by Bud Besser

He was a roly poly guy with a big smile that covered half his face. He was a 50 year foreman at Croname who directed a couple of hundred women through 125,000 days of labor. He was a dog lover who went to the local meat market every week and brought home double-ground ground beef for man's best friend, and he was a non-golfer, who didn't know a divot from a birdie who helped save half of the old Tam O'Shanter golf course for local golfers.

He was Steve Charnerski, a lovable cherub, a 12 year commissioner on Niles park board, who died in his sleep in late August at the age of 80.

Back in the late 1960's the owners of the championship 18 hole Tam O'Shanter golf course were planning to build an 18 hole industrial park on the west side of Caldwell Avenue. You'd be able to look down the fairway past a water hole and see a beautiful putting green surrounded by a Coca Cola bottling plant. It was a megabucks plan, a taxpayers' bonanza, that would be laid out by the J. Emil Anderson Company which local residents objected to and Steve and his fellow park board members fought to retain the golf course.

Glenview law discourages movie filming

Despite arguments by the director of the Illinois Film Office that filmmaking brings money into community coffers, the Glenview officials last month enacted an ordinance that will discourage future film projects in the peaceful suburb.

Ron VerKuilen, who directs the Illinois Film Office, tried in vain to convince village officials that any hassle the filming of a movie might bring to the community would be well worth it financially. Nonetheless, the ordinance passed requires 30 days between permit application and actual production, limits shooting

Average teacher salary to increase from $46,000 to $48,760; ratification of contract set for Oct. 27

District 63 teachers/board settle on 6% pay hikes

Threats of a strike by teachers in East Maine School District 63 in recent weeks were averted last Friday when a tentative agreement was reached between the school board and the teachers' union. The settlement calls for a 6% raise in each of the next three years.

The district had initially offered a three year contract granting a 4.25% hike the first year and 4% raises in the two ensuing years. The teachers' union had sought a five year contract with a 7.6% salary hike in the first three years and a 5.5% increase in the last two years.

While the contract is not official until the school district signs, that is likely to take place next Tuesday, Oct. 27.

Superintendent Robert Varga, in anticipation of a possible strike had notified parents of District 63 students that they would be informed of a walkout by the teachers through the media. The teachers had notified the board of their intention to strike after the expiration of their contract on July 31. District 63 schools have ap-

lante, young violinists from Suzuki Talent Education of Skokie, and the Sark Antaramian Band. Additional entertainment will include juggler and comedian Mike Vondruska.

Notre Dame educates student on traffic safety

In an important effort to educate students about the dangers of drinking and driving, Notre Dame will be having the Office of Secretary of State George H. Ryan give a valuable presentation on October 23, at 9:35 a.m.

The laws pertaining to drinking and driving will first be addressed. Next, volunteers will be chosen to perform different "sobriety tests" while they are wearing special Fatal Vision Goggles.

"These will impair the volunteers' vision and cause them to see as if they are intoxicated."

Then another speaker will explain how the tragedy of an impaired driving crash has affected his/her life. Finally, any remaining time will be left open for questions or comments.

Nationally, in 1996, a total of 6,319 crash fatalities were young people between the ages of 15 to 20. Of these, 2,315 were in alcohol-related crashes. In Illinois during this time, 206 crash fatalities were young people between the ages of 15 to 20. Of these, 74 fatalities were in alcohol-related crashes.

Nationally, 16,189 lives were lost and more than one million people were injured in alcohol-related crashes in 1997. This is the equivalent of:

13 Safe Halloween suggestions

1. Wear makeup instead of masks. Use hypoallergenic formulas. Have an adult apply the makeup, and remove it with cold cream instead of soap and water.
2. Avoid costumes with masks, wigs, floppy hats or eye patches that block vision.
3. Avoid pointed props such as spears, swords or wands that can endanger other children's eyes.
4. Wear bright, reflective clothing or have reflective patches somewhere on the costume.
5. Carry a bright flashlight to illuminate sidewalks, steps and paths.
6. Never drive while wearing a mask.
7. Obey all traffic signals, whether pedestrian or driver.
8. While traveling about the neighborhood, younger children should be accompanied by an adult. Older children should trick or treat in groups.
9. Use common sense. Never dart out between parked cars or hidden corners such as alleys. Avoid streets under construction.
10. Inspect all trick-or-treat items before allowing children to have them.
11. Be sure the path and stairs to your front door are well illuminated and clear of obstacles.
12. Daylight trick or treating is safer than going out after dark.
13. Halloween parties are safer than trick or treating at any time.

Store firewood properly

As winter approaches each year, many homeowners cut and split firewood for use in their stove or fireplace. Bob Frazee, U of I Extension Educator, Natural Resources, Peoria, cautions homeowners, "that a lot of hard work and sweat may be needlessly wasted if firewood isn't stored properly."

According to the Frazee, "storing firewood involves more than space. Other considerations, such as location, seasoning, rot, exposure, and termites, are also important. For example, firewood stored in a shady corner near buildings or surrounded by shrubs and vegetation deteriorates more quickly than wood stored in a sunny, exposed location. Also, wood in contact with the soil is soon infected with decay, and decayed wood has considerably less fuel value than sound wood. To prevent stored firewood from rotting, it is recommended that it be placed on a rack that allows air movement on both the bottom and sides of the woodpile." Plastic sheeting, or closer stacking of the top pieces, will help to protect firewood from rain and snow.

Wood seasons faster without bark, and pieces with small diameters air-dry faster than large chunks. "To speed the drying time for firewood," Frazee recommends, "halving or quartering the large pieces to help the seasoning process."

Put falling leaves to good use around yard & garden

After Mother Nature provides her colorful fall display of leaves, she quickly drops them into piles on the ground. They can then be put to good use around the yard and garden, either as they drop or after they have been composted. Leaves can be used as mulch around trees and shrubs; as protection for winter sensitive plants; tilled in as organic matter for gardens and flower beds; or placed in a compost pile for later use, says John Church, Natural Resource Educator with the University of Illinois Extension Service in Rockford.

Remember leaves are banned as landscape waste from landfills, unless they are taken to a compost facility first, which may include an additional disposal fee. Also, many areas have local regulations prohibiting burning leaves. So, the simplest solution to leaf disposal may be to use them around the home.

Leaves can make a good mulch beneath trees, shrubs, and other landscape plantings. Trees in forested areas use leaves as mulch naturally with layers of dried leaves and leaf mold accumulating annually beneath them. Chopping up the leaves through the mower or a yard vacuum can help make a good mulch and reduce "matting" of larger leaves. If the leaves are collected in a mower or vacuum bag, the leaf and grass clipping combination can also be used as mulch or the combination is an excellent base for composting.

Leaves alone or with grass clippings are good organic materials to add to the compost pile. Again, chopping the leaves can help the composting process. If the only material in the compost pile is dry leaves, some moisture will need to be added to start the process. Remember that proper composting needs moisture; microorganisms which are normally present in the organic matter or can be added with soil; nitrogen, which is most prevalent in green organic material such as grass clippings or can be added with a little fertilizer; and air which can be provided by turning of the pile.

Compost piles should not have objectionable odors. If they do, the pile probably needs turning to provide more oxygen.

Leaves can also be tilled directly into the garden as a soil conditioner, but again chopping of the leaves is helpful. Organic matter can help improve the drainage and tilth of the heavier clay soils predominant in many gardens. Several years of adding organic matter will often be needed to make a noticeable improvement. Composted leaves are somewhat better than leaves off the tree, because the compost has already deteriorated and can be more easily blended into the soil.

Compost that has had fertilizer added to it can also have some additional benefit for soil fertility. However, leaves or compost should primarily be considered as soil-improving organic matter, rather than as a large boost to the garden's fertility.

Most typical home applications of leaves to gardens or flower beds should not adversely affect the soil pH (acidity or alkalinity) as some people fear. Excessive applications in very small areas may have some impact. If there is a concern about soil pH or other fertility, have the soil tested before and after applying large amounts of leaves. Fall is a good time to take soil samples for testing.

For further information on fall chores such as using leaves, composting, or soil testing, contact the North Suburban Cook County Extension office, 2121 West Euclid Ave., Room 251, Rolling Meadows, IL 60008, phone 847/818-2901.

Fall is good time for lawn maintenance

For many homeowners, lawn and garden chores wind down in late Summer or early Fall, but University of Illinois turfgrass specialist, Tom Voigt, says Fall is really a great time to do lawn maintenance to ensure a healthy lawn.

Most lawns in the Northern two-thirds of Illinois are planted to Kentucky bluegrasses, perennial ryegrasses or fescues. These are cool-season grasses that respond well to fertilization in early September.

"I fertilize my lawn with a 3-1-2 or 4-1-2 mix of nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium. I apply the fertilizer early in May, early in September and the middle of November. I don't irrigate, but if you do, you can add another application in mid to late June," said Tom Voigt, U of I Extension turfgrass specialist.

"The final fertilization in November, after the last mowing of the season, provides minerals for early spring growth and therefore is a very important application."

During the heat of Summer, cool-season grasses do not need a lot of nitrogen because they aren't actively growing. Fertilization in September makes nutrients available during the flush of growth that accompanies Fall's cooler temperatures. In addition, fertilization helps grass recover from summer stresses and improve its health before winter.

Lincolnwood Public Library

Connie Adelman will review Lindbergh by Scott A. Berg for the opening program of the Saturday in Review book talk series at the Lincolnwood Public Library, 4000 W. Pratt Ave., on Oct. 24 at 2 p.m.

His solo flight from New York to Paris captured the imagination of a postwar generation hungry for heroes, and cemented an exalted spot for the 25-year old pilot from Minnesota in the collective American imagination.

This new biography of the aviator suggests that despite the public scrutiny that accompanies his every move until his death in 1974, Lindbergh remained an intensely private man, painfully shy and emotionally guarded. Although Charles Lindbergh intended his private papers to be sequestered for 50 years, Anne Lindbergh gave the author unfettered access to them and the result is this thorough biography which took the writer from Lindbergh's birthplace to his final resting place. The free program lasts about an hour.

Lincolnwood Public Library

The Lincolnwood Public Library's special Halloween show for kids presents John Faxon Gilbert, a.k.a. Fax, Sunday, Oct. 25, 2 p.m. He combines mime, magic and physical comedy in his show Fax: Good Mime, Bad Magic and (not so) Ugly Special Effects.

His physical comedy style makes kids laugh, cheer and applaud for more. Using his classical mime training as a base, Fax has discarded the white face and integrates speaking, magic illusions, puppetry, special effects and audience participation. The Library's Halloween specials have been sponsored by Lincolnwood residents Mark and Sonia Gilbert for the last 14 years.

Tickets are required and are available free at the circulation desk to Lincolnwood residents now and to non-residents one week before the program.

'Save A Life Foundation' grant approved

An organization dedicated to teaching children emergency response care that could save a life has received a $600,000 state grant requested by Assistant Senate Majority Leader Walter Dudyecz (R-7th, Chicago).

The Save A Life Foundation (SALF), located in Schiller Park, will use the state funds for its Save A Life For Kids program, which it started in 1996 to train children in basic lifesaving skills. The program includes a one-hour presentation of basic life-support techniques that is taught to school children by Save A Life instructors, which are local Illinois fire and EMS professionals.

The Save A Life For Kids program teaches children how to access their local fire/emergency medical service and what basic lifesaving skills they need to initiate until help arrives," Dudyecz said. "The program has already taught more than 5,000 Illinois school children by their local firefighters/EMS providers. The benefit of training children from kindergarten through high school will have a significant effect on reducing death and disabling injuries."

The Save A Life Foundation is a not-for-profit organization established in 1992 by Founder and President Carol Spizzirri after the tragic death of her 16-year-old daughter Christina, who had been involved in an automobile accident. That accident left her lying on the road bleeding with major injuries. The first officers on the scene did not administer cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) because their certifications had expired. By the time paramedics arrived and began life-supporting techniques on Christina, it was too late.

Spizzirri is now advocating mandated basic first aid and CPR training for teachers, police officers, coaches and other public servants, as well as annual recertification.

The Save A Life For Kids program has been endorsed by organizations like the Illinois State PTA, Illinois Association of Firefighters, Associated Firefighters of Illinois, Illinois Maternal Child and Health Coalition, Chicago Board of Education, and nationally recognized experts such as Dr. Peter Safar ("Father of CPR"), Dr. Henry Heimlich (developer of the Heimlich Maneuver) and Dr. Stan Zydlow ("Father of Illinois' EMS").

Dudyecz has been affiliated with SALF since 1994 when he cosponsored legislation that mandates Illinois police and firefighters to be trained in first aid and CPR prior to graduation from their academy.

Three penalty-free ways to withdraw funds from your IRA

Many retirement savers believe that they may not withdraw their Individual Retirement Account (IRA) contributions before they reach age 59-1/2 without incurring a 10% tax penalty. Yet, with some restrictions, current tax law allows traditional IRA and Roth IRA owners to withdraw a portion of their IRA money in "substantially equal" amounts each year -- without being penalized.

While early IRA withdrawals may be useful, most experts caution that making such withdrawals may compromise financial security during retirement. Always consult your personal tax advisor before making any tax-related investment decisions. Should you need the early use of your IRA funds, the Internal Revenue Service has generally approved three methods for withdrawing funds without penalty. (The amount withdrawn is still subject to ordinary income tax.)

The Three Withdrawal Methods

1. Life Expectancy Payout is the simplest way to calculate penalty-free IRA withdrawals for a particular year. IRS Publication 590, Individual Retirement Arrangements, provides life expectancy factors. Divide your life expectancy factor into the value of funds in your IRA as of December 31. The result will be the penalty-free amount that may be withdrawn during the next year.

2. Life Expectancy Amortization lets you (a) determine your life expectancy from IRS tables, (b) work with your tax advisor to determine the reasonable rate of interest or return your IRA should earn, and (c) determine how much would have to be withdrawn in equal payments from the IRA balances each year in order to reach zero at the estimated time of death.

3. Annuity Payout is similar to Life Expectancy Amortization, but this method is likely to provide you with a larger annual penalty-free payout from your IRA because it permits you and your tax advisor to choose any reasonable mortality table to determine lifespan. (Such tables may assume a shorter lifespan than IRS tables, resulting in larger annual payments.) Once an expected lifespan has been determined, you and your tax advisor can choose a reasonable interest rate to calculate the annuity factor and then divide that annuity factor into the account balance. No matter what method of payment you select, your payment schedule must meet the following rules:

- Once payments have begun, you must continue to receive distributions at least annually for a minimum of five years or until

How are Roth IRA distributions taxed?

Since January 1998, eligible individuals have been able to contribute to a new kind of individual retirement account (IRA) called the Roth IRA, which is subject to adjusted gross income limits. Contributions to the Roth IRA are not tax deductible, but if certain requirements are met, all earnings will be distributed tax-free. If the requirements are not met, taxes and/or a penalty may apply to distributions. Possible tax treatment scenarios for Roth IRA distributions are discussed below:

Tax Treatments for Roth IRA Distributions

There are three different tax treatments for distributions of earnings from Roth IRAs:

- 1. Tax-free, penalty-free. If you take a distribution at least five years after your Roth IRA account was established and after you have reached age 59-1/2, or if a distribution is taken due to your death, disability or for a first-time home purchase (up to $10,000 lifetime maximum) for you or your spouse, children, grandchildren or ancestors, the distribution is tax- and penalty-free.
- 2. Tax but no penalty. This category applies when you take a distribution from a Roth IRA you attain age 59-1/2, whichever is longer.

- Annual payments must be in substantially equal amounts.
- If the payment schedule is changed or is stopped prematurely, all distributions up to that time will become subject to the 10% penalty tax. For this reason, you may wish to split your IRAs, taking periodic payments from one IRA, while maintaining a separate IRA for long-term investments and emergency withdrawals.

Your tax advisor can help you determine if one of these methods may be suitable for you.

Job applicants are facing increasing competition for better paying jobs. At the same time employers are expressing frustration that they are not finding the applicants with the appropriate communications skills to fill the types of positions created by the increasingly service-oriented economy in the U.S. Park Ridge Toastmasters has the answer. The Club utilizes Toastmasters international's time-tested program that includes both impromptu and prepared speeches. Consumers can buy cable set-top boxes

By the Federal Communications Commission
Thanks to a new rule adopted by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) this month, you'll be able to buy cable boxes and a variety of other reception devices in retail stores beginning July 1, 2000.

Today's consumer must lease cable boxes, paying their cable provider a monthly fee. Under the new rule, consumers can buy their own equipment, tailored to their needs. Cable companies will be free to continue offering leased boxes for those consumers who prefer to pay the monthly fee.

The FCC hopes that competition will bring the price of these boxes down. In addition, it is expected that box technology may be incorporated in other devices so consumers may one day buy combination cable box-VCRs or TVs. "The Commission's action will create a huge market for the manufacture, distribution and sale of these devices. It will enhance innovation and bring consumers better prices," said FCC Chairman Bill Kennard. "Our decision... is another key part of the larger goal of creating competition across the spectrum of telecommunications services."

The Commission will be monitoring developments with respect to creating competition across the spectrum of telecommunications services. The Commission will be monitoring developments with respect to creating competition across the spectrum of telecommunications services.

The new rules carry out a Congressional directive in the Telecommunications Act of 1996. In that Act, Congress directed the Commission to create rules that would allow consumers to obtain

Scientists seeking third village where Europeans met Illini Indians

The 325th anniversary of the first European contact with the Illini, a once large and powerful confederacy of Native American tribes that lived in the Upper Mississippi River Valley, is being celebrated this summer, not with cake and ice cream, but with shovels and buckets.

Working in severe summer heat, a group of 19 Midwestern high school and college students enrolled in a University of Illinois/Western Illinois University archaeology field school are excavating the Illinois Village site in extreme northeastern Missouri. It was there, in the summer of 1673, that a French Jesuit priest by the name of Father Jacques Marquette and a Canadian fur trader named Louis Jolliet hiked up a shoreline footpath near the mouth of the Des Moines River and found three Indian villages and friendship with the Illini, as Marquette spelled the tribe's name.

Under the supervision of U of I archaeology student Eric Hollinger, who is field director of the summer course, the students have been excavating two of the villages that were settled on a hill not far from the bank of the Des Moines, and now are searching for the third village that Marquette reported.

"We hope to find it," said Hollinger, noting that a geophysical survey of the entire 110-acre site is being done to locate the houses and to map the village layout. Students are being trained to do test excavating and to use ground-penetrating radar at the site.

In 1994, Conrad said, WIU and the Missouri Department of Natural Resources sponsored a field conference at Keokuk, inviting archaeologists interested in the early historic period.

Buzz Lightyear attraction lands at Magic Kingdom

A journey through Buzz Lightyear's hyper-imagination awaits Magic Kingdom guests as the computer-animated world of Disney's "Toy Story" magically transforms into reality at the newest Tomorrowland attraction, Buzz Lightyear's Space Ranger Spin.

Guests are enlisted as junior space rangers to join Buzz on an interactive adventure to defend the universe's crystalline fusion cell supply - better known as batteries - from the sinister alien Emperor Zurg. Zurg's been plotting to steal all the toys' batteries and use them to fuel his "ultimate weapon of destruction."

Guests jump right into the playful fantasy, boarding XP-37 space cruisers and embarking on a whimsical voyage to the Gamma Quadrant. Each space cruiser, themed as a vibrantly colored wind-up toy, comes fully equipped with turbo-charged twin laser cannons and a joystick, capable of spinning the craft 360 degrees.

To save the universe and collect points, guests are instructed to blast the orange-colored Emperor Zurg insignias scattered throughout the attraction. When the space cruiser's lasers zap a target, it triggers space-aged animation, sound and light effects. Each space ranger's score is tallied, according to complexity of target, electronically onboard via an LED screen on the cruiser's dashboard.

The new space adventure features 10 interactive scenes. To capture Zurg, space rangers must battle gigantic robots, explore strange planets and hijack a flying saucer. Sharp-shooting space rangers cause aliens to spring from hiding, volcanoes to erupt, winged creatures to take flight and other zany audio and visual effects.

During the spectacular final battle, laser beams scream across the sky and Buzz himself joins the action. Zurg's secret weapon is blown apart by Buzz's laser and squeaky toy Martians collect its shattered remains.

As cruisers pull into the unload area, guests compare their score with the mission profile chart to determine their space ranger rank.

Buzz Lightyear's Space Ranger Spin also features a high-fidelity, high-efficiency projection system for displaying the computer-generated face and head of Buzz Lightyear in the attraction's pre-show. Walt Disney Imagineers have worked with Pixar Productions and several Disney divisions to coordinate the animation of Buzz Lightyear.

Walt Disney Pictures and Pixar, who teamed to create "Toy Story," have joined forces again to produce a "Toy Story" sequel coming to theaters in late 1998.

Buzz Lightyear's Space Ranger Spin is sponsored by Mattel, and replaces the Take Flight attraction which closed January 1998.

During the next 12 months, Walt Disney World Resort will grow as never before - adding exciting new attractions, shows and hotels throughout the 30,500-acre Vacation Kingdom.

Guests will find something new in every corner of Walt Disney World: at the Magic Kingdom, Buzz Lightyear's Space Ranger Spin. The Many Adventures of Winnie the Pooh and the return of the "Main Street Electrical Parade," at Epcot, the high-speed thrills of Test Track; at Disney-MGM Studios, the nighttime magic of "Fantasmic!" and the high-volume fun of Rock 'n' Roller Coaster; at Disney's Animal Kingdom, a whole new land - Asia - including a white-water rafting attraction; and at Downtown Disney, the incredible acrobatics of Cirque du Soleil.
