The Julia Belle Swain: A Lady of the River

By Barbara A. Manfredini

The Julia Belle Swain, a stern-wheel steamboat from the 19th century, is a symbol of the early days of river transportation in the midwest. The boat was built in 1890 and still operates on the Mississippi River today. It is a popular destination for tourists who want to experience a piece of history.

The boat, owned and operated by the Mississippi River Steamboat Company, is named after Julia Belle Swain, a prominent figure in the early days of river transportation. She was a strong-willed woman who sold her family farm to purchase the boat and put it into service.

The Julia Belle Swain is a remarkable example of the steamboats that were once a common sight on the Mississippi River. These boats were powered by steam engines and were used to transport goods and passengers between towns.

The boat is open to the public and offers tours of the river and the surrounding areas. Visitors can enjoy the scenic views and learn about the history of the river and the boat.

The Julia Belle Swain is a must-see for anyone interested in the history of the Mississippi River and the role that steamboats played in its development.

Americans to celebrate freedom to read during Banned Books Week

The banning of books is a cherished right, especially for those of us who live in a country that values the freedom to read. The Morton Grove Public Library is proud to be a part of the Banned Books Week celebration, which is an opportunity for libraries to highlight the importance of freedom of expression.

This year's banned books theme is "The Power of Words." Libraries across the country will be featuring books that have been challenged or banned in the past year, as well as books that are currently under challenge.

At the Morton Grove Public Library, we will be celebrating the diversity of voices and perspectives that make our community stronger.

Improve your home videos

Keep an eye on your videos with these tips. Don't expect to be an instant master shot, but these pointers will help you get the most out of your camera. Here are some tricks to help you take better pictures and videos:

1. Focus on Your Subject: Make sure the subject is in focus. If you don't have a good tripod, use a handheld camera and stabilize it by bracing against a wall or by sitting on a chair. This will help reduce shake and improve the quality of your shots.

2. Use the Wide-Angle View: Keep the lens on the wide-angle view when possible. This will give you a larger field of view and make the subject appear closer.

3. Stay Steady: Keep your hand steady when holding the camera. This will help reduce camera shake and make your videos more stable.

4. Frame the Footage: Frame the footage so that your subject is in the center of the screen. This will help keep the viewer's attention focused on the subject.

5. Roll Tape: Roll your tape continuously while your subject is speaking. This will help ensure that you don't miss any important information.

6. Keep the Camera Close: Move closer to your subject and keep the lens on the wide-angle view. This will help you get a better view of the subject.

7. Use Different Angles: Try shooting from different angles. This will help you get a better perspective of the subject.

8. Get Up Close and Personal: Get up close to your subject and shoot from different angles. This will help you get a better view of the subject.

9. Use Microphones: Use microphones to capture the sound of your subject. This will help you get a better audio quality.

10. Use Tripods: Use tripods to keep your camera steady. This will help you get a better view of the subject.

These tips will help you improve your home videos and make them more professional. Keep practicing and you'll get better over time.

Canning Day raises funds for M-NASR

Energy conservation program could save $1 million by fall.

The difference between M-NASR and other local agencies serving adults with developmental disabilities is the agency's ability to provide new services for people with disabilities. M-NASR emphasizes the partnership of the First National Bank of Morton Grove which awarded a matching grant for its innovative-mindedness to make contributions. The agency's goal is to provide an environment where adults with developmental disabilities can live in the community, work, and make meaningful contributions.
