Morton Grove, Niles prepared for outages

The Villages of Niles and Morton Grove are well-prepared for power blackouts according to spokesmen for their respective Police Departments.

"We're very well-prepared," said Niles Deputy Chief of Police Charles Giovanelli. "We have a liaison from (electric utility) ComEd. We don't suffer outages anywhere near as much as we used to because of our excellent relationship with ComEd." It's thanks for [Niles Mayor Nick] Blase.

When a power outage does hit Niles, a number of Village departments respond.

"First, we make sure no lines are down," said Giovanelli. "Then we go check to see if there are any seniors or families in need in the affected area. Niles isn't New York, so we aren't in as much danger as in an urban area. But when there's an outage, we do become extremely concerned about the very old and the very young."

As a result, following outages, Police go up and down affected streets using a public address system on their squad cars to make sure everyone is all right.

"Mayor Blase has done a great job," said Giovanelli. "He works hard with the utilities. Because of his efforts, we have an especially good rapport with ComEd."

In any emergency, the Police aren't the only agency to respond.

"The Niles Family Services Dept. also helps," said Giovanelli. "Along with the Fire Dept. and Public Works."

The Morton Grove Police are also prepared for any emergency.

If you own bonds, you probably hold a pretty good one in recent months, as price remained strong. But, for the past several weeks, there have been signs that bond prices may be on the move. This is a question that many bond investors are asking themselves. If you own bonds, you may have noticed that bond prices have been rising. In fact, the rate on the 10-year U.S. Treasury bond has fallen to eight percent, from about 11 percent earlier in the year. This is a result of a 4 million dollar cut in the state budget this year. The committee made this decision in order to keep the state's future financial direction. Niles Superintendent is planning to sell

You're not alone in your concern about the health of the bond market. As a bond investor, you may be wondering what the future holds for bond prices. The answer is not clear-cut. The bond market is influenced by a variety of factors, including interest rates, inflation, and economic growth. Inflation is currently rising, which could put pressure on bond prices. However, if the economy continues to grow, bond prices may also rise. This is a complex situation, and it is difficult to predict how bond prices will behave in the future.

However, there are some things you can do to protect your bond investments. First, diversify your portfolio. This means investing in a variety of different types of bonds, such as government bonds, corporate bonds, and mortgage-backed securities. This can help to reduce the risk of losing money in your bond investments.

Second, keep an eye on the bond market. This means paying attention to the news and economic reports that affect bond prices. For example, if the Federal Reserve raises interest rates, bond prices will fall. Conversely, if the Federal Reserve lowers interest rates, bond prices will rise.

Finally, be patient. Investing in bonds is not a get-rich-quick scheme. It takes time and patience to build a strong bond portfolio. Be willing to hold your bonds for the long term, and you will be rewarded with strong returns on your investment.

Dear Bud Besser,

We just read that you are selling your newspaper, The Bugle. We found it hard to believe that you are selling the Village's oldest and most respected weekly publication. We understand you are looking for a new start and are happy that you chose to sell the Bugle, but it will be hard to fill its shoes. Your contributions to the Village will be missed. We wish you all the best in your new pursuits.

Best regards,

Mike Shields

Don't forget to try

- "Functional Strength Training" is a cross-training system for developing overall body strength. It's based on the concept of functional training, which means emphasizing full-body movements that mimic activities in daily life.

- "Strength Training" is a common term for exercises that target specific muscle groups, such as leg, arm, and core exercises.

- "Functional Training" is a newer approach that focuses on whole-body movement and includes activities that require multiple muscle groups and joints.

Southwestern Associates

What exactly do people mean by "functional strength training"?

Functional Training is a cross-training system for developing overall body strength. It's based on the concept of functional training, which means emphasizing full-body movements that mimic activities in daily life. For example, completing sports-specific movements can help improve athletic performance, whereas working on everyday tasks can improve daily living skills. It's all about the body being used as a whole, focusing on movements that it naturally performs. It enhances stability, balance, and coordination while improving muscle strength in a more holistic manner.

What exactly do people mean by "strength training"?

Good question! Strength Training often refers to exercises that target specific muscle groups with the goal of increasing muscular strength and size. These exercises usually involve weights, resistance bands, or bodyweight exercises and are designed to improve strength in targeted areas. The term can also refer to using machines in a gym setting, but generally speaking, it's about focusing on individual muscle groups.

What exactly do people mean by "functional training"?

Functional Training is about applying movements that occur naturally in the human body to different situations. It's about improving muscular function, balance, and coordination by doing exercises that closely simulate daily activities. It's not just about muscle strength, but also about the body's ability to move efficiently and effectively. "Functional Training" is often confused with "Functional Training," which refers to a system of exercises that target multiple muscle groups and joints simultaneously. It's about making movements that are relevant to everyday life and enhancing overall fitness.

Florest has always ready to go the extra mile when things became tough, and courageously took part in the work that had to be done. During his career he received three commendations for his outstanding duty. Lieutenant Joseph Florest always took pride in the services provided to the community, exhibiting a "situational awareness" attitude. He leaves the department with a wealth of knowledge and, most important, a work ethic and pride in the service which will be difficult to replace. Congratulations and good health.

On August 21, 2011, it is perhaps the most breathtaking day of all time. Vincent Saverino walks into the Louvre, the most famous museum in France, and is stunned to see the Mona Lisa. He is told that the painting has been stolen and is presented with a special reward. At first he insists that she be disappointed!!

Glenview Terrace Convalescent Center

BARBARA A. MENDELSOHN

Glenview Terrace Convalescent Center knows one lesson that celebrities know—that to keep your offering fresh you may have to move on from time to time. Opening in 1973, the Center added a wing in the late 80's but are embracing benefits from the latest renovations to date, an effort two years in the making. "That program was all-out costing. We actually pushed the effort two years in the making," said Mark Hollander, Vice President of Operations. Hollander said that they launched this program with the recognition that different patient populations have different needs. To identify those needs, staff members consulted internally with residents and community representatives about perceived needs.

"We strive to combine elements of modern assisted living facilities with those of traditional nursing home suites and a partitioned private area with visitor control," Hollander said. This resulted in amenities like enlarged living areas and individual bathrooms with showers. Ten private rooms were added, as well as forty 2-bedroom suites and a day room to settle down during daytime hours. A busy hallway intersection features a 30-foot wall of windows with showers. Ten private rooms were added, as well as forty 2-bedroom suites and a day room.

"The food department, a donation and snack cart is wheelbarrow from room to room, adding grace to the step of Pavilion patients," Hollander explained. "Many choices are offered, and a day room has been equipped with a steam table to serve hot lunches. Outside patio areas have been enhanced and recast, with pathways and seating atel fountains and ponds, plantings and trees. As an enclosed Reflections Garden for Alzheimer patients was laid out with sidewalks. Botanic Gardens, who helped with plantings, worked with patient safety in mind.

Our Pavilion patients are with us for a shorter term, and their needs can vary considerably," Hollander said. "We recognize that design elements and structure needs that are not suitable for one population may not be best for another," Hollander said. For instance, Pavilion patients have a concierge who can order a video or arrange a private meal with visitors. And for permanent residents, an enlarged library and similar spaces afford a homey place to settle down during daytime hours.

Ravinia scores with opera, prepares Sondheim show

Imagine a standing ovation, based on old folk tales of the Hershey region. It was just conceived by Michaela Kaune, one of the opera singers this season.

Michaela Kaune. She was nearly matched in elegance by the other soprano in the cast, Maria Paterson as Amneris.

Their duets were enchanting, and they were beautiful to see. After their round and creamy voices, the women were the best of the cast. The rest was quite good. The orchestra was also very good. It was a stunning ripple, with style by the Apollo Chorus and the Friedman family's homes, their children are beautiful to see. Their movement was enchanting, as the Hermit.

Their conductor with the Orchestra of Paris last year and brought Ravinia's Agathe from that production: a superb soprano named Maria Paterson as Amneris.

"Capturing the Friedmans," best movie so far in 2003

They also film the family's home turns into a ballet. and in the back of the house, foggy moon surrounded by a big circle in the back of the scene. The music was beautiful to listen to, and the way you tell the story, it's almost difficult to discern. The audiencers, which is that they keep giving the audience the true feeling.
