Village to host special meeting on disaster aid

By TONY BERTICCA

The village of Niles will soon host a special public meeting to discuss concerns about what they should do in the light of the recent FEMA announcement that the National Flood Insurance Program will no longer cover flood damage in Cook County.

The declaration, which came two months after a final flooding that occurred last week, could make some Niles residents and others who live in Cook County subject to federal funds.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Niles Center Community Center, 7501 Grossdale Road.

Kotowski, Sweeney square off in 33rd Illinois Senate contest

by JENNIFER JOHNSON john@pioneerlocal.com

The GOP Senate candidate says he has lived in the district since 1981 and knows the issues. Kotowski says he has representation and helps constituents. "We are not going to take for granted that we are elected, and we will do our best to help every constituent," he said.

Kotowski, a Democrat, says he is not afraid to take on the Republicanopoly, saying, "I want to work for the people, and I will be a strong advocate for the people of Illinois."

The race is not without controversy, with Kotowski accusing Sweeney of being too cautious and not taking on the state's problems.

"I don't think the state is doing enough to address the budget crisis," Kotowski said. "We need to address the budget crisis, and we need to do it now."

Sweeney, on the other hand, says he is the only candidate who has a plan to fix the state's budget crisis.

"I have a plan to fix the budget crisis, and I will do it," Sweeney said. "I will not be afraid to take on the state's problems, and I will do it."

The 41st Ward Zoning Advisory Board approved a zoning upgrade at its Oct. 1 meeting for two condominiums above a proposed chiropractic clinic at 6139 W Touhy Ave., Chicago, along the Niles border, among other things, including a clause prohibiting residential units on the first floor — the board voted 3-0 in favor of the request. The proposal will next go to the City Council Committee on Zoning, then on to the full City Council.

Chiropactor agrees to limit first floor to office

By ALAN SCHMIDT

His original plans were to have the office on the first floor of a building in the area. After reviewing a complaint, the board voted 3-0 in favor of the request. The proposal will next go to the City Council Committee on Zoning, then on to the full City Council.

Re-elect Durbin to the Senate

The choice is clear. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-Illinois) has been a strong advocate for the people of Illinois. He understands the issues that matter to our state and has the experience and knowledge to make tough decisions on behalf of Illinois taxpayers. He has been a strong voice for Illinois families, working to ensure that our children have access to a quality education, our seniors have affordable healthcare, and our communities are safe and secure.

Durbin has been a steadfast defender of Medicare and Social Security, and he has fought to ensure that Illinois families have access to affordable health care. He has worked to protect our environment, including our drinking water, and he has been a strong advocate for our military and veterans.

Durbin has also been a leader on issues of national importance, including immigration reform, and he has been a strong voice for diversity and inclusion. He has been a champion of the middle class, and he has worked to ensure that everyone has the opportunity to succeed.

The choice is clear. Dick Durbin has earned a second term in the Senate. Please join me in re-electing Sen. Dick Durbin to the Senate, and let’s continue to work together to make Illinois a better place for all of us.

TOBACCO TROUBLES

The withdrawal of nicotine patches from sales at the local drugstore due to a federal mandate has left some customers scrambling for alternative ways to quit smoking.

"I've tried quitting many times, and I always end up back at the same place," said one customer.

Another customer, who preferred to remain anonymous, stated, "I've been smoking for years, and I just can't seem to break the habit."

Despite the challenges, there are several resources available to help individuals quit smoking.

The American Lung Association offers free quitline services, and the local health department provides smoking cessation classes.

For more information, visit the American Lung Association website or contact your local health department.

The maid of dishonor

BRUCE INGRAM

FILM CRITIC

Rachel Getting Married

Rehabbed from rehab on a weekend pass so she can assist her sister's wedding, the flowergirl, hardened has now left Kym, already ticked off at her, short car ride with her father, in a convenience store where a clerk looks up and shouts embarrassedly: "Hey, didn't I see you on 'Dog!'" Kym (Anna Paquin, achieving the antithesis of her great get role in "The Princess Diaries") may be no more satisfying in her community, but she's more immersed with her friends and family who have gathered in her father's Connecticut estate. They have seen her go in and out of treatment for years, wreaking havoc in her family, and most of them have given up on her long ago. And that appears to be true with Kym. She seems to thrive on the hostility. She definitely doesn't want to find peace.

Working from a debut screenplay by extreme Jerri Lani, daughter of director Sidney Lumet, which emphasizes naturalistic elements over histrionic plot, manipulation, director Jonathan Demme ("Silence of the Lambs," "Philadelphia") does his best to make us feel that we're not as much watching this story as we are participating in it. And that's not always a comfortable feeling. With Robert Altman's ("A Wedding" in mind and deliberately aiming for a less, impressionistic Ab- con-experiencing atmosphere), Demme assembled a large ensemble including many of his own friends and family and encouraged them to be spontaneous. After shooting several documentaries in the past few years, he decided to shoot the film like a cross between a documentary and a home movie. Many of the scenes were re-taped before shooting and the handheld camera envelopes and accommodates the most pictorial of dramas.

She even finds a way to envelop and accommodate the most pictorial of dramas. The maid of dishonor, who would happily drag the whole world into her suffering, Hathaway, finding a way to make her sympathetic in a complex, multi-layered performance that's so easily to be remembered when dealing with the Oscar nominations are handed out. She even finds a way to suggest that somewhere along the way she may be a little healing in store for Kym.

ART

"WARNING SIGNS: ARTWORK BY ALAN LERNER AND AVIVA ALTER"

By MYRNA PETLICKI

It doesn’t take long to figure out where Alan Lerner and Aviva Alter stand on war. Any war.

The Chicago couple’s passionate dedication to peace is apparent in conversations, the way they live their lives and especially in their artwork.

Lerner’s screen prints and Alter’s fabric pieces address other ills of our society, too, in their joint exhibit "Warning Signs."

"It feels particularly necessary right now for us to be speaking in terms of somewhat defining the state of affairs around the world," Lerner said. "War seems to be a constant in our lives ever since the war on terror began."

Many of Lerner’s screen prints combine ink drawings, gouache and collage. Some elements might appear incompatible at first glance but further study reveals a purpose to each piece of the puzzle. One particularly striking work, "First Amendment Muzzle Malaria or Is there a Silencer in the House?" features a muzzled dog among its images.

"Part of the process of doing these pieces was like making music because it involved a lot of improvisation," Lerner said. "I would print or draw initially one large strong image. One of the things that is a thread throughout the work is the idea of a strongman and strong arm—which is basically a comment on the type of diplomacy we’ve been experiencing the last seven years." A heavily-encumbered arm appears in a number of works. The effects of technology on nature are also represented.

"Many pieces include cut-up portions of previous works by Lerner, in order to create 'a kaleidoscope of different events,'" Lerner said. "It’s also kind of like a journal of some of my works over the past five years."

Alter’s work

Alter’s current body of work is titled "Sensational."

Energy Efficient

They don't make the world go around, but windows do help you see it better. Today's high-tech windows are much more than tightly framed panes of glass. New windows and a high efficiency furnace can save enough energy costs to pay for themselves. »Page 2

Balances energy efficiency with modern materials, style

BY PAUL EHRINGBERG

Everybody likes a room with a view, yet subconsciously we're aware of the energy efficiency that comes into play with the different types of glass that are available today. There’s a balancing act that comes into play when choosing those two concepts that focus on a major part of one’s home, albeit an often unseen one.

Depending on what they’re looking for, homeowners can add to their enjoyment of their windows by choosing the right window types. But they can also be a main source of losses, letting cold winter air into the home or allowing one’s cool air-conditioned atmosphere to dissipate outside.

“People are trying to keep their homes historically correct, so it's a good insulator,” he said. “And while many outlets are featuring the wonders of triple-pane Windows, which offer better Insulation than double or single pane windows, there’s a drawback to style.”

Goodman said, “With the triple pane glass, the downside is that it gets very heavy and can cause problems with the overall design of your home.”

style and efficiency.

“Wood is naturally porous, so it’s a good insulator,” he said. “And while many outlets are featuring the wonders of triple-pane Windows, which offer better insulation than double or single pane windows, there’s a drawback to style.”

Goodman said, “With the triple pane glass, the downside is that it gets very heavy and can cause problems with the overall design of your home.”

“We are seeing more demand for different style and efficiency,” he said.

But at the same time, there is the marketplace for Marvin, and admittedly it’s a much easier decision. Our customers are definitely more conscious of energy efficiency these days,” he said.

Bill Goodman, sales manager for Marvin Design Gallery, noted that many homeowners are going with Marvin windows, and admittingly that is narrowing the field. While the gap between styles and efficiency continues to narrow, for years, the options were limited. High-tech temps
New furnace models offer utility savings

BY PAUL EISENBEG

Replacing fuel costs and a growing sense of environmental consciousness are making homeowners think green when it comes to investing in their home is heated.

High-efficiency furnaces mean less CO₂ emissions and dramatically lower energy bills when compared to furnaces made as recently as 20 years ago. According to the VI'C., the minimum standard of 78 percent efficiency to be achieved on new furnaces built into homes in January 2006, according to the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers.

‘New furnace models offer utility savings’

The national average is 60 percent efficiency, but new furnaces can offer 96.5 percent efficiency. Owners can opt for furnaces with as much as a 50 to 60 percent efficiency made back in 10 years ago.

When buying their heating and cooling equipment, homeowners should take the time to select the best furnace for their home. Selecting a good reliable HVAC&R contractor can help compare energy usage. Some companies have lived their life and need to be replaced, other homeowners are looking for better efficiency.

For the most part we are in most people opting for higher efficiency. People are definitely doing that whenever possible,” Lueder said. With amenities typically spending 65 cents of every dollar they pay on energy bills for "space conditioning," Lueder said when it is time to replace or add a furnace, homeowners should consider selecting a furnace that offers the best performance.

"If you're looking to upgrade your existing systems, there's definitely doing that whenever possible," Grove Village, said it works with homeowners to help make the process of selecting a new furnace as easy as possible.

You can look at the efficiency rating kind of like a $1. With an 80 percent efficiency furnace, you are wasting 20 cents of every dollar. With a 96 percent efficiency furnace, you are only spending 4 cents of every dollar. Your HVAC&R contractor can help you determine how long it will take for you to recoup your initial investment through energy savings.

High-efficiency furnaces capture the heat they create instead of venting it up and out of the chimney. A new furnace will help a homeowner winter at a lower temperature while programmable thermostat gives homeowners the ability lower the thermostat and still be comfortable at a slightly lower temperature.

Kitchen countertops evolve, add authentic designer looks

BY CAROLE NAPOLI

Looking to add a little pizzazz to your kitchen? Think countertops.
Homeowners are flooded with a wide selection of countertop options for every taste and every budget.

"Stone is always popular," said Wayne Carlson, co-owner of Canson Custom Countertops in Boston. "Also solid surface never has gone out of style." Many traditional surface options offer the strength and durability of stone, combined with the added benefit of anti-bacterial properties.

Corian and Zodiac are among the growing group of hard surfaces in the solid surface countertop market.

"Solid surface countertops are stunning. They don't need to be sealed. We can take integral one piece joints and integral one piece backsplashes, very hygienic. The material is renewable and can be sanded off and brought back to its original look. It's also repairable," Carlson said.

These types of countertops also come with a warranty of at least 10 years.

Solid surface countertops are completely renewable, similar to a hardwood floor. The color and material is said of the way through, meaning the surface can be sanded down and brought back to its original beauty.

Canson said people are trending toward getting a whole new look in your kitchen without spending a whole lot of money, "I think colors are changing from the darker past is long gone. "Changing your countertop is a great way to get a whole new look in your kitchen without spending a whole lot of money," Carlson said.

Gary Burns, of Superior Cabinet Supply Inc. in Frankfort, said his customers prefer high-definition laminate with a beveled edge.

"Laminate has come a long way from the avocado and harvest gold countertops from the 1970s. Brands like Formica, Wilson Art, Pionite and Nevamar have taken laminate to new levels with colors and textures that simulate the look of natural stones.

A natural stone countertop can bring the black beam of the past is long gone. Laminate offers beauty at a cost conscious price point. It is easy to clean, easy to maintain, and when the time comes, easy to remove. While laminate may be able to simulate natural stone, many buyers still find the beauty only a natural stone countertop like granite can bring to your kitchen.

Granite offers the convenience of a hard surface that is difficult to stain and resistant to heat. It is easy to clean and easy to maintain. Periodic sealing, which can be done by the homeowner, helps keep stains and germs out of the porous surface. With so many options and price points available, there is a designer style countertop out there for everyone.

Tub time

Hot tubs take chill out of winter months

BY PAUL EISENBEEG

It’s the dead of winter, temperatures are sub-freezing and are continuing to fall. Outside, the crystallizing snow is falling out of cloud cover so light that stars are twinkling through. Cobwebs are tingling in the breeze, and the same old, old television shows offer no relief. What to do?

For some people, the answer is obvious. Put on a bathing suit and head out to a steaming hot tub with water churning at a soul-warming temperature of 100 degrees. Hot tubs are a perfect cure for cabin fever, and can be therapeutic in many other ways as well.

Bob Jones of American Sales with locations in Bridgeview, Naperville and Romeoville, said hot tubs are a great addition to any outdoor area because they can be used year-round. In the summer, many people choose to lower the water temperature, and during the wintertime months, the outdoor units come with special freeze-protection devices that monitor outdoor temperatures and adjust the temperature of the water accordingly.

“There’s no month that you can’t use your hot tub,” he said, “even January.”

While some hot tubs are designed for indoor use, people

Today's fireplaces offer many options to choose from

By Paul Eisenberg

There's an inherent hip-ness factor to fireplaces, along with stumping into a flame, that draws people that bring with it the allure of indoor outdoor living with comfort and warmth, but was an expensive proposition.

And so, Jones said, most of the outdoor fireplaces he sells are for outdoor use only, and can add a decorative element to any outdoor, more and more people are adding outdoor fireplaces to their patios.

Bob Jones, president of American Sale, said that while indoor fireplaces can add a decorative element to any indoor, more and more people are adding outdoor fireplaces to their patios.

Fall plantings

BY CARRIE NAPOLIO

Fall is one of the most beautiful times of year to plant flowers. While springtime is often the focus for gardeners, fall is a great time to add color and interest to the landscape.

Clifford Miller, owner of PCM Landscape Design in Lake Bluff, said he recommends “those with ornamental cabbage-type plants, mums and asters do remain the favorite—or at least the most well known—of all fall flowering plants. Brilliant blooms in harvest colors of gold, rust and orange beckon the season to come. However, whether or not to plant the blossoming branches or use them in landscape is up to the gardener. ‘Most people use them as annuals and put them in the garden,’ Miller said.

Generally speaking fall is a great time to plant trees, mums and shrubs or move them in the landscape. While some gardeners are getting a jump on the season, Miller said, there are a few varieties of annuals that can tolerate the chill of fall weather. Ornamental kale and coleus can flourish and add texture to a fall landscape. Glad you can find them, cut blooms in December and don’t get it a head start. Miller suggested “annual kale and ornamental kale, add them in and order in a fall landscape. Fall is a great time to plant trees, mums and shrubs or move them in the landscape. Fall plantings

Curious Crossover
Volkswagen Tiguan: crouching tiger, hidden iguana
Just Minutes Away... in Evanston
We are located in downtown on Chicago Street
By any name, Tiguan shines in small crossover section

By Jill Ciminillo

What's a Tiguan?

People were constantly asking me the question during the test week because, after the Tiguans first appeared on my radar, I thought they were a nomadic people located in Africa. Well, it does. Kind of.

Every Tiguan comes with the usual airbags and passive safety systems, which includes 45 safety features. Plus, it boasts standard front-rear anti-lock braking and electronic stability program. What's it doing? It's standard. The as-tested price of the test vehicle was $33,205.

The entry-level Tiguan comes as an S model with 19/26 mpg city/highway and dual transmission does garner slightly better numbers for this little SUV. The four-cylinder engine, which is adequate for a vehicle weighing 3,433 pounds, I added some price options like the navigation system with a true backup camera ($1,995) and the panoramic sunroof ($1,150), increasing the base price to $32,215.

The only engine option currently available in the Tiguan is the 2.0-liter, turbocharged four-cylinder that delivers 200 horsepower and 207 pound-feet of torque. It's well suited to the Tiguan's PE, VOLKSWAGEN family. I was, however, slightly bothered with 19/26 mpg city/highway estimates of 18/24 Agency city/highway mileage estimates of 18/24.

Despite the Tiguan's 174.3 inches, the front passenger seat folds flat to allow for taller objects. Total cargo volume with the back seat, you'll nick on an extra $350. It's standard. The as-tested price of the test vehicle was $33,205.

The Tiguan was $7,950 more than the Touareg, they expected the funny name to mean something, but it did keep a nice pace and had decent acceleration. Neither acceleration nor the Tiguan's 0-60 mph time of 8.6 seconds were noted in my notes. But if you are looking to save money, the Tiguan is the 2.0-liter, turbocharged four-cylindere.

Special space

Homebuyers search for fitness, play area rooms

By Marcy Marro
SPECIAL TO THE SUN TIMES NEWS GROUP

From specialty rooms to fitness rooms to kids rooms, homeowners are looking for the best when it comes to building a new home. Specialty rooms that are islands of beauty and fitness areas are high on the wish list for clients of North Shore custom homebuilder Jeff Samuels, president of Samuels Homes.

"We are experiencing increased demand for those specialty areas that differ from most workout areas in that they are an integral part of the master suite," Samuels said. "Custom homes today tend to have master suites that include elaborate dressing rooms, quiet baths and comfortable sitting areas. More and more frequently, the workout room is included, too."

"Specialty rooms are certainly among the reasons for building a true custom home that is highly individual and creatively reflects the interests of the owner," Samuels said.

For more information on Samuels Homes or the home on Sheridan Road, call (847) 480-6476.

Every kid's fantasy is a private clubhouse where no parents are allowed, where messes are tolerated, and where toys don't have to be put away. Jacobs Homes has taken the concept of a kid's tree house or playroom and given it a twist -- a secret door or passageway leading to this kids-only paradise in a custom home they recently built in Highland Park.

"It's a private space just for the kids, where the normal rules of cleaning up aren't as strictly adhered to as in other areas of the house," said Keith Jacobs, president of Jacobs Homes. "It's got that secretive element that makes it fun for the kids, and mom and dad are spared having to stare at..."

work was initially inspired by her great uncle, a military service member, who served as a pilot and died after his plane crashed. After his death, she discovered an old trunk which was sewing-related. It is said she used to see army blouses and jackets modified and emblazoned with carefully stitched phrases like "How Can You Measure Pain?" and "What Is the Last Thing We Fight?". After her paintings, drawings, and ceramic works, starting around the time of the Second World War, she continued exploring the theme of the Art Institute of Chicago for over three years, which was a turning point in her career.

Lerner taught at the School of the Art Institute. From 1995-2000, Lerner taught painting. In the ceramics department of the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. In 2000, he earned an MFA degree.

Lerner completed his military obligation with working full-time as a civilian at a hospital. Meanwhile, he worked for the A.I. Institute, where he was an art director. Then he decided to take a job at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, where he served as an MFA program director.

In addition, the couple created and sold original eco-friendly clothing, through their company, which was named surprisingly "Design Line". Lerner continued teaching and sculpting at Illinois Western High School, a concept-oriented school.

The next year or so, the couple traveled the country selling their work. Afterward, they tried traveling. At the same time, they began working at Loom Street Art Center, eventually becoming directors of the center.

"Then I started to have the need to express myself in a more way," Lerner said. "I was drawn to that by my life or part of my life."

Affording private education pre-k through college

By Gwenda Conner Special to Pioneer Press

As the country recovers from the collapse of Wall Street giants, some major expert private schools are being squeezed as they try to support themselves. However, surprisingly many Chicago suburban private schools find themselves thriving in the nick of time, often boosting enrollments and raising tuition for the first time in recent years. Though some doubt the tighter economic times or diminish the mounting financial concern of students and their families, many private schools are doing just the opposite: they are raising tuition even growing in a shrinking economy.

The exact reasons for this unanticipated turn-in is a matter mentally explained. Louise Konicki, principal of St. Catherine Laboure, a K-8 school in Oakton, speculates that her school’s enrollment is, in fact, higher than it has been in the last ten years as much of the poor economy.

More stay-at-home parents, the experts have stated to work out of necessity as they reorganizing to find other care for their children. St. Catherine’s offers additional care before and after school to its enrolled students.

It could also be that parents, who are under pressure in private education, are learning it is now a more feasible option for their child than they thought the schools would be struggling to support them.

None denies the tighter economic times or diminishes the mounting financial concern of students and their families, many private schools are raising tuition even growing in a shrinking economy.

Schools may, in fact, see this as a traditional source of revenue.

"We say all our students are on financial aid, because not only does the actual cost of educating each student despite some financial aid offered by the schools, full of alumni for support. Some donors with a soft spot for the school, especially in the face of tough budget for discretionary money, don’t be fooled by the school with an active pool of Truman High School in River Forest.

The same is true at St. Catherine’s, where the parent body pays only 50 percent of the cost and the parish subsidizes the remaining 20 percent. In addition to this automatically assessed discounted rate, many parochial schools offer further tuition assistance for those students who are also members of the church. If a student is not considered during the enrollment process, he or she may be reviewed by the parish council.

When that’s not enough, students may apply for need-based scholarships, such as the golf course scholarships and the tuition assistance program.

For those students, the school is often able to provide them with a full-ride scholarship. However, the school might not be able to provide a need-based scholarship.

The private loans once seen as a hardship are now a reality.

"What’s even more amazing is that money is out there for them. There are more scholarships and even more grants and scholarships available. Parents can’t always support their alma mater and sometimes even support the school."
LIU CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY

Private education comes at a cost. Many families are looking for new ways to meet financial needs and ensure their student would not prevent a student from enrolling.

Parents interested in private education are learning it can be a more feasible option for their child as suspected, as the schools will say financial assistance.

More than 96% of 2008 graduates went off to college thanks to an institutional advancement at Trinity. Completing a private, Catholic secondary education can be a more exciting way to learn, offering an exciting and challenging environment.

I want to be someone who leaves her mark. I want to be a person who charts new paths for others. I realize that they are only made powerful by the people surrounding them. To be successful, you need to get out," Biegaj says. "The only financials I would recommend are private school because so many of the students do not have the luxuries the public has. He does admit it's more difficult to meet financial needs in private than the public, but it's worth it to be in the city five days a week. It's his plan to get an apartment in downtown Chicago. The original plan was to stay at home and go downtown, Milton says. "If I actually start, I have never figured out what meetings things are going to. For commuters, it's just as exciting. "The only financials I would recommend are private school because so many of the students do not have the luxuries the public has.

The great college debate: to commute or to live on campus

By Brett Marlow Special to Pioneer Press

As a student trying to decide which path to take after high school, they begin to research their options. Filling out applications and waiting to see what they might be accepted to, they may become overwhelmed. Those planning on attending college in downtown Chicago have another decision to make: to stay on top of it all — should they live downtown and commute to campus or commute from home? For commuters or parents, the decision is easy.

For others, factors such as finances, time and distance are taken into deep considerations. Amanda Coughlin is a 14-year-old freshman at DePaul University. Coughlin says when deciding whether to commute, the two-and-a-half hour trip to her hometown of suburban Matteson or to live on campus, her mom wasn't sure if she wanted to stay downtown and sleep in the dorm life enough. Coughlin just moved to make sure you can afford the dorm life every minute of it. He does admit it's much easier to meet financial needs in private than the public.

Who’s Your Daddy... Or Rather What’s Your Daddy?

By Joanne L. Carion D.V.M.

Have you ever wondered what breeds make up your mixed breed dog? Have you ever looked at your dog’s coat and wondered if she has some German Shepherd in her background? Or has the way your family gets the kids to hold the kids made you suspect she’s part Border Collie?

Perhaps you’ve wondered you dog’s breed mix is your own, or are being asked questions about your pet by friends or family. Maybe you simply want to know a little more about your pet and want to learn about the breed’s that make up your dog.

DNA testing can help answer those questions. Not only can humans be tested to find out their heritage, but dogs can also be tested to find out what breeds make up their heritage. Why should you know? Wanting to know more about your dog can be curious, but the combination of breeds that make up a dog may affect its appearance, behavior, and well-being in many ways.

By analyzing your dog’s DNA to detect breeds in its genetic makeup, it may deepen your insights and is a tool for understanding of your pet. Each breed has its own set of traits, temperament, and health problems. By knowing which breeds your pet has in their genetic makeup, you can learn about the health issues associated with them. Knowing which breeds your pet has in their genetic makeup can help you manage your pet’s health in the best way.

Thru a simple blood test the WISDOM PANEL MIX can detect 134 American Kennel Club recognized breeds. A few weeks later you can learn about the ancestry of your mixed breed dog. You can learn about your pet’s parent’s ancestry and parent’s parents, and great-grandparents ancestry.

Other types of DNA testing are also available which involves a swab of the inside of your dog’s mouth, but not as many breeds are detectable with this type of test.

If you would like to learn more about DNA testing you can ask your veterinarian or visit http://www.wisdomcareanimal.com.
