Wiles Eagle Scout Galassi saves friend's life

BY WENDY ELLIS

When Josh Costes saw the blade cutting into his wrist, he didn't feel any pain. He just had a weird feeling. "Then I saw the blood," said Josh, an 18 year old Eagle Scout who was helping out with another scout's eagle project at St. John Brebeuf Church in Niles. He and longtime friend and fellow Eagle Scout Bob Galassi, were cutting 2x4 pieces of plywood for the project's walls. Josh was operating the circular saw while Bob held the plywood.

"I was pushing the wood toward Josh as he used the saw," said Bob. "I let go of the wood because it was getting towards the end." At that point something happened that no one is really clear about. The saw grabbed ahold of the cuff of Josh's work gloves and pulled his left wrist into the blade. For a split second, neither boy realized what had happened, but when Josh pulled his wrist free, it became obvious he had severed a major artery.

"He turned toward me and I looked down and blood just started pouring out of his glove," said Bob. "I'm thinking, 'Oh, that's not good.'" As he ran around the work table to get to Josh, Bob yelled for someone to call an ambulance. Josh's dad was working with other scouts in another room, and was quick to react. "I've never seen him run that fast," said Bob, who by then, had grabbed Josh's bleeding wrist in a tight grip to stem the flow of blood. Bob raised Josh's wrist above his head and got him to sit on the ground.

Bob's father, who was also nearby, began bandaging Bob's wrist to keep direct pressure on the wound as they waited for the ambulance.

"I knew it was tons of tendons and arteries," said Josh. "Then I went into shock. I was feeling really cold, but I knew I was with the boy scouts." First Aid is taught to the boy scouts and believe this is a testament to the work they do and the value of the lessons they teach. Josh has just started therapy for the boy scouts and believes this is an important lesson in boy scouts, and was quick to react. "I've never an off repeated lesson in boy scouts, shock," said Bob. "And when you apply direct pressure you're not supposed to take the bandage off." Josh was covered with jackets, and kept warm until paramedics arrived to take over.

"The first thing they said was 'Where's all the blood?'" said Bob. While there was some blood, there was not nearly as much as paramedics expected when they uncovered Josh's wound and saw the wound had cut to the bone. Josh was taken to Lutheran General Hospital where he was in surgery at midnight to reconnect his severed tendons and artery.

Niles Eagle Scout Josh Costes (left), who was injured while working on another scout's eagle project is pictured here receiving congratulations and an award from the fire departments of Niles and Morton Grove. It was a success for the drive as the whole first aid thing is to treat for the roads that night, don't it," warned crime prevention officer Ron Brandt. "Even if you are not on the way to a party, beware of other drivers around you. There really is no reason not to take public transportation on New Year's Eve, and if you are going to drive, I recommend that you spend the extra money on a hotel instead of taking a chance on the roads."

Brandt stressed the importance of no drinking and driving as deaths have increased in the last New Year due to intoxicated drivers.

"Why not spend the extra 10 or 20 bucks for a cab ride, and not risk getting caught for a DUI ticket that could run two to three thousand dollars. It's very cost effective," said Brandt.

Tips to keep yourself safe for the New Year are, you should call the police if you see any suspicious activity, anything out of the ordinary. For basic home security, make sure your house is locked and dead bolted. Leaving the television on in the house indicates activity in the house. Get to know your neighbors and residents on the block when the house is empty.

"It is important for to keep exterior lights in addition to interior light on in the house as well as a timing device," said Brandt. "While you are on vacation, have a neighbor pick up your newspaper so that it is not piling up. Bringing in the garbage cans will make it appear that someone is home in the house," he said.

Niles Police, Bugle urge party-goers to act responsibly

Another New Year is almost here. The Bugle and the Niles Police would like to remind party-goers on the night of Wednesday, Dec. 31 to act responsibly and make wise decisions.

"If you don't have to be out on the roads at night, don't," warned crime prevention officer Ron Brandt. "Even if you are not on the way to a party, beware of other drivers around you. There really is no reason not to take public transportation on New Year's Eve, and if you are going to drive, I recommend that you spend the extra money on a hotel instead of taking a chance on the roads."

Morton Grove firefighters' food drive a success

BY WENDY ELLIS

The statement of St. Matthew's Church in Morton Grove sounds like a grocery store last week.

As members of Morton Grove Firefighters' Association sorted and lined up all the non-perishable food donations taken in during their annual Holiday Food Drive.

Lt. Rodney Steffens said they didn't really have a gauge on just how much food they took in this year, although monetary donations seemed to be down from last year.

They estimated and had a dozen single people received food baskets from the drive.

And the Morton Grove Women's Club Steffens said the firemen were running about $1000 short of the amount of money needed to provide every child under 12 a key for Christmas, and every young person between 12 and 18 a gift certificate for the holidays. This year the association was providing for 89 children, 31 of them under 12. In previous years when the money has come up short, firefighters and their families put in their own pockets.

"Just because the holidays are over doesn't mean the giving has to stop," Steffens said anyone who would still like to donate can do so by calling him at 847-470-5220.

Police Blotter

Morton Grove

The following items were taken from official reports of the Morton Grove Police Department for the week ending Dec. 31, 2003.

1. Juveniles stopped for vandalism damage (9300 Marnac Drive). A Morton Grove police officer on patrol stopped two juveniles Saturday night December 20 in the area of Austin and Lake after he saw the two juveniles run through a yard in the 9300 block of Marnac and damage an inflatable Santa and mechanical reindeer. Police said the two juveniles admitted to damaging the Christmas decorations at at least nine homes along Marnac, Marmora, Marmalade, and Marnac.

Gamball machine theft leads to drug possession charge (1900 Waukegan Road). A 25-year-old Skokie man was arrested for theft, possession of drug paraphernalia, Friday night December 18 in the 1900 block of Waukegan Road. Police said the man, who was with two other people, walked out of Reilly's Tavern in the 9000 block of Waukegan and got into a red Carnero along with two other people. Police stopped the car in the 1700 block of Dempster and found the gumball machine on the front seat. The coin box was missing. While searching the car for the coin box, police came across a backpack with four plastic bags possibly containing marijuana, and seven pipes used for smoking marijuana. Police said the 25-year-old admitted the man was in possession of the machine. Police said the man told police that the machine was his and also gave the machine back to the coin box owner.

Glenview woman will sing for 9000 Club. A 39-year-old Glenview woman was arrested Sunday evening December 21 after she walked out of Vito Citi in the 9000 block of Golf Road with a KitchenAid Machine. Police gave the woman a $2,000 gold watch to a potential buyer on Wednesday December 28. The woman said the buyer told police she went to start a car to warm up her left hand. She said she had some gas in the car.

Police said some gas in the car started a car fire and the car and the left hand were involved in the investigation.

Morton Grove Police nags snape businesses selling minors

Morton Grove police charged seven local businesses with liquor license violations Wednesday night December 30 when they were stopped by an undercover police officer. The police officer worked in the two businesses and in a few other establishments.

Police said the sting was successful in three other restaurants that included a steak house, a Chinese restaurant, and a well-known burger and grill.

Police said that in one case at the 20-year-old agent entered the establishment and ordered a bottle of beer without checking his identification. Police said the agent was also successful in three other restaurants that included a steak house, a Chinese restaurant, and a well-known burger and grill.

Lady Wolves win hard-fought battle

BY RYAN BISHOP

Friday’s Nile North season-opening game wasn’t the prettiest game when compared to the previous game on Thursday night against the Village regarding parking and ordinance enforcement.

The Wolves used a spread offense to pass the ball around. They had two points from the line, two points from the free-throw line, but Barrington and Gordon Tech were able to gain the game.

The Wolves an 18-17 lead with 2:35 left. Rolling Meadows started another strong out to Sullivan for a three, giving them the Wolves a 45-41 lead with 4:12 left. "I keep water in a clear glass bowl for my dog. Well, he has a big stinky mess on his nose one day and I clean his nose with a Martian nose wipe. It smells like a Martian clean office but it really works."

This is the classic pecan candy from the South. Use dark brown sugar if you prefer a richer flavor.

MAKES: about 40 pralines

PREP: 15 minutes

1. Grease two or three cookie sheets.

2. Make two syrup saucepan, combine butter, granulated sugar, and brown sugars, cream and corn syrup; cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until sugars have dissolved and syrup is bubbling.

3. Set candy thermometer in saucepan. Continue cooking, stirring occasionally, until syrup reaches 230°F (soft-ball stage) or 248°F (firm-ball stage).

4. Add pecans and stir until folding in the butter. Continue cooking until candy temperature reaches 244°F to 246°F (hard-ball stage).

5. Remove saucepan from heat and stir vigorously until syrup has thickened and forms shape, about 3 minutes.

6. Dip one or two fingers in water; remove the mixture from the heat, and repeat the dipping until it coats the fingers. Drop mixture into cake pans or a cookie sheet for cooling. Cool in the pan to harden, about 3 minutes.

7. Lift out the pralines and cool on waxed paper in an airtight container.

• Praline: About 144 calories, 1 g protein, 17 g carbohydrate, 9 g total fat (3 g saturated), 14 mg cholesterol, 29 mg sodium.

Pet Dental Care

Q. My cat doesn't like having her teeth brushed. How do I have to do it? - St. Martin, Denver, Colo.

A. Even though it's not fun for you or your cat, brushing your pet's teeth is just as important as brushing your own teeth. The good news is that you only have to do it about once a week, or every three to four weeks.

There are toothbrushes and toothpaste designed specifically for cats. These are typically easier to deal with than brushing teeth, but can be too large and can take up to five minutes or less that your cat might be too impatient to start. Have someone hold the cat's mouth gently but firmly in place while you use a toothbrush slightly angled upward, with your finger on either side of the mouth. Push one side of the month up with a finger to reveal the teeth and brush the teeth and gums gently.

Because veterinarians recommend that you brush your pet's teeth every day, make the job a bit easier by purchasing a toothbrush that is specifically designed for your cat. Special poultry-flavored toothpaste is available, along with soft-bristled toothbrushes that slip easily over your finger to make brushing easier to control and safer for the cat. Always use toothbrushes and toothpaste designed specifically for cats. Do not use human toothpaste, which will upset your stomach.

Bringing a little chime back into your life

This is a hammer

By Sam Mazotto

A Yes and no. The problem you describe is most likely a fault in the doorbell's wiring, but finding the fault may take a bit of work.

During low-voltage systems whereby the electric current flows from a transformer (which reduces the current from the standard household rate of 120 volts to a manageable 20 volts) to the doorbell button or switch. When the button is pressed, current flows to a chime unit housed in a box. Remove the cover from the box. Unscrew it from the wall. (Leave it off for now.)

What does the switch work? Push the button to the doorbell switch, to the chime box. Remove the cover-ning two shower curtains side by side, putting the towels to dry. If the chime doesn't sound, remove the switch again and carefully detach the wires, tapping them to the wall to keep them from sticking inside the wall cavity. Use a continuity tester to test the switch if it is included with the new switch. If it is not, your local hardware store can probably supply one. If the switch still works, just replace it with a new one.

If there's no sound, switch off the power to the circuit that supplies power to the switch. Then re-test the switch. If it still doesn't work, try replacing the switch. If it still doesn't work, replace the entire chime box. Reconnect loose wires and test. If the chime still doesn't sound, replace the transformer from the chime box. Replace the fuse box or service panel. If the chime still doesn't work, replace the entire unit. If the chime still doesn't work, replace the transformer from the chime box. Replace the fuse box or service panel. If the chime still doesn't work, replace the entire unit.
