site of the old Emerson Junior High, abandoned in 1983 and replaced by the shiny, all-new Prairie-style Emerson Middle School that opened Friday to 684 students in the Niles-Park Ridge Elementary District 64.

The new school will serve sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders living in northern Park Ridge and southwest Niles. The old Emerson Junior High served only seventh and eighth grades, as did the Lincoln Middle School.

District Supt. Fred Schroeder said that last year, Lincoln Middle School had 804 seventh- and eighth-grade students. This year only 630 students in sixth, seventh and eighth grades attend the building, an enrollment reduction of 175.

At the new Emerson Middle School, 684 sixth-, seventh- and eighth graders are in attendance.

"Exactly what we wanted," Schroeder said. The new building has provided relief to the formerly overcrowded Lincoln School as well as to the five district elementary schools where 20 classrooms, formerly used by sixth-graders, have been freed up to provide more room for the other grades, Schroeder said.

Schroeder said that before the opening of the new Emerson building, music classes had to be taught on the auditorium stage, and some art and special education classes had to be conducted in school hallways in four of the district elementary schools, which he described as "badly overcrowded."

The other schools are Franklin, Field, Washington, Carpetner and Roosevelt. Another building, the Jefferson school, which serves students in non-mainstreamed special education programs, will not be affected by the new building, Schroeder said.

"On time and under budget," was Schroeder's comment about the construction of the new building, which he said was built to last 100 years.

Schroeder credited the Eagle Team, named for the old Emerson Junior High mascot, composed of a few parents from the facilities committee, some principals of district schools and the district's buildings and grounds supervisor, Jim Wuerffel, for the efficient completion of the school's construction.

Costly change orders were kept to a minimum by the team, Schroeder said. While 4.7 percent of the budget for a construction project the size of the Emerson Middle School would normally be spent on change orders, only 3.5 percent of the actual budget was spent for revisions of the original plan, which accounts for some of the $1.5 million saved on the project. The new school building ended up costing $19.3 million, not the original $20.8 million originally projected.

Schroeder also credits the Bovis Construction Management firm with keeping costs down. Instead of hiring a general contractor, Bovis bid out 34 separate contracts. "They were able to get the best deal on each one," Schroeder said, which added up to a net saving of $1 million, he estimated.

Schroeder also patted the backs of Greenassociates, the district's architect, because "they knew what we wanted and expected," Schroeder said. "They've built 10 middle schools in the last 15 years," Schroeder estimated. "They know the best architectural practices for a middle school."

Schroeder said there was excellent coordination between the school district, the architect, the teachers and the construction management firm.

He also singled out Wuerffel, who formerly taught industrial technology in parochial schools in Chicago, for special credit in the project. "He [Wuerffel] understands both the teachers' world and the construction world," Schroeder said.

Schroeder said that the new building was built with flexibility and future as well as present needs in mind. Sixteen classrooms are connected by collapsible walls and the entire building is sound proof and air conditioned.

"The electrical system and cabling system can handle at least the next two to three generations of computer communications, 10 to 12 years," Schroeder estimated. "Beyond that point, we will probably go to wireless," he said.

Schroeder described the new school's laboratory facilities as "high-school quality." "No curriculum will be too rigorous for us to provide actual lab experiences [for the students]," Schroeder said.

The design team also considered what Schroeder described as "ease of community access" in planning the building. The multipurpose room, which may be used by community groups for meetings, is also equipped with a stage for plays and concerts, Schroeder said.

"A set of policies" will govern who will be able to use the facility and what fees will be charged, Schroeder said.

Rest room facilities will be accessible from outside the building for the convenience of outdoor gym classes and students and community members involved in after-school and weekend activities, Schroeder said.

Schroeder praised the construction of the building. "It was not built as a design winner, but we built in all the educational basics in a state-of-the-art way, and that goes down to the actual footings," he said.

"Ten thousand pounds of compaction on oversize footings will make the building stable for the next 100 years," Schroeder said. "It really is built. If a tornado comes, I hope I'm in that building," he added.

Residents who live near the newly completed building seem to be very pleased with it, Schroeder said, because the value of their property has just gone up, he said. "Realtors are pitching homes in the area as having walking access to Emerson Middle School," Schroeder said.

Resurrection selected Employer of the Year

Goodwill Industries of Metropolitan Chicago has named Resurrection Medical Center its Employer of the Year for 1998, for its record of placing the social service agency's graduates in staff positions. Resurrection Health Care officials will be given the Employer of the Year Award at Goodwill Industries' second annual Golf Outing in September.

Many of the graduates now employed at Resurrection, who hold various positions in the Environmental Services and Laundry Departments, are hearing impaired and have completed Goodwill's program that is geared to meet their unique training needs. In addition to providing job-specific training, graduates who are hearing impaired also receive case management services from Goodwill staff proficient in American sign language, on the job training and life skills training.

Terrence Ray of Chicago was Goodwill Industries' first graduate to join Resurrection Medical Center. Ray, who is hearing impaired, joined the hospital two and a half years ago and now works full-time in the hospital's Laundry Department. Ray, who can perform nearly any duty within the Laundry Department, uses a slight modification to the department's industrial washing and drying equipment which signals the end of the washing and drying phases. According to Giacomuzzi, a flashing light similar to those found on emergency vehicles alerts Ray when the washing and drying phases have been completed.

Goodwill Industries' second annual Golf Outing will take place on September 14 at Old Orchard Country Club in Mount Prospect. For more information about the event, call Holly Trueblood, Director of Resource Development, at 312-491-2900, extension 232.

Underground railroad guided tours offered

Individuals and groups interested in experiencing the triumph of freedom over slavery should consider participating in the Underground Railroad Tours sponsored by the Greater Alton/Twin Rivers Convention & Visitors Bureau.

Throughout September and October visitors can take a unique half-day narrated tour aboard a contemporary motor-coach. Specific tour dates include September 19, 20, 26 and 27; October 3, 4, 10 and 11; cost for the tour is $34.95. Tours begin at 9:30 a.m. and return at about 3:30 p.m. Lunch is included with the tour program. To make tour reservations call the bureau at 618-465-6676. MasterCard and Visa are accepted and reservations are required. You may also request a free brochure on the Underground Railroad tour by calling 618-465-6676.

Tour highlights include Alton, Otterville and Jerseyville locations - each documented as authentic stops along the mysterious and legendary underground railroad. Sites include the Old Rock House, College Avenue Presbyterian Church, The Alton Museum of History and Art, Elijah Lovejoy Monument, Luman Trumbull House, Lewis & Clark Community College, Enos Apartments, Rocky Ford Church, Hamilton Memorial School and Josiah White's Log Cabin.

The "railroad" was not really engines and rail cars, but rather a symbolic route taking runaway slaves northward to Canada and freedom. Because Missouri was a slave state, many slaves attempted to swim or raft across the wide Mississippi River to begin the dangerous trek through Illinois. Thousands traveled secretly up paths and roads looking for aid from sympathetic farmers and others. Secret places, known as "stations" allowed runaways to hide during the day or night so they could avoid slave-hunters.

The Greater Alton/Twin Rivers Convention & Visitors Bureau is open Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.; weekends and holidays 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. We are closed Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas day. The Visitor Center is located at 200 Piassa Street. Join us on the Internet at www.altonvb.org any time.

Marriott's Lincolnshire Theatre presents Queen of the Stardust Ballroom

Kary M. Walker, Executive Producer of the award-winning Marriott's Lincolnshire Theatre, is proud to present a new musical, Queen of the Stardust Ballroom. The production runs through October 4, 1998.

Queen of the Stardust Ballroom has a book by Jerome Kass, music by Billy Goldenberg and lyrics by Alan & Marilyn Bergman.

A lonely widow finds new life when she goes dancing at the Stardust Ballroom, meets a mailman with the soul of a poet, and falls madly in love with him.

Queen of the Stardust Ballroom is based on the true life events of book writer Jerome Kass. While attending the funeral of his mother, who had unexpectedly died in her sleep, Mr. Kass discovered a secret and almost magical side to his mother's life after she herself had become widowed.

The musical originated in a CBS television play "The Queen of the Stardust Ballroom", starring Maureen Stapleton and Charles Durning. Queen of the Stardust Ballroom aired on CBS in 1975, resulting in multiple Emmy awards for lyricist and Alan & Marilyn Bergman, composer Billy Goldenberg, cinematographer David Walsh, and choreographer Marge Champion. In addition, Jerome Kass went on to win the coveted Writers Guild of America award for television writing.

Now, 20 years later, the original creative team has been brought together again for the "opportunity to do the show the way we had always thought it should be done: closer to the original movie, using a cinematic concept and incorporating the songs that had been eliminated."

Performance Schedule:
Wednesdays at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.; *Thursdays at 8 p.m. (excluding 9/24 and 10/1); Fridays at 8 p.m.; Saturdays at 5 p.m. & 8:30 p.m.; and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

Battery

A 19-year-old tanning salon manager reported that a 22-year-old salesman in the auto dealership in the 9400 block of Milwaukee Avenue has made suggestive remarks to her on several occasions when she went to the dealership for maintenance work on the auto she purchased there.

When she went to the dealership for an appraisal of her car on Aug. 31, the offender pushed her against a car and made a remark suggesting that he would appraise the car $1,000 higher in exchange for a sexual favor.

The victim pushed the offender away, left the dealership and drove directly to the Niles Police Department to report the incident.

Niles police accompanied the victim back to the dealership where the owner explained that the offender thought the victim liked him. The victim agreed not to press charges if she did not have to deal with the offender in the future, to which the owner agreed. The matter will be dealt with internally at the dealership, the owner said.

The report was taken as a matter of record only.

District 207 to hold College Night

At a first glance, Kenyon College, a small, private college in rural Ohio with approximately 1,500 students, and the University of Southern California, a sprawling urban campus and nearly 15,000 undergraduate students, have little in common except—both will participate in the District's annual College Night next Wednesday, September 16, from 7-9 p.m. at Maine West.

District 207 students and their parents will be able to meet with representatives from more than 200 colleges and universities from all over the country. Juniors can begin the task of looking for colleges and getting an idea of where they might be interested in while seniors can finalize plans. Eager sophomore can "get their feet wet" and observe the variety of colleges to eventually research.

Local two-year colleges, as well as four-year institutions, large and small, public and private, will be represented. Military academies and a few 4-year specialty schools (art, culinary, business, etc.) will also participate. According to Verne Farrell, Maine East's career counselor, key points to consider include information about:

- entrance requirements,
- availability of financial aid,
- available curriculums,
- student body demographics,
- housing options and costs,
- school regulations and policies,
- campus security,
- use of teaching assistants,
- required courses for admission and graduation, and
- job placement services.

Students should also request information concerning campus visitations.

In addition, two financial aid meetings, which will include information about new changes in financial aid, will be held at 7:20 and 8:20 p.m. in the school's auditorium. Maine West is located at the corner of Oakton Street and Wolf Road in DesPlaines.

In addition to attending College Night Wednesday, September 16, at Maine West, juniors and seniors need to take advantage of college representatives who visit Maine East during the school day. Upperclassmen are allowed to miss class to see a college rep in the Maine East CRC if they obtain a green guidance pass to show their teacher before missing class. College rep visits begin the same week as College Night.

The Willows Academy opens computer lab

A view of the new computer lab at The Willows Academy is shown above. The Willows Academy is a private, independent college preparatory school for girls (grades 6-12). For more information, visit the school's web site at www.willows.org or call 847-824-6900.

The new computer lab at The Willows Academy in DesPlaines was officially dedicated at a ribbon cutting ceremony on Thursday, August 27. Alderman Wayne Elstner officiated while an audience of parents, faculty, staff and friends of The Willows applauded the efforts of those who had made the new lab a reality. Afterwards, guests were invited to "sign on" and explore the new software.

The lab has 24 networked terminals, several printers and a scanner. Windows '95 is the operating system and software includes microsoft Office as well as various academic programs. Computer classes will be available for all students. While basic word processing, spreadsheet and data base program knowledge will be required in the computer literacy classes, opportunities for multi-media presentations, computer animation and web page authoring will be available for those who complete the required coursework and want to learn more advanced techniques. Students will also gain familiarity with webpage browsing and designing on an intranet housed within the school as well as controlled access to the internet. "Alumnae feedback has confirmed that our technology program upgrade will help with the amount of research work required at the college level," explained Barbara Sunko, Director of The Willows.

September - an ideal time to remove thatch

Contrary to what you've been told most of your life, thatch isn't bad. However, too much thatch is bad, and that's what we need to look at.

First, the definition of thatch isn't black and white. There are as many definitions as there are types of lawns. Generally, thatch is the accumulation of dead roots and stems between the soil and turfgrass plants. It definitely is organic matter, and at times can contain some living plant material. Roots and stems contain a material called lignin that breaks down slowly. Notice that the definition does not include the word "leaves." Grass blades are composed mainly of water; during rapid growth, the leaf may contain 90-95 percent moisture. Place a leaf on the sidewalk during the summer and watch how fast it shrivels to nothing.

Thatch acts like the pad under your carpet. It cushions the turfgrass, preventing the grass crowns, where the growing point is located, from being compressed beneath your feet and the ground. Thatch acts as a thin layer of mulch, keeping the soil and moisture in. As thatch decomposes, it provides organic matter that earthworms and other beneficial soil organisms can feed on.

Problems start occurring when too much thatch is present.

When the thatch layer is greater than one inch, roots tend to migrate and stay in the loose thatch zone. It's an ideal environment for quick, easy growth. As long as the thatch stays moist, there's no problem. But when the thatch starts drying, and it dries first when the summer temperatures are hot, the grass starts wilting. Ultimately, the plants will die. Summer's temperatures, even with sufficient water in the thatch zone, can "bake" roots.

There's a greater chance of temperature extremes creating a problem, as thatch isn't the best insulator for plants growing in it. Winter injury is common.

Excess thatch can limit pesticide movement. Weed and insect control is limited. Diazinon, a common homeowner turfgrass insecticide, is an example.

Many diseases and insect problems are associated with excess thatch, including summer patch and leaf spot/melting out. Sod webworms prefer to live in the loose thatch zones; black cutworms also like a thatch layer, though they are seldom a serious problem. Grub damage, however, may be less, as female beetles prefer to lay their eggs in actual soil.

The only way to tell if too much thatch is present is to cut a core sample. Get down on your hands and knees and cut a sample roughly two inches in diameter and four to six inches deep. Measure the thatch layer.

There are many factors that can cause thatch accumulation, but the majority of the problems can be traced back to one factor - humans.

Most thatch develops because of poor cultural practices. Over-fertilizing is key. So is excess irrigation. Both lead to heavy grass growth, and can result in heavy roots, rhizome, stolon and stem production. Since this material doesn't break down fast, thatch can build up.

Another key factor is poor mowing practices. Allowing the grass to get too tall and mowing more than one-third of the plant means cutting stems instead of just leaves. In the long run, the stems will collect and increase the thatch layer.

A compacted soil, the overuse of pesticides that could destroy soil organisms, and overwatering can also lead to thatch buildup. Some of the newer cultivars of bluegrass are more thatch producing than others. Tall fescues, zoysia grass and buffalograss can also produce excessive thatch.

Hand raking is one way to get rid of thatch. Dethatchers, usually called vertical mowers or power rakes, can also be used. The soil should be moist before using the machines.

Early September and early April are ideal times to remove thatch. Never remove more than one-half inch in the fall and spring or you may be destroying your entire lawn. Water and fertilize the grass after fall dethatching to stimulate recovery.

Remember, you can easily remove thatch, but you must remember to change your mowing, fertilizing, watering, or other cultural practices in order to avoid a perpetual problem.

A handy tool for a new bathroom

Looking to replace a tired toilet or update a boring bathroom? Wondering how to get that yucky gunk off a chrome faucet?

Then check out American Standard's new web site, located at www.amstd.com. With a few quick clicks of a computer keyboard, web surfers will find up-to-date information on plumbing products, as well as practical home project advice, from American Standard, the world's largest manufacturer of plumbing fixtures.

"Bathrooms are very special places in the home," says Jeanette Long, team leader, marketing, at American Standard. "American Standard's new web site helps home owners enjoy bathrooms to their fullest."

Launched in July, the easy-to-navigate site features separate areas for home owners and trade professionals (e.g., designers, builders, architects and plumbers). While the information on the site is similar for both groups, trade professionals can access company news and commercial product information.

The American Standard web site offers a range of menu bar selections, including "Product Showcase," "Design Center," "Tips of the Trade," "Where to Shop," "Bathroom Reading" and "News You Can Use."

Product Showcase is an on-line database that allows visitors to quickly search for bathroom and kitchen products. The complete line of American Standard toilets, bathroom sinks, whirlpool, bidets, bathtubs, shower systems, kitchen sinks and faucets is available. Visitors can search by product features or item number. Detailed information is provided for each product, including features, available colors and related or coordinating fixtures. Installation instructions, spec sheets and repair parts also are provided.

The Design Center offers hints and advice that may come in handy for home remodeling or building projects. For example, the Design Center includes suggestions on how to select a plumbing fixture. Do-it-yourselfers will appreciate the home project tips such as "How to Keep Your Budget in Line" and the decorating suggestions such as "Big Ideas for Small Bathrooms."

Tips of the Trade is a question-and-answer area where visitors can find quick answers to such commonly asked questions as "What's the Difference Between Gravity-fed and Pressure-assisted Toilets?" and "How Can I Find a Bath or Kitchen Designer?"

Where to Shop allows visitors to search for the nearest American Standard showroom by city or Zip code. More than 1,000 U.S. showrooms are listed on the site.

Bathroom Reading is where visitors can request American Standard's free 32-page, four-color brochure, "We Want You To Love Your Bathroom." This brochure is filled with home project tips and even includes neat bathroom trivia and tidbits that would make a few extra minutes in the "water closet" even more enjoyable. For example, the brochure includes the 19th-century novelist Baroness Aurore Dudevant's recipe for a replenishing milk bath (oui, oui!).

News You Can Use allows trade professionals to access the latest news and information from American Standard.

American Standard is the world's largest plumbing manufacturer, with 108 manufacturing locations in 35 countries employing approximately 51,000 people. U.S. Plumbing Products (USPP) is a division of American Standard Companies, Inc. Headquartered in Piscataway, N.J., USPP is a leader in the design, development and sales of chinaware, acrylic and enameled products, faucets and accessories.

Chamber schedules leadership workshop

The Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce & Industry's Foundation will hold the third workshop of their "10th Annual Leadership Workshop Series" on Thursday, September 17, (from 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m.) in the Chamber Conference Center, 1401 Oakton Street, Des Plaines. A continental breakfast will be available. "The Manager as Coach" will be the featured topic.

This workshop focuses on a new paradigm sweeping American society. It demonstrates that conventional people-management theories need to be replaced by a new set of "soft skills" that recognize individuality. These "soft skills" combine personal empowerment and incentives with team-building techniques to successfully attain optimal performance, productivity and profitability. The workshop's purpose is to help businesses and professionals maximize their personal performance, ignite the enthusiasm of their teams, focus effort where they'll bring the most productive results, expand their vision, extend their goals, and dramatically heighten levels of achievement.

Cost is Free for Chamber members and $20 for non-members. Reservations are required and may be made by calling the Chamber office at 824-4200 by September 14th.

Business After Hours

Edward Jones and Morton Grove Lions Club host Business After Hours at 5 to 7 p.m., September 15, at Edward Jones office, 6049 Dempster Street, Morton Grove.

The Morton Grove Lions, led by Lion Les Brownstein and Lion Jim Simkins, along with Lion Steven Schwartz invite you to a Lions with their "Recycle for Life" program. If you have an old pair of glasses, bring them with you to donate!!!

So come and join your fellow Chamber Members for an evening of networking, great refreshments, and get reacquainted after the summer. RSVP - (847) 965-0330.

Lincoln Award Legal Writing Contest winner

Celia Guzaldo Gamrath, of Park Ridge, has received the second-place award in the 1998 Lincoln Award Legal Writing Contest from the Young Lawyer's Division of the Illinois State Bar Association (ISBA).

Designed to encourage young lawyers to practice their legal writing skills, the contest is limited to ISBA members under the age of 36 or who have been admitted to the bar for less than three years. Articles, which were previously published in the Illinois Bar Journal, are judged on practicality and timeliness of the subject, quality of research and legal analysis, and clarity of style.

Guzaldo Gamrath's winning article is titled, "A Lawyer's Guide to Mandatory Arbitration in Illinois." She received $500 for placing second in the contest.

The 36,000-member ISBA, with offices in Springfield and Chicago, provides professional services to Illinois lawyers, and education and services to the public.

Letter to the Editor
Tucker Mall suggestions from resident

Dear Editor:
Lincolnwood is about to undergo a major structural change with the development of the Tucker Mall at Pratt and McCormick. Over the last 15 years Pratt and Touhy have seen a tremendous surge in traffic. The Tucker development will again increase traffic. I have two suggestions that I would like considered by the zoning board.
First, there should be NO entrance into the mall from Pratt. A service entrance drive could easily be made off McCormick in addition to the regular entrance, and Pratt would be closed off with a cul de sac where Pratt and McCormick currently meet. This would allow for a closed, landscaped mall backside that would protect the property values of the homes on Pratt. Additionally, this would eliminate heavy traffic on Pratt going past our Elementary School, endangering our children, increasing noise, and decreasing the quality of life in the heart of Lincolnwood.
Secondly, to cut down on traffic in residential Lincolnwood, consider the village planners consider putting a cul de sac at Central and Pratt. There would be several advantages to this. First, the flow of traffic on Pratt would be curtailed. Secondly, the criminal activity resulting from mall traffic would be decreased. Thirdly, the quiet, residential areas of Lincolnwood would be protected and have definite boundaries.
I do believe the mall would be advantageous to Lincolnwood but it will be permanent and the Lincolnwood quality of life must not be sacrificed for the convenience of the builder.
Sincerely,
John Purtell,
Lincolnwood, IL

Program about emergency calls to be presented

The Morton Grove Historical Society will meet on Tuesday, Sept. 15, at 7 p.m. in the Baxter Room of the Morton Grove Library. Following a brief general meeting, representatives of the Morton Grove Police and Fire Departments will give a presentation on emergency calls. The discussion will be on how these calls are received (911 or 7 digit phone number), and how the dispatchers handle the emergencies. The audience will hear tapes of actual emergency calls, and there will be a question and answer period afterward.
Everyone is invited to attend this informative meeting. You will be impressed with the level of technology and the professionalism provided by the village's emergency services departments. There is no admission charge for the meeting, and light refreshments will be served.

northern France during the 100 Year War.

.....If you ever participate in a sports quiz show you should know when college basketball scholarships run out after four years, only about 30% of the student ballplayers have earned degrees. The basketball players generate wealth for the schools they attend and they walk away from the school with nothing.

.....The information barrage we receive today is so overwhelming it actually distorts and disrupts our everyday world. When the O.J. Simpson story was front page news the never-ending barrage of talk show commentary made this story out of whack. The sensationalism of a famous black athlete and his beautiful white wife's contemps was a story to be chewed over and masticated and re-played over and over again, far beyond its newsworthiness. You read about it, you heard about it on the radio endlessly and then again on TV and if you were involved with a computer, the chat shows and networks re-gurgitated the story endlessly. This huge barrage played this story far beyond its value and distorted its true worth.

The Clinton-Lewinsky story has received this same overkill. This never-ending confluence of print, audio, visual and now computer "news" has led us into a new era we've never been in before.

A couple of weeks ago a stock broker-analyst-guru, Ralph Accompa, told his TV audience he was pessimistic about the immediate future of the stock market. The Dow Jones averages went down 160 points in the next few hours. The former head of the Fidelity Magellan fund told his Friday night audience Johnson and Johnson stock was a good buy and in the following weeks it doubled its already substantial price. Michael Jordan burps or whistles or frowns and this media-computer barrage is repped up to a pitch three octaves above what a dog is accustomed to reacting to. We're now in the era of too much, too loud and too often.

.....Chicago Fire Department ambulance service has been criticized for the length of time it takes for an ambulance to arrive at a Chicago emergency. Here in our towns you can expect an ambulance at your home about five minutes after you've called for service. It's an incredibly fast and efficient service in our communities. Years ago we were told about 80% of all fire calls are for ambulance service.

.....When Chicago's Mayor Daley spoke at policeman's funeral last week his voice broke as he finished his memorial. At a press conference a couple of years ago Mayor Daley broke down and cried after his sixteen-year-old son was involved in a bat-swinging incident at his Michigan home. The reporter, the Tribune's John Cass, inferred the Mayor "has heart."

Several years ago we had breakfast with the then state's attorney, Daley. There were only four or five of us there. He got up and gave a canned speech and it was at best, awful. Like his father, his long suit isn't public speaking. His long suit also wasn't being much of a student. He twice flunked the bar exam and cynics questioned whether he legitimately could ever pass it.

You get the picture this academically average student has little to offer. But we have a friend of ours who served as an assistant state's attorney during the Daley era. He reported Daley was an excellent manager of that office. Unlike the previous state's attorney, who was very popular and admired, the office was much more efficient and better run under the Daley administration than during previous days. I guess the message is not to judge the overall man by using superficial examples.

shared the Media One cable television provider tower. However, officials decided that the move would be too costly.

Blase has suggested other less obtrusive sites in Niles where the tower might have been constructed, such as an industrial park just two blocks east of the present tower site.

According to federal law, towns and villages are prohibited from banning construction of cellular towers on sites with B-4 or higher zoning within their boundaries. However, while allowing the construction of the towers, many suburbs are attempting to regulate placement and height of the structures.

For a communications giant, AT&T doesn't communicate very much, according to Blase, who said he sent a letter and photo of the accident that occurred near the tower two months ago and has yet to receive a reply.

Public Information Officer. Skokie has registered fewer than 10 residents convicted of sex crimes, according to Sgt. Carl Bock, who stressed that the actual crimes need not have been committed in Skokie, but could have been committed anywhere in the state.

Bock also said that there has been no increase in the number of reported child sex crimes in Skokie, despite the fact that a small number of convicted offenders are now known to reside there due to the legislation.

John Janicek, director of the records department of the Lincolnwood Police Department, said that no child sex offenders have been registered in that suburb.

Janicek said that, as of a couple of weeks ago, the list of child sex offenders in Cook County is available on the county's web page.

"You don't even have to go to your local police department to get it [the list of convicted offenders]," Janicek said. "You can get it on your own computer."

Janicek predicted that Lake County would soon follow Cook County in listing known child sex offenders on their web page.

Detective Evans of the Park Ridge Police Department reported that four sex offenders have been registered there. In Morton Grove, seven sex offenders have been registered by the police.

In contrast to the suburban areas, Chicago has registered 2,827 child sex offenders, according to Arlene Mays of the Chicago Police Department News Affairs division. Throughout the state, approximately 14,000 sex offenders are registered.

Failure to register could result in an additional conviction of a class 4 felony and a possible jail sentence, authorities said.

C.A.R.E. to hold fall dog wash

The Community Animal Rescue Effort (C.A.R.E.), the volunteer affiliate of the Evanston Animal Shelter, will hold the second of two annual dog washes Saturday, September 12 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. (rain or shine) on the shelter grounds at 2310 Oakton Street in Evanston.

The public is invited to bring dogs of all shapes and sizes to the event, where C.A.R.E. volunteers will wash and towel dry them. A wash costs $10 and a nail trim costs $5. We will also have a mini flea market of dog and cat items. All proceeds will benefit the homeless dogs and cats at the Evanston Animal Shelter.

Call C.A.R.E.'s 24-hour hotline for more information at (847) 705-2653 or stop by the Evanston Animal Shelter during adoption hours. Adoption hours are 6 - 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and noon - 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

submit their application to take over the hangar, along with scores of other developers who have made proposals to buy and redevelop other parcels that once made up the huge old base.

The Navy turned over the 1,100-acre base to the village for free because the cost of removing the thousands of feet of concrete runways made the land of little value to the Navy. The village is now selling off parcels to various developers. The funds collected from the sales will reimburse the village for the millions of dollars being spent in infrastructure improvements and other costs incurred in converting the base for civilian use.

Housing, a new town center and light industry are some of the developments being planned for the tract, authorities said. At least 60 development proposals have been received by village consultants, who are studying each one for economic feasibility. Some of the proposals are for disposition of the hangar, whose future is unknown.

While the village has signed an agreement with the Illinois State Preservation Agency to attempt to find a developer for the old hangar who will agree to preserve it, the high cost of renovation and asbestos removal may make that mission very difficult if not impossible, authorities said.

The bill for bringing the building up to code and removing the asbestos is estimated between $7 million and $15 million, a price tag the Hangar One Foundation, with only about $25,000 at its disposal, may not be able to pay.

The village redevelopment plan for the base had already proposed use of the hangar as the centerpiece for a 45-acre retail center which would include stores, restaurants, sports facilities and entertainment venues overlooking a park.

Don Walsh, marketing director for the base, acknowledges the historic and landmark value of the hangar as a link between Glenview's past and future. However, he questions whether the entire 188,000-square-foot hangar must be devoted to use as a museum, or if using just a part of the huge space as a museum would be just as effective a means of preserving the base's rich history, while developing other parts of the large building commercially.

Dating back to 1929, the hangar ranked among the nation's largest and most advanced aviation facilities. The location of the small airport, first known as the Curtiss-Reynolds Airfield, was thought to be ideal at that time, according to historians, because the skies in Chicago were often more polluted from coal smoke.

The clean Glenview air promoted safe takeoffs and landings. However, dreams of a large north suburban airport shriveled with the economy during the Great Depression. Dedication of the airfield preceded the stock market crash by only about 10 days, local historian and Hangar One Foundation member Beverly Dawson told the Chicago Tribune.

Instead of being developed into a major airport, the site was used during the 1930s in the air-show circuit by the show pilots who raced their planes from Glenview to Wilmette to Northbrook and back to Glenview to the delight of spectators who came from all over the region.

By 1940, however, Curtiss airfield was used for training pilots for the war effort. About 15,000 aircraft carrier pilots and 350,000 enlisted men received their training at Glenview, which was condemned and purchased by the Navy to supplement the Great Lakes Naval Training Center in North Chicago.

The inside of the main hangar was reconstructed to simulate an aircraft carrier deck so that when trainees experienced the real thing they would know where everything was located.

The pilot trainees also practiced carrier landings on the decks of two converted lake steamers, the USS Wolverine and the USS Sable.

The village said that veterans as well as historians seek to preserve Matt Carlson, Glenview's assistant village manager, said in a Chicago Tribune article that the village will attempt to feature the hangar prominently in the redevelopment project, but added that it will take both financial backing and creative planning to save the structure.

Walk-A-Thon for Parkinsons

Since funding for research of Parkinson's Disease by the National Institute of Health (NIH) has been abysmally low in the past, (twenty-six to thirty-nine dollars per patient per year), the APDA/CAC relies on the annual walk-a-thon to raise the major funding to find a cure for this despicable and incurable disease.

The APDA/CAC invites the public, friends and families to a day of fun, prizes and surprises. All proceeds from the pledges of this event are always dedicated solely for the research and cure of Parkinson's Disease. For additional information, please call the American Parkinson Disease association/CAC at (312) 664-3880.
