Chicago Playworks concludes its season with Grimm Tales

By Michael Makover

Theatre Review

When the Children's Theater of Oakton concludes its season April 30 with Grimm Tales, it will end with a series of five stories based on the works of the famous fairy tale writer, Jacob Grimm. Though the stories have been adapted by two different playwrights, it is sufficiently clear that the stories are an accurate reflection of the originals.

The first story, "Cinderella," is a story of a young Princess who is driven from her home and meets a prince. Though she is very beautiful, she is very poor and must work for others. One day, she is given a glass slipper by the prince during a ball, which she happens to lose. Though she rubs her eyes, the prince takes her home to see if she is the one who left the slipper. She is found to be the one who lost the slipper and is taken to be his bride.

The second story, "The Bremen Town Musicians," is a story of a group of animals who are being taken to the city to be sold by a dog. As they travel, they meet a singer who offers them work as musicians in the city. They agree and sing for the people, who are very pleased with their music.

The third story, "The Magic Hat," is a story of a young boy who finds a magic hat that is able to grant his every wish. However, the boy becomes very greedy and asks for more and more. In the end, the hat becomes so powerful that it leads to the boy's downfall.

The fourth story, "The Magic Bag," is a story of a young boy who finds a magic bag that is able to grant his every wish. However, the boy becomes very greedy and asks for more and more. In the end, the bag becomes so powerful that it leads to the boy's downfall.

The fifth story, "The Magic World," is a story of a young boy who finds a magic world that is able to grant his every wish. However, the boy becomes very greedy and asks for more and more. In the end, the world becomes so powerful that it leads to the boy's downfall.

In conclusion, Grimm Tales is a series of five stories based on the works of the famous fairy tale writer, Jacob Grimm. Though the stories have been adapted by two different playwrights, it is sufficiently clear that the stories are an accurate reflection of the originals.
