Maine South football team pulls plane to victory

Niles cops take fundraising crown at Special Olympics fundraiser

BY JENNIFER JOHNSON
jjohnson@pioneerlocal.com | @Jen_Pioneer

Maine South football players celebrate their win in the public division of the Sept. 21 Plane Pull for Special Olympics Illinois. | JENNIFER JOHNSON/SUN-TIMES MEDIA

The Park Ridge Police Department team plays a game of tug-of-war with a 90-ton airbus during the fifth annual Plane Pull benefitting Special Olympics Illinois on Sept. 21. | JENNIFER JOHNSON/SUN-TIMES MEDIA

"They expect us to pull that thing?" came a voice from the back of the shuttle bus as the airplane came into view.

The 90-ton UPS Airbus A300 loomed large over the pavement and everything else in sight outside the Lynxs Cargo Building at O'Hare Airport. It shouldn't have come as too much of a surprise — the members of the Park Ridge and Niles Police Departments knew what they were getting into when they signed up to pull an actual airplane in a contest benefitting Illinois Special Olympics.

And yet....

"We thought it was going to be a lot smaller than this," admitted Niles police Officer Vince Genualdi, captain of the Niles team, his eyes lingering on the airbus parked on the other side of a series of concrete barriers. "It's very intimidating."

In the end, it was the plane that got the better of the Park Ridge Police Department team (thanks to apparent problems with the aircraft's positioning), while the Niles Police Department and a team of Maine South football players each took home special accolades in Saturday's fifth Annual Law Enforcement Torch Run Plane Pull, which raised over $120,000 for Special Olympics Illinois.

With a goal of pulling the 90-ton aircraft 12 feet in as short amount of time as possible, the 20-member Maine South team placed first in the event's open division, accomplishing the feat in just 9.81 seconds.

"It's a great honor because it's for Special Olympics, so it's about donating money and support," said Maine South football coach David Inserra. "The event has grown tremendously. We did it four years ago and there were probably 25 teams. This year there were a little over 60 teams."

To join the competition, the Maine South football players were required to raise at least $1,000, which they did. As winners of the open division, they were presented with a trophy and a chance to take on the winner of the public safety division — the Chicago Police Department team — in the day's final pull. In that competition, it was the police who took home the grand championship with their own time of 9.81 seconds to Maine South's 10.06 seconds.

Niles, meanwhile, ranked first among the 70 participating teams when it came to fundraising, collecting $10,447, all of which will be donated to Illinois Special Olympics.

"I'm ecstatic," said Niles Police Chief Dean Strzelecki of the money raised, explaining that members received a great deal of support from friends, family and local organizations, and used social media to help promote their efforts.

For raising the most money, the Niles team was awarded 20 tickets to Blackhawks exhibition games, which Vince Genualdi said would be donated to a local organization that assists people with special needs.

As the first team to hit the pavement and pick up the rope, the Park Ridge Police Department team encountered a plane that would barely budge.

When it was discovered that the aircraft was on a slight incline, presenting a disadvantage to the team, they were given a second opportunity — but that didn't go much better.

"I felt like I was pulling forever and it just didn't move," sighed Officer Julie Genualdi, wife of Vince and captain of the Park Ridge team.

"It was like moving a mountain," added Sgt. Bob Kampwirth.

The Niles Police Department experienced a similarly stubborn plane, but on the second try cheers erupted when the team managed to pull the airbus 13.22 feet in the 12 seconds that was allotted.

"We're elated that we got it moving," said Niles Deputy Chief Dennis McEnerney. "Once we got it going it was pretty smooth. For something that is 90 tons, we got it moving pretty easily."

Park Ridge, which raised $3,000 for Special Olympics, was given a third opportunity to pull the plane once the kinks in the setup were fixed, but members, some of them with other commitments, declined.

"We don't have a third pull in us, that's for sure," Genualdi said. "At least we turned out and did it. And at least we know it was broken," she added with a laugh.

Other members of the department also took the snafu in stride.

"It was a great experience. We're here more for the cause of Special Olympics than how we do," said Park Ridge Police Officer Daniel Kearns. "It's not a disappointment as long as we help out the kids."

Just having Park Ridge police officers participate in the Plane Pull became an issue that was raised at an August City Council meeting when Mayor David Schmidt questioned if the city would be open to workers' compensation claims if an officer was hurt. A legal opinion determined the city would not be liable since the officers participate on their own time, but Chief Frank Kaminski had said there were no plans for officers to take part.

Julie Genualdi explained that in past years, members of the Maine South football team largely made up the team, but this year the players formed their own team, allowing members of the police department and three non-employees to pull as a group.

The Plane Pull is one of four events that are part of the yearly Law Enforcement Torch Run. Police officers around the state also participate in a Polar Plunge, climb up on the rooftops of Dunkin' Donuts stores and carry the torch in a community run, all benefitting Special Olympics Illinois.

Residents with water bill explosions can seek reprieve

BY NATASHA WASINSKI
For Sun-Times Media | @natwaz

Not all may be lost for Niles residents surprised by increased water bills.

Under new procedures adopted by the Village Board last month, eligible consumers can recoup up to $500 for higher-than-average charges for water due to leaks.

Homeowners, nonprofits and taxing bodies may request a hearing for a lowered payment if the water reading on their quarterly statement exceeds the average amount of water used in the past two years by 75 percent.

Applicants must also demonstrate that a leak was the culprit and make repairs. Before issuing a refund, finance staff would monitor the property's water usage to verify consumption had returned to normal levels.

Commercial, industrial and rental properties are ineligible for the utility payment deduction, and residents may only apply for relief once in a three-year period.

The new protocol also puts the village's Finance Committee in charge of billing disputes.

Previously, an appeals board comprised of an appointed trustee, the village manager, finance director, director of code enforcement and assistant finance director was charged with addressing complaints, despite the village not offering water payment relief for leakage.

Most consumers' appeals, however, are related to leak situations, staff reported. The village receives between 10 and 20 inquiries a year regarding charges for excessive losses of water.

Finance Director Scot Neukirch said the water appeals board had not convened in a few years since staff successfully handled all other billing inquiries.

He recommended the existing Finance Committee take over reviewing appeals since members met on a more regular basis than the defunct board.

The Village Board approved the transfer of duties, withstanding a bid by Trustee Chris Hanusiak to keep an appeals board intact to maintain a "separation of powers" between committees.

Hanusiak cast the sole "no" vote for the ordinance change.

Leaks or not, all Niles households and businesses have been paying more for water since June, when a new municipal rate went into effect.

Officials approved the 10 percent bump in cost per 1,000 gallons ₇ from $6.06 to $6.67 ₇ following Chicago's plans to charge more for its water supply over the next three years.

Water rates in Niles have gone up every year since 1995.

Men charged with stealing bar and street signs in Niles

BY JENNIFER JOHNSON
jjohnson@pioneerlocal.com | @Jen_Pioneer

Two men stand accused of stealing a signs from a Niles sports bar and along the side of a nearby road.

Daniel Knapik, 37, of 131 S. Elm St., Northlake; and Michal Sciog, 37, of 4331 N. Mason, Chicago, were each charged with theft Sept. 15 after Niles police responded to a call of a man carrying a "Do Not Enter" sign that had been allegedly stolen from Playbook Sports Bar, 6913 N. Milwaukee Ave.

Police said the anonymous caller also saw the men walking east on Harts Road and removing an Illinois Department of Transportation bicycle sign at 3:40 a.m.

When police arrived, an officer reportedly observed the men dropping both signs behind a guard rail on the south side of the 6800 block of Harts Road. According to police, it was Sciog who admitted to taking the sign from the sports bar and that he and Knapik removed the IDOT sign on Harts Road.

The sign belonging to Playbook was returned to the establishment and management opted not to sign complaints against Knapik and Sciog, police said.

Both men were released on bond and have an Oct. 22 court date.

Vietnam vet's crumbling roof repaired

Morton Grove, Rebuilding Together and Sears work together to fix home

BY RICK KAMBIC
rkambic@pioneerlocal.com | @rick_kambic

Morton Grove resident John O'Neill couldn't afford a new roof and was facing a hefty village fine until Sears agreed to pay for the replacement because he's a veteran on a small budget. | RICK KAMBIC/SUN-TIMES MEDIA

John O'Neill has needed a new roof for several years, but he's on a fixed income and medical problems have taken higher financial priority.

The 65-year-old Vietnam veteran drove dump trucks for most of his life until being laid off four years ago. After traveling the country driving various types of trucks, O'Neill moved back to Morton Grove in 1977 and spent most of his modest income paying off his mortgage and going fishing.

In 2012, O'Neill was given a ticket for having a hazardous and unsightly roof. The fine compounded for a year because O'Neill survives on $1,300 per month from the United States Department of Veterans Affairs and he couldn't afford an $8,500 new roof.

With a fine nearly as pricy as a new roof, a number of charities and social services worked together this summer to give O'Neill a legal, safe roof for the house his parents bought in 1929.

The rescue began in May, when a concerned Morton Grove employee contacted village social worker Mary Senn. By June, Senn helped O'Neill file an application for financial help with nonprofit organization Rebuilding Together.

The group works with needy residents of north suburban Chicago by sending volunteers to do small projects like sink replacements, clutter removal and lawn care problems.

"Our greatest goal is to make a homeowner feel cared about, respected and empowered," said Sharon Riley, administrative director of Rebuilding Together. "We want them to remain independent in their homes, both safely and with dignity."

Though the labor is volunteered, the projects range only as far as their volunteers' expertise and the cost of materials.

An $8,500 overhaul was too expensive and complicated for even the nonprofit. However, Rebuilding Together has ties to Sears' $1 million annual "Heroes at Home" charity program and submitted a request on behalf of O'Neill.

By that point, the situation was really eating away at O'Neill.

"A friend invited me to go fishing and barbecue with him on July 4, but I wouldn't leave the house because I was too worried about the roof," O'Neill said. "There are no leaks in the roof and no immediate (structural) problems, but my post-traumatic stress disorder gets me overwhelmed very easily."

O'Neill visits the Captain James A. Lovell Federal Health Care Center in North Chicago twice a week for his PTSD and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, a progressive lung illness that forces O'Neill to use an oxygen tank and inhalers for six to eight months at a time.

"I have some friends at the VA who wouldn't leave their basements for four years until joining our sessions," O'Neill said. "I don't like the small groups because there's too much focus, but I go to big groups where I can hear other people and not feel so alone, and then talk when I feel it's right."

Donald Trieschmann, of Winnetka, is a member of Rebuilding Together's board of directors and specializes in working with Sears on potential "Heroes at Homes" projects.

"We've been fortunate to get 15 projects approved in five years," Trieschmann said. "John (O'Neill) is very qualified and deserving of this help. He left the safety of his home to serve our country and came back with more than we could ever imagine. A new roof is the least we can do for him."

O'Neill's application was approved last month and Rebuilding Together oversaw the Sept. 23 construction on behalf of Sears. O'Hara and Son Roofing Company of Rolling Meadows was contracted after its owner Les O'Hara offer a $1,500 discount.

"I didn't think I was going to survive this," O'Neill said. "I don't have any family and I wasn't about to ask my friends for money. I'm so grateful for this gift."

During the Sept. 23 replacement, excited neighbor Kerry Eischen brought cupcakes for O'Neill and his roofers.

"My son Matthew and daughter Molly love John," Eischen said. "When they see him outside, they rush out the door to tell him their important news, like a lost tooth or the score of a baseball game."

O'Neill has a large side yard and Eischen's kids will often have cartwheel competitions or Nerf gun battles in the open grass.

"He hides the PTSD real well," Eischen said. "He always greets us with a smile. Over time he's shared some stories, and I think he would have earned a few more military awards had he tooted his horn a little. Those awards are given to soldiers who fill out paperwork, but John is much too humble to nominate himself."

During his two-year tour as a Marine, O'Neill was awarded the National Defense Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Medal with device, RVN Cross of Gallantry with palm, Vietnam Service Medal with one star, Combat Action Ribbon and a Rifle Marksmanship Badge.

Sears expects to help 60 retired servicemen in 29 communities nationwide by the end of 2013. The Heroes at Home program is funded by company contributions and donation boxes in Sears and Kmart stores. Approximately $17 million has gone toward veteran-oriented projects over the past 20 years.

"It is our collective honor to assist America's veterans and their families, who have given so much to protect our freedom, by providing the resources necessary so that they can improve their living conditions," said Ron Boire, an executive vice president at Sears Holdings Corporation.

As for O'Neill's hefty fine, Village Attorney Terry Liston said it will probably be waived, because Morton Grove understands the veteran's extenuating circumstances and the government only wants homes in the village to be kept up well. She said local law allows the village administrator to exercise leeway in such situations.

"He does it fairly but rarely," Liston said of Village Administrator Ryan Horne. "This is a success story all around, starting with our social worker Mary Senn. She helped us create a safe neighborhood while also using her connections to help a resident in need."

Library workers under 17 won't show movies

BY RICK KAMBIC
rkambic@pioneerlocal.com | @rick_kambic

The Morton Grove Library now requires its employees to be at least 17-years-old in order to screen movies.

Library Director Pam Leffler announced the policy change on Sept. 19, when library trustees met for their monthly meeting. She also told trustees that the 16-year-old projectionist who was the center of controversy this summer is no longer working at the library, but declined to elaborate further for privacy reasons.

Afterward, Leffler said trustees want the library to abide by Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA) guidelines, even though they're not law.

Furthermore, the board will not pursue charges of ethics and Open Meetings Act violations against individual trustees.

The controversy began on June 25, when Library Trustee Cathy Peters witnessed the teenager showing "The Adventures of Prescilla, Queen of the Desert," an R-rated movie about two drag queens and a transvestite touring the Australian outback.

Peters said she reached out to Leffler with concerns, but after not reaching a solution, Peters reached out to fellow trustees on an individual basis and claimed to have gotten a majority of the board to agree the girl should not have been screening the films.

Peters visited the library when another R-rated movie was shown and found the teen working. Peters asked the girl to wait in the library's office area, and then she approached Acting Director Kevin Justie about finding a different employee to show the film.

Peters claimed her intervention was an emergency situation because the library was not functioning in the best interest of its taxpayers. The standoff lasted for several weeks, and Peters or another trustee visited other R-rated movie screenings to make sure adult employees were in charge of the Baxter Auditorium.

Library Attorney Frank Tennant scolded trustees during their Aug. 18 board meeting, expressing concerns about a potential Open Meetings Act violation and other ethical issues.

After the Sept. 19 board meeting, both Albers and Tennant said there will be no consequences stemming from the standoff.

Library officials still unhappy with building

BY RICK KAMBIC
rkambic@pioneerlocal.com | @rick_kambic

Two years after a controversial expansion plan caused an upheaval on the Morton Grove Library Board, officials are again griping about the state of the building.

To get state funding, library trustees and administrators are required to create a strategic plan and mention certain desires within the application. Board President Mark Albers supported the requirement and said a plan should have been started anyway.

During a Sept. 19 meeting, both employees and trustee discussed the library's strengths, weaknesses, threats and opportunities. The most common item among all surveyed was the library's physical condition, both in size and asbestos-related restrictions.

"There is a group of people who love this building and say 'I love how this feels' when they come in, but it's a drawback when people want small study space or computer labs," Library Director Pam Leffler said. "But we don't have $25 million just laying around, and we're fighting for a small piece of the tax base with the village, Park District and schools."

Library Trustee Arthur Goldstein was part of a former board that advocated for a new library and had potential land and designs picked out before the political group B-PAC swept the 2011 election and put a stop to the plans.

"In the past we talked about having a satellite campus, because we don't serve a lot of the residents west of Waukegan and Washington. That's about half the village's population."

B-PAC was an acronym consisting of Paul Berg, Cathy Peters, Albers and David Calimag's last names. Though Calimag was absent from the meeting, trustees Berg and Peters sat quietly when employee comments and other trustees talked about the library's physical restraints.

In recent months, the library invested more than $60,000 in repairs and the replacement of three furnaces, $31,000 in replacing carpet on the library's lower level and $3,000 in patching portions of the roof.

Albers said the library's strength is community support, and diverse backgrounds on the board of trustees, but its weakness includes an aging building and lack of electrical outlets.

Earlier this summer, Albers went public with a long-term idea that entails the library, park district and village governments jointly building one government complex at Dempster Street and Waukegan Road.

POLICE BLOTTER

The following incidents were listed in the official bulletin of the Niles Police Department. Readers are reminded that an arrest does not constitute a finding of guilt. Only a court of law can make that determination.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT

Richard Fico, 55, of 603 N. Washington Ave., Park Ridge, was charged with disorderly conduct and criminal trespass on Sept. 13 after police responded to a complaint of a man refusing to leave property on the 8000 block of Lyons Street. The resident told police that her relationship with Fico had recently ended and she had repeatedly told him not to return to her home. According to police, Fico was found hiding behind an electrical box in the 8000 block of Foster Lane when he was taken into custody at 10:15 a.m. He has an Oct. 19 court date.

RETAIL THEFT

Waldemar Bajorski, 57, of 3103 N. Dryden Place, Arlington Heights, was charged with retail theft on Sept. 13. Police said Bajorski created barcodes at his home and placed them on merchandise inside a store on the 900 block of Civic Center Drive. He allegedly paid just $11.10 for three items that police said were worth $138.94. According to police, Bajorski was in possession of 19 additional barcodes similar to the ones used in the alleged theft. He has an Oct. 9 court date.

Rameshbhai Patel, 52, of 2215 Ottawa Ave., Des Plaines, was charged with retail theft and contributing to the delinquency of a minor on Sept. 14. According to police, security at a store on the 900 block of Civic Center Drive saw Patel select a household air filter valued at $4.97 and hand it to his 13-year-old daughter along with a paper receipt. The girl then reportedly exited the store with the unpaid item. Police said the receipt actually contained a date of May 27, 2013. The teen was not charged. Patel has an Oct. 9 court date.

DUI

Carmel Epstein, 26, of 2530 Queens Way, Northbrook, was charged with driving under the influence, driving without a valid license and speeding on the morning of Sept. 13. He was taken into custody on the 9000 block of Milwaukee Avenue at 2:25 a.m. He has an Oct. 31 court date.

CRIME BRIEFS

PROPERTY DAMAGE

Three reports of graffiti were made on the morning of Sept. 16 in the area of Washington Avenue and Foster Street.

BURGLARY

A lawnmower and grass edger were stolen between Sept. 12 and Sept. 13 from an unlocked garage on the 800 block of Oketo Avenue.

Someone forced open a shed outside an apartment building on the 9400 block of Washington Avenue between Sept. 12 and Sept. 13. Several copper and galvanized pipes were stolen, as well as two tool boxes containing various plumbing tools.

THEFT

On the afternoon of Sept. 13 a man allegedly stole two power tool kits valued at $400 each from a store inside the Golf Mill Shopping Center. The man was seen running out of the mall and getting into an SUV that had an unknown company logo on the side. Police said earlier in the afternoon, the Home Depot at 8650 Dempster St. reported that a similar vehicle had been used in retail thefts at that location as well.

An attempted theft of a catalytic converter was reported on Sept. 16 on the 7300 block of Nora Avenue. According to police, a saw was used in an attempt to cut the catalytic converter on the vehicle and the cost of the repair was $50. On the same date, another catalytic converter was stolen from a vehicle parked on the 7600 block of Osceola Avenue, police said.

On the afternoon of Sept. 16, a man reportedly stole a $600 cell phone from a display inside a store on the 9400 block of Milwaukee Avenue.

EDUCATION

NOTRE DAME COLLEGE PREP

iPads debut for students at Notre Dame College Prep

BY NATASHA WASINSKI
For Sun-Times Media | @natwaz

Want help perfecting an Italian accent? Need to collect peer input on a presentation?

For students at Notre Dame College Prep, there are iPads for that.

The all-male, Catholic high school joined a growing number of schools implementing one-to-one computer programs by requiring this year's freshmen, sophomores and juniors to purchase the Apple tablets. Half the senior class is also voluntarily toting around mobile devices.

Principal Daniel Tully said the administration came to the conclusion last year that a number of factors made the initiative not only possible, but also beneficial.

Mobile technology preserves instructional time. Parents, over time, will save on school-supply costs with the $400 devices. Most of the digital textbooks Notre Dame is using this year cost between $7 and $20.

"Then, of course, the real great thing is anything that is searchable, is available," Tully said. "It's all at their hands."

That's not to say the teens can see everything on the web. Schools, by law, are required to filter online content and prohibit access to websites deemed inappropriate for children.

Director of Educational Technology Deanna Herman met with students the first week of classes to remind them of the footprints they leave online and the "power of the pause."

Notre Dame won't monitor how teens use or personalize their iPads unless it learns of problems.

The only real requirement students have now is to keep protective covers on the devices.

"My line is, 'With comes great power, comes great responsibility,'" Herman said, borrowing the words of Spider-Man.

The tablets are self-purchased and belong to students, meaning they're theirs to keep after graduation.

Staff is also adjusting to the addition of more in-class technology.

To prepare for the program's rollout this August, Note Dame rebuilt its wireless network and increased its Internet bandwidth tenfold to support 800-plus mobile devices simultaneously.

The school has a 10-person team of teachers and counselors who serve as iPad experts and train other staff. Teachers began ongoing professional development and training last November.

For some, it's changed the physical layout of their rooms as they walk around a bit more and teach behind, instead of at, students in desks.

For the first time classrooms are equipped with Apple TVs to allow students and teachers to broadcast wirelessly to a projector from their computers.

"Everything is so much more interactive and student-centered," Tully said. "It's not just the teacher delivering content."

Michael Galeno, chair of the English department, has embraced the changes by trying to keep his room as paperless as possible.

He's also making sure students know the iPad is only a tool. Discussion still serves as the primary vehicle for teaching and learning, especially in a literature-based class, he said.

"We, the teachers and students, will continue to drive this room," Galeno said.

Not surprisingly, the teenagers have been on board with the initiative.

"I think it's really cool," said sophomore Liam Mulcrone, 15. "I get a lot of things done better with it. It's lots of fun."

He said not having to scribble notes on paper has saved him the trouble of deciphering his poor penmanship.

Joe Hilger, a junior, also likes lugging around fewer things.

"It's nice not to have notebooks," the 16-year-old said.

He's found the multimedia capabilities of e-textbooks to be particularly useful when learning verb tenses in Spanish.

Accessibility of the Internet has another advantage, too.

"I haven't forgotten my homework yet, so I'm excited about that," Hilger said.

AFFORDABLE HOUSING

Near north suburbs wrestle with affordable housing vouchers

BY IGOR STUDENKOV
For Sun-Times Media | @istudenkov

When the amendment to the Cook County Human Rights Ordinance went into effect on August 8, landlords faced a significant change. Whereas before, they could refuse to rent to tenants who are part of Section 8 Housing Choice Voucher program, they now had to give them the same consideration.

Two days before the amendment took effect, the Village of Glenview passed an ordinance that allowed landlords to keep refusing to rent to voucher-holders. But closer to Chicago, the response has been muted.

Park Ridge and Morton Grove already had laws on that mirrored the amended county ordinance, and their governments show no intention to change it. The change didn't cause any particular concern in Niles and Lincolnwood. Even Skokie, which has seem some controversy over voucher-holders, doesn't intend to make any changes.

The Housing Choice Voucher program is a federal program that provides rental assistance to low-income individuals. Voucher-holders pay 30 percent of the rent and utility costs, with the Department of Housing and Urban Development covering the rest.

Voucher-holders fall under Cook County Human Rights Ordinance's protection against discrimination based on the source of income. Originally, the ordinance didn't apply to voucher-holders' ability to rent. But on May 8, the County Board voted to take that exception away.

In its current form, the ordinance doesn't require landlords to automatically accept voucher-holders. They could still reject the application for the same reason as they would reject any other tenant ? lack of good references, bad credit card history, etc. But landlords can't consider the voucher status when making a decision, nor can they reject all voucher-holders out of hand.

According to 2010 US Census and October 2012 Cook County Housing Authority data, Morton Grove has a 625 rental units and 25 voucher-holders. Even before county vote, the village's Unlawful Housing Practices ordinance decreed that, so long as rental payments don't come from an illegal source, landlords can't give preference based on payment method.

According to Teresa Liston, the village's Corporation Counsel, Morton Grove plans to keep it that way.

"This ordinance was adopted ten years ago, and the village has no plans to change it," she said.

Park Ridge has 1,761 rental units and only 15 voucher-holders. That hasn't stopped the city from adopting an ordinance similar to Morton Grove's. However, their ordinance has a loophole. When a voucher holder applies for an apartment, Housing and Urban Development must expect the unit before the lease is signed. The ordinance allows the landlord to lease the unit to another, a non-voucher-holding applicant before the inspection is complete.

Lincolnwood has 458 rental units and four voucher-holders. According to Village Manager Tim Wiberg, the amended county ordinance isn't a concern in Lincolnwood.

"[It isn't] much of an issue here, since we have very few rental units in the village," he said.

Niles has 2,435 rental units and 90 voucher-holders. While there has been some concern about crime in rental buildings, the village has seen little-voucher related controversy. According to Village Manager Steven Vinezeano, the Board of Trustees has no plans to respond to the amendment.

The response may bode well for Open Communities, a Winnetka-based affordable housing advocacy group. It has been working to persuade Glenview to reverse its decision. Gail Schechter, the organization's Executive Director, remains weary that other municipalities may still follow Glenview's lead.

"I don't know if it will happen," she said. "I know that there's a lot of misunderstanding about vouchers and the people who use them."

Bike rider dies of heart attack after being hit by car

A bicyclist who was involved in a "minor" traffic crash Monday died of a heart attack, according to the Cook County Medical Examiner's Office.

Stanley Lorkiewicz, 72, of the 7500 block of Octavia Avenue, Chicago, was riding along Milwaukee Avenue at Jonquil Terrace just before 8 a.m., Sept. 23, when he said he was struck by a beige vehicle that was headed east on Jonquil, said Niles Deputy Police Chief Dennis McEnerney.

Niles police and paramedics were called to the scene, but Lorkiewicz signed a release declining treatment, police said.

"I don't think he was hit real hard, because there was no damage to the bike itself and there was no noticeable injury to the victim, either," McEnerney said.

Deputy Police Chief Joseph Penze described the collision between Lorkiewicz and the vehicle as "minor."

It was after paramedics had left the scene that Lorkiewicz suddenly collapsed, according to police. McEnerney said the police officers who were still present discovered Lorkiewicz did not have a pulse and used a portable defibrillator to shock his heart until paramedics returned and transported him to Advocate Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge. He was pronounced dead a short time later.

A spokesman for the Medical Examiner's Office stated that an autopsy determined Lorkiewicz had died of acute coronary thrombosis.

McEnerney said Lorkiewicz was found to be intoxicated when police arrived after the accident, and a portable breathalyzer recorded his blood-alcohol level at .13, above the legal limit for operating a vehicle.

PARK RIDGE

Maine South alumni sought to hop on homecoming parade route

Maine South High School's Homecoming Committee is looking for alumni interested in taking part in this year's parade which will mark the school's 50th anniversary year.

The parade kicks off at Maine South, 1111 S. Dee Rd. in Park Ridge, at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 28. This year's theme is Back to the Future: 50 Years of Maine South Excellence.

Any past graduates of Maine South who would like to participate in the parade should contact Student Council sponsors Eve Muir-Wilson or Jose Arguello at (847) 692-8166 or by e-mail at emuirwilson@maine207.org and jarguello@maine207.org.

PARK RIDGE

Maine South welcomes home alumni with anniversary barbecue

Maine South High School alumni looking to actually return "home" this homecoming weekend are invited to an open house and backyard barbecue at their former stomping grounds.

In celebration of the school's upcoming 50th anniversary, a barbecue will be held this Saturday, Sept. 28, from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. in the courtyard behind the Maine South cafeteria at 1111 S. Dee Rd.

The afternoon will feature food and ice cream available for purchase, games, live music and a chance to tour the school and visit the new memorabilia display.

Performing will be the rock band Celtic Bikini, consisting of Maine South teachers Jason Dutmers and Francisco Barbas, and Maine West teachers Al Matan and Phil Sumida.

Maine South has also put out a call to any bands who played together while attending school there and are looking to have a reunion.

MORTON GROVE

Local youth groups attend program at Disneyland

Individuals from the Octopi International, of Morton Grove, recently traveled to Disney California Adventure at Disneyland Resort to take part in the Disney Youth Education Series Program(s) (Y.E.S.) "Designing a Disney Story."

Each year, individuals and groups from around the world travel to Disneyland Resort to take part in one of several Disney Y.E.S. programs. Most of the programs take place in and behind the scenes of the Resort's world-famous Theme Parks.

Areas of study include career discovery, life management, physical science, natural science, history, and art and humanities. The programs use varied resources onstage and backstage to bring real world examples to the learning experience. These two- to three-hour interactive educational experiences are available at both the Walt Disney World Resort in Florida and Disneyland Resort in California. They are led by professional Disney facilitators who help guide the students and assist them in understanding the key lessons.

HELP SQUAD

Foot spa ordeal ends in refund

HELP SQUAD
BY
JACKIE PILOSSOPH

Being a single mom with two young kids, working as a part-time journalist and owning a business leaves Kim Treger with very little free time.

When she does get a couple hours alone, one thing she enjoys is treating herself to a foot spa massage, particularly at Lux Salon & Spa in Glenview.

"A lot of these foot spa places have been popping up, and this is the best one," said Treger, who owns The Laughing Academy, her Glenview-based kids improv instruction company.

"I cannot say enough incredible things about it. They have private, candlelit rooms, and it's just so therapeutic and relaxing."

Unfortunately, what was supposed to bring her enjoyment and serenity turned into frustration and headaches.

It started when she purchased six coupons for Lux Salon & Spa at $15 each (valued at $30 each) through the daily deal site, WeDeal.

Treger and her mom used two of the coupons each, but when Treger returned to the salon last month to use the fifth coupon, she found out that Lux had changed ownership, and the new owners would not honor the deal.

Instead, they told Treger she should try to get her money back from WeDeal.

Treger sent an email to customer service at WeDeal with the header, "I am irate that Lux Foot Spa is not honoring my WeDeal coupons!"

"Please call me ASAP," she wrote. "I just left there and I am furious!"

Three days later, when she didn't hear back, she sent another email.

"Please call me. ... She claims it is a new owner and I need to get my refund from you."

Two hours later, she sent another email to the company.

"I have reached out several times. ... I would like a refund and cannot imagine why you will not respond to these emails."

No response.

Twelve days later, Treger sent her fourth email to WeDeal. Still, no answer.

Enter Help Squad

I decided to take on this project for Treger. Keep in mind, this is my first case for Help Squad.

Also, I wrote a business spotlight article last month for the Deerfield Review, highlighting WeDeal's story. Started in 2010 by two entrepreneurs, the business focuses on North Shore customers through a database of 80,000 subscribers.

I reached out to WeDeal owner and operator Brad Pielet and told him the reason for my call. His response was ideal.

Pielet, who has owned the three-year-old company since last year, acknowledged there is a problem with WeDeal's response to customer service emails.

"We would never blatantly not answer emails from our customers," he said.

Pielet promised two things: One, he would issue Treger a $30 refund for her two coupons, and two, he would create an online customer service form for issues like this in the future.

A few days later, right before I published this column, there was not yet a customer service form on the site.

However, Treger can finally relax — not by having her feet soaked in hot water and massaged, but by knowing that WeDeal issued a $30 credit plus $30 extra.

Questioning Sassone's taste — literally

Paul Sassone has always been a brilliant observer of all things absurd and outlandish.

As an example, he scored a direct hit on pretzel rolls in last week's column (a gutsy move but one that needed to be done) and then he turns around and writes, "Fruits and nuts are the only complementary ice cream ingredients."

Has the man suddenly gone daft? Have his taste buds sustained serious permanent injury? The very ingredients he dismisses as being alien additives to ice cream — Oreos and Heath bars — are what raise ice cream to new and delicious heights.

Next he'll be saying that ice cream should be served au natural, without fudge sauce or a cherry. Though knowing his fondness for fruit in ice cream, he probably would accept, begrudgingly a cherry — a small one, no pit. Fudge sauce he would no doubt say only goes with bacon and pretzel rolls.

Perversity, thy name is Sassone.

I only hope that his put-down was a momentary lapse, and that he will be sufficiently himself next week. I have known and worked with Paul on many occasions at Pioneer over the years, so I'm sure he knows I am just kidding. If he doesn't, I hope he wakes up tomorrow to find bacon in his prune juice.

Why do we get red-faced about team names?

BY RANDY BLASER

Do we really think we can get off that easily?

As football fans have heard, there is a movement afoot to stop calling the National Football League club in Washington, D.C., by their team name, the Washington Redskins.

This is just the latest move to wipe out what some feel are degrading and insensitive nicknames that are an insult to the native peoples of North America.

Many high schools and colleges have already changed their team names — Stanford going from Indians to Cardinal in 1972 being one of the first. Some have been forced to get rid of their mascots — witness the demise of Chief Illiniwek at the University of Illinois.

But other names are OK. Florida State University teams are the Seminoles, but for some reason, that name is fine.

There are always complaints abut the Atlanta Braves and their old-time screaming Indian head logo, and Chief Wahoo, the laughing face which graces the hat of the Cleveland Indians.

President Clinton refused to wear the Chief Wahoo hat and wore the big "C" hat when throwing out the first pitch in Cleveland one baseball season.

"As football fans have heard, there is a movement afoot to stop calling the National Football League club in Washington, D.C., by their team name, the Washington Redskins. This is just the latest move to wipe out what some feel are degrading and insensitive nicknames that are an insult to the native peoples of North America."

Sports columnist Rick Reilly took on the proponents of deep-sixing the Redskins name in a column last week. He claimed that the native peoples still remaining just aren't offended by it. He cited high schools in the west of mostly native student enrollments who were proud of their Redskins team names.

Besides, native languages are descriptive and redskins is a descriptive term to distinguish native people from the invading whites, or the "palefaces," if you prefer.

That logic reminded me of when the kids were little and my daughter described her new friend next door as the black girl. Awash in white guilt, I asked Oak Park's diversity director, who was black, if I should talk to my daughter about describing her new friend that way.

"Heck no," she told me. Kids are descriptive. It's natural for them to take a distinguishing feature to describe someone. It's only a problem when the descriptive is used to denigrate or belittle people. Don't make a big deal out of it.

The issue wasn't how a 6-year-old described her new playmate. The issue was how I felt about whites relating to black people.

It was my problem.

And so it is with this whole team names debate.

The issue isn't what we call the Washington, D.C., football team, or that my high school is the Lane Tech Indians.

The issue is how majority whites relate to native people. And no matter how you look at it, that's a real big problem. It was honestly debated during the Grant Administration, when President Ulysses S. Grant put forward a peace policy aimed at sheltering Indians on a reservation and eventually assimilating them. The other position was extermination, a term we haven't heard since World War II.

If you recall, the Grant policy sort of won out, but not before a whole lot of extermination.

So if we really want to confront how whites relate to native people, a team name is the teeny tiniest of issues possible.

I don't think we can get off that easily.

1,000 WORDS BY JACK HIGGINS

Turn-signal shirkers a local menace

Come on, folks. It's not rocket science.

It's just turn signals.

You know, that little lever on the left of your car's steering column.

Depress the lever, the left-turn signal starts flashing.

Lift up the lever, the right-turn signal flashes.

It's such a simple thing to do. And yet so many drivers either don't signal at all, or signal in such a way that the act of signaling is irrelevant.

You now what I mean. The driver in front of you signals only as he or she begins to actually turn. Or, you are stopped behind a driver at a red light. Only when the light turns green does the driver signal a turn.

There is no warning that the driver in front is turning. And warning other drivers so they can go around, or in some other way modify what they do, is the purpose of turn signals.

Research by the Society of Automotive Engineers shows that drivers don't signal a turn or a change of lanes 48 percent of the time.

This is equal to two billion times a day U.S. drivers don't use turn signals, or 750 billion times a year.

And not using turn signals is no laughing matter.

Two million accidents a year are caused by drivers not using turn signals, the Society of Automotive Engineers found. This is more than twice the number of accidents caused by distracted drivers.

The real mystery in all this is why drivers don't use, or properly use, turn signals.

It's such a simple thing to do.

Nobody seems to have an answer to this question.

Is it rudeness, laziness, the chance to get back at the world in a small way by making life a little more difficult for other drivers?

Maybe it's a macho thing, that using turn signals is dorky.

It can't be ignorance.

Everyone who has a drivers license had to know when and how to use turn signals.

The Illinois Motor Vehicle Code requires drivers in the kind of areas we live to signal a turn 100 feet before turning. How much is 100 feet? Ninety feet is the distance between home plate and first base, so it's a little longer than that.

Outside of business or residential areas the distance at which a turn must be signaled is 200 feet.

Simple. Safe. Helpful.

And it's the law.

Then why don't so many of us do it?

It's a mystery, a dangerous mystery.

MORTON GROVE

Lights, camera, dinner: Reality show focuses on Kappy's Restaurant

BY RICK KAMBIC
rkambic@pioneerlocal.com | @rick_kambic

Camera crews for prominent television journalist Bill Kurtis have been seen following George Alpogianis to collect footage for a potential profile on his family or pilot reality TV show.

Alpogianis is a Niles village trustee and co-owner of Kappy's Restaurant & Pancake House, in Morton Grove. The cameras were led by producer Tania Lindsay, in conjunction with Kurtis's side company, Kurtis Productions.

Lindsay produced the 2009 TV series "The Entrepreneurs (Toms Shoes and Frontera Foods)", as well as the 2010 TV movie documentary "The Abduction of Jaycee Dugard" and 2010 TV movie "The American Tax Cheat."

The crew was on hand Sept. 15 when Kappy's closed for renovation, and family members said cameras have filmed them at home and on errands too.

Lindsay emphasized that her visits are experimental, and she's unsure what angle her team would take if a documentary or pilot TV show were pursued.

Gus Alpogianis and his sons George and Manolis all share a stake in the restaurant, and the trio believes Kurtis Productions will profile the family or do a pilot reality TV show on how decisions are made at family-owned businesses.

"We usually talk business and make decisions every Sunday before having a big family dinner together at the old house," George Alpogianis said. "My brother (Manolis) usually critiques how things operate and are executed.

He says I'm too personal and I need to be more down-to-business."

Manolis Alpogianis agreed with that assessment.

"He's a chef. He should worry about the quality and presentation of the food, not be everyone's best friend," Manolis Alpogianis said.

The two brothers have a key phrase for when conversations get heated, like when they debated how to revise the menu for when the restaurant reopens.

"When one of us says 'I feel strongly about this,' the other knows to back off their point," Manolis Alpogianis said. "It's our safety net to keep us from forgetting we're family."

Gus, who first started the restaurant, doesn't often make his presence known at the restaurant, but reportedly has heavy oversight.

"He's the ultimate authority," Manolis Alpogianis said. "Every major decision has to run by him, and he doesn't play favorites."

Kappy's was originally known as Tops Big Boy until Gus Alpogianis and two business associates bought the restaurant 1979 and renamed it using an abbreviation of their last names.

Both sons started working in the restaurant as teenagers, beginning as dishwashers and busboys. George Alpogianis became a cook at age 17 and continued for three years until enrolling in culinary school at Kendall College of Chicago.

After graduating in 1989, George Alpogianis cooked at various Chicago restaurants until landing at Rosebud Restaurant in Chicago's Little Italy neighborhood.

Manolis Alpogianis went another route, studying business. He says he helped open the original Maggiano's restaurant and got the California Pizza Kitchen into the Water Tower building.

"I like to be hands-on and my experience is at the back of the house; he's the Ralph Lauren of restaurants, a mastermind and delegator at the front of the house," George Alpogianis said.

In 2000, George became manager of Kappy's after he and Manolis bought out their father's partners.

The trio was running Kappy's together in front of cameras on Sept. 15 and did their best to be cheerful and play up a few outbursts, but they did pull waiters aside at times to calm tempers or reassign blame on a different Alpogianis.

During personal, one-on-one interviews with Lindsay, all three talked of family tradition and the thrill of fast-paced service.

Kurtis Productions and the Alpogianis family were reportedly connected through mutual friends.

Misericordia festivities kick-start building program

SOCIAL STUDIES
BY LEE LITAS

The event: The 31-acre Chicago campus of Misericordia/Heart of Mercy, home to more than 600 children and adults with developmental and physical disabilities, extended its hospitality to another 12,000 visitors on Sept. 8 for the 33rd annual Family Fest.

Cause célèbre: "This wonderful place cares for all these children and adults," said parent and volunteer, Gregg Hartemayer of Winnetka, whose son Kirk has been a resident of Misericordia for more than five years. Hartemayer spent the day volunteering for the Quinlan Terrace booth, a new initiative of Misericordia to build homes for the aging population.

"We already have a continuum of care," explained Sister Rosemary Connelly, executive director of Misericordia. "But now we will have more people who will fall into this category and therefore we will need more space."

Immediately following the festival, Misericordia will be breaking ground on four houses to be built on their Chicago campus. The complete initiative involves nine houses out in the neighborhoods of Chicago and a total of 20 houses on the Misericordia campus. "This festival is helping us to have it all materialize," said Connelly.

The event was manned by more than 2500 volunteers in food and entertainment booths. Some, like Bernadette and Edmund Boyle of Park Ridge, whose son Joseph has been a resident of Misericordia for 11 years, have been volunteering for nearly 30 years.

"The need is so great to help the people who have handicaps (and) who cannot help themselves," said Patrick Mahoney, chairman of the board. "And this wonderful place is run by so many good employees and volunteers who treat them nice and love them."

Bottom line: The Family Fest raised more than $1 million for Misericordia's initiatives, and their 600 children and adult residents with developmental and physical disabilities.

FASHION

Summer styles that work for fall

BY LYNN TAYLOR SCHWAAB
For Sun-Times Media

Each year when fall begins, I look in my closet to see what summer items I can continue wearing.

Definite pack-aways? Start by boxing up those straw summer hats and bright flowery, floaty scarves. Summer sandals and flip flops? They go right along with the hats There's really no way to wear flip flops with fall fleece that fashion — or Chicago's chilly weather — condones. Bring on the boots or booties instead.

But there are always a few key pieces that will work perfectly, no matter the temperature. And shops like Notice in Barrington and Evanston (notice-this.com), Peruvian Connection in Chicago (peruvianconnection.com), and Bett's in Highland Park (bettsboutique.com), are treasure troves of such clothes.

Transitioning from summer to fall is all about layers. Conveniently, that's still a trend this season. So add one more piece — for warmth and style — and your outfit becomes appropriate for cooler weather. It's best to avoid those summer brights or prints, and don't mix those gauzy summer fabrics with fall-weight wools and blends.

And good news — your maxi dress makes the seasonal cut. Give it a fall look by adding a jean jacket, leather motorcycle jacket or a cardigan.

Do the same with your maxi skirt or your fun printed pants. Grab that jacket or cardigan again to pull over that favorite summer tank. Or try along sleeve denim shirt tied it at the waist, and you've got a new go to outfit.

More good news: the white cotton tunic you wore over the summer is a wardrobe staple. Plan to wear it for all seasons.

Your summer look was tunic alone if it's long enough, otherwise with cropped light pants or Bermuda shorts. For fall pair it with dark color jeans, then add a collarless jacket or an oversized cardigan, finishing with a great scarf.

Sticking to old Italian romantic traditions

Mary Habschmidt and Matt Englert

BY JILL FAILLA
Contributing writer

Mary Habschmidt, originally from Park Ridge, shared her first kiss with her husband, Matt Englert, formerly of Bartlett, in front of St. Paul of the Cross Church in Park Ridge. It was the same church where she had her baptism, first communion, confirmation, and attended preschool through eighth grade. She knew it had to be the place where she walked down the aisle as well. Mary and Matt married June 1 at the church, seven years to the day of the their first kiss.

"Isn't that cute?" Mary said, laughing when she told their story. Mary met Matt through a mutual friend right before she graduated from Loyola Academy in Wilmette. Matt attended Northridge Preparatory School in Niles, where he works as the director of admissions. Mary is a dietitian at Cancer Treatment Centers of America in Zion.

Mary and Matt — both of whom are Italian — planned a romantic wedding with all the old country trappings, from a traditional Catholic Mass to an evening of dinner and dancing at the Spiaggia restaurant, a fine-dining Italian restaurant on Michigan Avenue in Chicago.

"We go to Oak Street Beach all the time (and) we always saw that restaurant," Mary said. It was the first venue the couple visited. When they walked out, they said to each other, "This is where we're having it."

From the classic green and red Chicago trolley the wedding party traveled in on on their way downtown, to the glamorous newlywed shots atop the LaSalle Street Bridge, the wedding was set in an old, elegant fashion.

The bridesmaids, dressed in light organza, full-length champagne-colored dresses, and the groomsmen, sporting black tuxedos with white vests, performed an entire tarantella Southern Italian folk dance to welcome the bride and groom into the Spiaggia ballroom. During dinner, DJ Roberto Monastero played hits by Dean Martin, Frank Sinatra and Louis Prima.

"It was just so much fun," Mary said.

She was grateful when she and her husband stole a moment for themselves during the long dinner. "We were able to sneak out, just him and I, in between the reception," the bride said. "We were able to be on Michigan Avenue and that was fun."

The couple live in Highwood, in a location nestled comfortably between their two jobs. For now, Mary said, it feels perfect.

A PROGRAM OF NACAC

National College Fair puts campus atmosphere at your fingertips

Navigate through hundreds of colleges pitching their programs at the free National College Fair on Saturday at Navy Pier's Festival Hall from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

One of the simplest and most effective steps is preregistering for the fair online, according to Oscar Rodriguez, director of Recruitment and Outreach at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

The name badge generated through the registration process saves a student from the tedious task of giving his or her name and contact information to college reps multiple times. Prospective students may visit www.gotomyncf.com/registration and select Chicago. The form collects student contact information as well as academic interests. The colleges just scan the students' badges and then are ready to start talking.

Rodriguez urges high school and transfer students to "have as many conversations as they can" at the fair.

"There will be a lot of schools you have never heard of," he said. "Sometimes families from a city as large as Chicago, with many colleges and universities, tend to forget there are schools west of the Mississippi River."

The fair gives those colleges that aren't household names a chance to form an impression on a student.

"You never know when a relationship with that school might take root. The school that's a little farther away may be just the right fit," Rodriguez said.

While it's unrealistic to visit even the majority of booths, Rodriguez said it's good to have a list of four to eight schools that are must-visits. After that, he recommends stopping by at least 20 tables to get a feel for the differences among schools and the types of students they want to attract.

Students also need to develop their own elevator speech about their goals for college and beyond.

"Although the term 'elevator speech' is popular among job seekers, it fits the prospective college student as well," Rodriguez said.

The prepared student might have three majors in mind and ask the college rep if his college offers those. On the flip side, if a student is undecided about areas of study, he might inquire about how a college helps those students apply their interests and natural talents to a major. An undecided student may want to look for schools with a large number of degree-granting programs.

Fair attendees should also be thinking beyond academic majors. Some students are drawn to smaller, liberal arts colleges where the emphasis may be on "studying what it means to be human and living in a democracy," he said.

Other questions that may prompt good conversations also revolve around how undergraduate classes are taught: whether by full professors or graduate assistants. Some universities are also giving undergraduates more opportunities to participate in research.

"Or does the school lean more toward the consumption of knowledge," Rodriguez said.

Today, the elephant in the room is the cost of college. When a student is at a fair, no school should be bypassed because of its sticker price, Rodriguez said. He said all schools have some form of financial aid available and that can be touched on with a representative.

"But it's up to the school to come up with the financial aid package, and that doesn't occur until later in the process," he said.

Award letters aren't issued until a student is accepted.

"When you pick up literature from the schools, take the information about tuition, fees and room and board," Rodriguez said. "Then, later, make sure you are comparing apples to apples because schools may list those categories separately or total them. It can make a big difference."

Overall, Rodriguez recommends that students be open to new experiences at the fair.

"It should be a fun to tap into a place that fits your personality," he said.

How to select a field of study

A major decision

Picking a college major is a big step for young students. Though some adults find themselves working in fields that have little to do with their college majors, many more spend their entire careers in the same field they chose to major in way back in their college days.

Choosing a major is a decision that ultimately rests on the shoulders of the students who must consider a host of factors before committing to a specific field of study. However, parents can still help their children, whether those kids are already enrolled in college or college-bound, as they make such an important decision that could very well affect the rest of their lives.

* Encourage patience. Today's college students and college-bound youngsters are living in a world that's significantly different from the one their parents or older siblings might have encountered. Global and domestic unemployment rates remain high, and technology is changing the way industries conduct business. However, students trying to pick a major should avoid picking one too quickly. Just because a certain field is experiencing job growth does not mean that field is ideal for all students. Encourage kids to be patient when choosing a major so they can find the field that's right for them, and not just the major they feel will produce the best job prospects.

* Suggest a double major. Many of today's students are fully aware of the difficult job market and the cost of a college education. As a result, such students want to choose a major they feel will put them in the best position to land a well-paying job after college. That's a smart strategy, but it overlooks the joy of studying the subject of your passion. Parents can simultaneously encourage kids to be smart about their job prospects and pursue their passions by suggesting a double major. For example, if your child has a love of art but understands the difficulty in earning a living as an artist, suggest a double major in art and graphic design. This way he or she has more career options upon graduation but still has the chance to pursue a subject he or she is passionate about while in school.

* Encourage students to apply for internships. An internship is another great way parents can help kids as they decide on a college major. Internships are rarely easy to get, but some firms hire interns who are still in high school. Parents should encourage kids to pursue internships as early as possible. Internships can provide young students with some real-world experience and give them an accurate glimpse into what their professional lives might be like if they choose a particular field of study. Some kids might be encouraged by an internship, while others might realize a given field is not really for them. Either way, the internship can help narrow down the field of prospective majors for young students.

* Let kids know a major isn't the same thing as a career. The pressure to choose the right major can be overwhelming for some young students. But parents should let kids know that a major is not the same thing as a career, and many graduates end up working in fields that had little or nothing to do with their majors. For instance, just because a student earns a degree in finance does not mean he or she will end up working on Wall Street. While parents should emphasize the importance of choosing the right major when speaking to their children, they should also let kids know that nothing is ever set in stone. That can help take some of the pressure off students as they make such an important decision.

Today's college students have more to consider when choosing a college major than many of their predecessors. However, parents can still take steps to help kids choose the right major without succumbing to the stress that comes with making such a significant decision. Courtesy of Metro Creative

Taming the cost of textbooks

In an era when digital books can be downloaded to an e-reader for a few dollars, students may feel it foolish to shell out several hundred dollars for a hardcover textbook that will only be used once. Many college students are shocked at the cost of their textbooks. In fact, many students do not consider textbook costs when budgeting for school, only to have their jaws drop at the checkout counter of their campus bookstore.

The cost of textbooks has been an issue on college campuses for years. Many elementary and high school students do not have to pay directly for their textbooks, but college students must pay for their books.

There are a number of ways to curtail costs. One of the reasons behind the high sticker price for college textbooks is the copyright fees that publishers of large anthologies must pay to every author who contributed to a book. Such costs can quickly add up. When there isn't a large demand for the books, publishers will not make much money if they don't charge more for the books.

Another reason for the high cost is that online companion resources accompany some. The publishers build the price of these resources into the cost of the book.

An additional contributing factor to students' high textbook tabs could be the faculty at their college or university. Some professors are not sensitive to the cost of books, selecting books they like or even ones they authored themselves without considering the price of such texts.

Supply and demand may also influence the cost of textbooks. When too many textbooks are in circulation, there is no longer a high demand. So publishers make money by continually issuing new volumes with an item or two changed to justify the purchase of a new book.

However, as costly as textbooks can be, students can employ various methods to trim their textbook tabs.

* Purchase used textbooks whenever possible. Used textbooks may cost half as much as brand new texts. They may be highlighted or have notes in the margins, but if you can overlook these things, you can save money.

* Sell back textbooks. Keep textbooks in good condition and attempt to sell them back to either the campus bookstore or one near to the school. If the edition will be used again, you may be able to recoup a significant amount of the money you spent on the book.

* Shop around. Jot down the ISBN number for the particular textbook and then go online and price it out. Thanks to the Internet, you may find the book elsewhere for a significant discount over the in-store price on campus.

* Look for alternative formats. With that ISBN number in hand, find out if there are digital or soft-cover versions of the textbook available. These formats may be more affordable and easier to lug around as well.

* Compare the old edition to the new. The new edition may have different page numbers or minor changes, but not enough to negate the value of the old edition. You can save a lot of money on an old edition.

* Share the book with a classmate. Make friends with someone in your class and share the costs and use of the book. Set up study and homework sessions to work together or make copies of particular chapters if you need to work solo.

* Consult with your financial aid counselor. Sometimes financial aid can offset the cost of textbooks. You might be eligible for aid to cover the cost of your textbooks throughout the school year.

Choosing a college? Consider this.

When choosing a college, students often look for the best academic institutions. While it's hard to argue with that approach, high school students facing the decision of where to spend the next four years of their lives should know that the right university is not necessarily the one with the best academic reputation.

Hosts of factors come into play when finding the right match between student and university. Academics should always carry the most weight, but students should consider a host of other factors before ultimately deciding where to continue their academic careers.

COST

In a perfect world, students would not have to worry about financing their college educations. However, that's not a world in which students live. The cost of a college education is something nearly every college-bound student must consider before making his or her decision. According to the College Board, the average overall cost to attend in-state public college for the 2012-13 academic year for students who did not receive financial aid was $22,261, a nearly 4 percent increase from the previous school year. That sticker price includes the cost of living in a dorm, food, books and the additional expenses college students typically have. The College Board notes that, despite the cost increase, financial aid budgets stayed the same as the year before, meaning even those students who received financial aid paid more money.

While cost should not dictate where high school students ultimately go to college, students should know that eventually student loans would have to be repaid with interest. Therefore, those who do not want to bury themselves in student loan debt after graduation would be wise to choose a university that's more affordable or one that's offering a more attractive scholarship and grant package. Unlike student loans, scholarships and grants do not have to be repaid.

DISTANCE FROM HOME

While many high school students may think a school far away from their folks is ideal, the reality of being far away from home is a struggle for many college students who attend college outside of their home states. Homesickness is a very real thing for college students who are away from home and on their own for the first time.

In addition to homesickness, college-bound students should consider the cost of travel before enrolling in a college or university that's far from home. Mom and Dad might not be able to afford to fly their college students home several times per year for the holidays and other breaks in the school year, and the burden of financing that travel can fall on students. If you are not planning to work during the school year, then financing trips home may prove very difficult.

ENVIRONMENT

Both the academic and social environments merit consideration when students are deciding where to continue their educations. Some students thrive in a competitive academic environment, while others tend to fare better in a more casual setting. Students should assess which environment is best for them and choose a university that best suits them as a student.

A college or university's social environment is another factor for students to consider. Larger schools tend to rely heavily on Greek life, while smaller schools may be more intimate and less exclusive. Students who hope to join a sorority or fraternity might benefit from a school with a thriving Greek life, while those who want a more intimate social environment might prefer a smaller school where all of the students seem to know one another.

New majors sprout as job markets evolve

Thanks in large part to rapidly changing technology, domestic and international job markets continue to evolve. That's created a bevy of new college majors aimed at students who want to secure their place in the work force. New majors that might have been unheard of as recently as 20 years ago include: computer game design, which allows those with a passion for software engineering to combine that passion with their love of a gaming industry that continues to grow, and health information management, a major that figures to be in demand as many nations cope with aging populations and doctor shortages.

Think about your priorities for the college experience

College representatives enjoy talking to prospective students. And their answers to thoughtful questions can help a student make a good college match. Following are selected suggestions from The College Board.

1. How would you characterize the majority of students?
2. What do students like most about your college?
3. What are some of the more popular extracurricular activities?
4. Is binge drinking an issue, and if so, how is the college handling it?
5. What sets this school apart academically?
6. How would you characterize the academic pressure and workload?
7. What is the most popular major on campus and why?
8. Are faculty members accessible to students outside of class?
9. What should I know about student housing options?
10. Is there a health care facility on or near campus?

Colleges share news, happenings, goals

Mount Mary University: Creativity is a part of who we are at Mount Mary University. A big part. At Mount Mary, you can choose from more than 30 undergraduate programs and eight graduate programs. Mount Mary's focus on teaching students to think creatively enhances your leadership ability and creates greater success in the workplace. When you graduate, you'll have the confidence and open mind to imagine and experiment with innovative ideas that push your organizations – and yourself—to the top of your field.

We'd love to meet with you on campus in Milwaukee. Walk through Notre Dame Hall, eat in the Alumnae Dining Room and talk with current students about the exciting things they do every day on campus and off. During your visit, you'll also be able to meet with an admission counselor, take a campus tour and discuss the many scholarships we have to offer.

Schedule your visit online at mtmary.edu/visit or call 414-256-1219. Get a sneak preview of your upcoming visit with our virtual campus tour at mtmary.edu/tour

Lawrence Technological University: Possible is everything. Lawrence Technological University is a 4,500-student private university providing students a high-quality education that pays off. According to a recent PayScale.com survey, the earning power of a Lawrence Tech bachelor's degree ranks in the top 7 percent of all U.S. universities.

Located in Southfield, Mich., Lawrence Tech offers more than 100 undergraduate, graduate, and doctoral programs – many available online – in Colleges of Architecture and Design, Arts and Sciences, Engineering, and Management. Students can earn degrees and certificates in such emerging fields as robotics, alternative energy, entrepreneurism and the life sciences.

Students use advanced facilities, including LTU's Center for Innovative Materials Research; architectural studios; a structural testing center; labs for alternative energy, robotics, and biomedical research; and much more on the modern 102-acre campus.

More than 60 student clubs and organizations sponsor activities at Lawrence Tech. Students enjoy a dynamic athletic program, with NAIA men's and women's basketball, soccer, lacrosse, bowling, and cross country, as well as women's volleyball, men's ACHA ice hockey and intramural leagues and club sports.

Hands-on experience in competitions, internships, applied research, and more provides students with the skills they need to succeed. To explore your possibilities, contact 800-225-5588, admissions@ltu.edu, or apply free now at www.ltu.edu/applyfree.

University of Illinois-Chicago: The University of Illinois at Chicago invites prospective students and their families to attend the UIC Open House on Saturday, Oct. 5. At this drop-in event from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., visitors will have the opportunity to learn more about UIC's undergraduate majors and programs, explore student life and housing, discover ground-breaking research from renowned faculty experts, and tour the vibrant and diverse UIC campus located in the heart of one of the world's great cities. UIC Open House information, directions, and registration are available at www.admissions.uic.edu/openhouse2013. Please register today and join us at the UIC Open House on Oct. 5.

Tribeca Flashpoint Media Arts Academy: Located in the heart of downtown Chicago, Tribeca Flashpoint Academy is one of the industry's most well-known and respected digital media arts colleges—providing intensive, hands-on, apprenticeship-style degree programs that propel graduates into "the business" in a way few other institutions can.

Part college, part industry apprenticeship, the school offers a progressive training model through which students begin using industry-standard equipment and software and working on real-world client projects during their very first semester. They graduate in as little as 15 months with robust resumes and the insider industry know-how they need to step seamlessly into their careers.

Tribeca Flashpoint Academy offers degrees in: film and broadcast; recording arts; game and interactive media; design and visual communications; and animation and special effects.

Students who apply by the Nov. 1 Early Acceptance deadline and are accepted to TFA will have the opportunity to participate in a range of exclusive events and hands-on workshops during the months leading up to their enrollment. Visit www.tfa.edu to request information, schedule a tour, or apply now.

Saint Louis University: Saint Louis University is a Catholic, Jesuit institution that values academic excellence, life-changing research, compassionate health care, and a strong commitment to faith and service. Founded in 1818, the university fosters the intellectual and character development of nearly 14,000 students on campuses in St. Louis and Madrid, Spain.

Ranked among the top Jesuit universities in the country, SLU has been lauded as a character-building college, recognized as a major research institution and is considered one of the nation's best values in higher education.

Located in the heart of one of the nation's most vibrant metropolitan areas, the university has invested

How commuter students can assimilate into campus culture

Many commuter students find it difficult to assimilate when arriving on a college campus. Living off-campus, be it in their own apartment or at home with their parents, can make it difficult for commuter students to make friends with classmates who live in the dorms, where they already have a built-in social network.

However, while it's often easier for students living on campus to assimilate into campus culture, commuter students can still become an integral part of their colleges and universities. The following are a few tips that might help commuter students more easily assimilate into campus culture.

* Form a study group. The classroom is where many commuter students are introduced to their fellow students, so it's a great place for commuters to make new friends. A study group outside the classroom can be a bonding experience for commuter students and their classmates, and such groups can be a great way for commuters to improve their grades while learning about social gatherings on campus.

* Join student organizations. Student organizations, whether it's student government, the campus radio station or a school-based charity, are great opportunities to get the most out of a college or university. They're also great places to meet new people and expand your social circle. Commuter students can still be actively involved in campus life even if they don't live on campus, and student organizations are a great way to do just that.

* Get a job on campus. Many commuter students work in an effort to offset the rising costs of tuition. When looking for work, such students can look for an on-campus job where they can meet more of their fellow students. This is a great way to put some money in your pocket while further involving yourself in campus life.

* Play sports. Intramural sports are wildly popular on many college campuses, and you need not be a great athlete to take advantage of these opportunities. Ask friends or acquaintances from class if they have a spot on their teams, or organize a team of your fellow commuter students. Intramural sports can be a great, pressure-free way to make new friends on campus while getting a little exercise to boot.

* Make lunch dates. Many college students, especially those living in dorm rooms that aren't equipped with kitchens, have their meals with friends and fellow students. Commuters can do the same, booking lunch or dinner dates with classmates and friends. This keeps you on campus longer, which allows you more time to make friends and assimilate into the campus culture.

Who cares if COLLEGE COSTS AN ARM AND A LEG?

We do.

In fact, at Indiana State, we care a lot. That's why we work hard to keep costs low—and quality high.

In 2012, for the second straight year, Forbes magazine included Indiana State among the nation's best when it comes to emphasizing both quality and value.

And academically qualified Illinois residents receive special reduced tuition rates.

What else can you expect from Indiana State? Hands-on learning, incredibly helpful professors, and unparalleled academic opportunity.

Know your options

Different types of colleges

LISTED BELOW ARE DESCRIPTIONS OF THE DIFFERENT TYPES OF INSTITUTIONS AVAILABLE TO YOU.

NONPROFIT/ PRIVATE

These colleges and universities:

- receive funding primarily from student tuition and endowments. Some funding comes from governmental support in the form of tax breaks and student loans
- follow the leadership of a board of trustees
- develop own institutional plans since they operate mostly on private support
- rely on private funds, which leads to a higher average cost
- offer financial aid opportunities to reduce the total cost

NONPROFIT/ PUBLIC

These colleges and universities:

- receive a large part of funding from state or local taxes. Some funding comes from tuition and endowments
- follow performance standards set by the state
- Most are state-run which lowers the tuition for in-state students
- typically categorized as two-year, four-year, research, comprehensive, or community colleges

FOR-PROFIT/ PROPRIETARY

These colleges and universities:

- receive up to 90 percent of their revenue from federal student aid
- operate under the demands of investors and stockholders
- usually offer a non-traditional format
- have come under federal scrutiny for high pressure sales/ recruitment tactics

Admission test dates

College admissions tests — the ACT and SAT — are a huge part of the college application process for high school students. School counselors typically provide students with the lowdown on when to take these all-important tests. In addition, most public high schools offer the ACT on a school day. Following is a brief guide about how to register for the Saturday tests and the test dates for the fall and winter.

ACT Sign up online (actstudent.org/regist/) or use the packet provided by your high school counselor or found in your school's college guidance office. The cost is $36.50 for the test without a writing portion and $52.50 for the exam with the writing test. Fees include the option of sending scores to four colleges of your choice for free; the fee for additional schools is $11 per school.

Saturday test dates will be Oct. 26 (Sept. 27 registration); Dec. 14 (Nov. 8 registration); and Feb. 8, 2014 (Jan. 10, 2014 registration). For more information about ACT registration, call (319) 337-1270.

SAT Students can register online (sat.collegeboard.org/home) or through packets provided by high schools. The cost is $51 for the basic SAT. Additional optional fees include a $24.50 registration fee for basic subject tests, $24 for language with listening tests and $13 for all other subject tests. Registering by phone costs another $15. Fees include sending scores to four colleges of your choice for free; the fee for additional schools is $11.25 per school.

Saturday test dates will be Nov. 2 (Oct. 3 registration), Dec. 7. (Nov. 8 registration), Jan. 25, 2014 (Dec. 27 registration).

For more information about SAT registration, call (866) 630-9305.

Each testing service does provide late and standby registration for a fee; visit their websites for more information.

nearly a $1 billion in campus improvements and expansions during the past quarter century, including an $82 million state-of-the-art research facility and an $81 million on-campus arena, which SLU's nationally ranked men's basketball team calls home.

Saint Louis University offers nearly 100 leading undergraduate programs — many of which continue to the master's and doctoral levels. But SLU students don't just pursue degrees; they major in impact. Each year students give nearly a million hours of service to the community.

Inspired by the Jesuit tradition of educating the whole person — mind, body and spirit — a SLU education produces graduates who are not only poised for success, but also prepared to make the world a better place.

Building on a legacy of nearly 200 years, Saint Louis University continues to move forward with an unwavering commitment to a higher purpose, a greater good.

South Suburban College: More than 100 years ago, community colleges were created as publicly funded institutions of higher education at community based facilities. They began a policy of welcoming all who wished to learn, regardless of wealth or previous academic experience.

Today, there are more than 1,100 community colleges in the United States, most of which share common goals of quality, convenience and affordability with a commitment to lifelong learning. Community colleges allow students to positively impact their lives with nearby locations, smaller class sizes, flexible class schedules and affordable tuition.

Established in 1927, South Suburban College (SSC) is a fully accredited, comprehensive community college with locations in South Holland and Oak Forest. SSC offers over 50 career education and transfer programs awarding Associate Degrees, professional certifications and transferable credits. SSC also has numerous community outreach programs including Adult Basic Education (ABE), General Education Development (GED), English as a Second Language (ESL), Continuing Education and a Business & Career Institute.

SSC's tuition rate is considerably lower than public or private universities. Full-time students can attend for around $4,000 a year while saving thousands of dollars in additional room and board expenses. For more information, to schedule a tour, or to get your college education started, please visit www.ssc.edu or contact the SSC Admissions Office at (708) 210-5718.

Eastern Illinois University: At Eastern Illinois University, students are more than faces in the crowd. Here, students belong to a vital university community.

The university maintains a 15:1 student to faculty member ratio, so students can be sure they will get the attention and hands-on experience they deserve. What's more, Eastern offers 46 different undergraduate majors with an average class size of just 18 students – classes taught by experienced faculty members, each of whom is passionate about his or her field.

Eastern Illinois University blends the best of one-on-one learning experience with facilities and opportunities students might expect at a much larger institution. Eastern takes pride in having some of the very best programs – rigorous enough to challenge the best students, but with great support and encouragement to help ensure success.

College students from the region won't find a better value. Eastern's tuition rates are low and they're available to both residents of Illinois and residents of neighboring states. The university's textbook rental service is a great addition – which saves the average student nearly $1,000 a year.

The university has a variety of financial aid opportunities including merit scholarships for strong academic performers. Prospective students can even check out a personalized merit scholarship instantly with an online calculator.

The beautiful 320-acre campus is home to a vibrant student life with more than 230 registered student organizations, 30 fraternities and sororities and 21 NCAA Division 1 intercollegiate sports.

W. Virginia University College of Creative Arts: Creative development in art, music, theatre and dance is the focus of the College of Creative Arts at West Virginia University. A distinguished faculty of studio and performing artists and academicians bring a commitment to the creative process of artistic growth, which is shared with each student. Here, in a rich environment of art exhibits, concerts, and plays, students are offered the knowledge, skills, and inspiration necessary for professional success.

The Creative Arts Center is home to the WVU College of Creative Arts. It is a modern, well-equipped facility devoted to creative development through instruction, performance and exhibition in Art, Music, and Theatre and Dance. The center features a 1,400-seat concert theatre, and three smaller theaters. For technical support and training, there is a full range of shops.

The Creative Arts Center also boasts large ceramics, printmaking, drawing, painting, sculpture, photographic and computer studios for instruction in the visual arts. The Mesaros Art Galleries provide exhibition space and the new Art Museum of WVU is currently being constructed.

College of Creative Arts alumni have successful careers as professional artists, teachers, or arts administrators, working in studios, theater companies, film, television, publishing and graphic arts companies, design studios, colleges and universities, and more. All of our programs are nationally accredited.

For more information about the College of Creative Arts, please contact: Amy.LaSota@mail.wvu.edu

Governors State University: Governors State University will host its first annual Graduate & Professional Fair, on Oct. 14. The southland community is invited to GSU's campus to meet more than 30 university representatives from across the nation. This will introduce prospective and current graduate students to a range of masters and doctoral programs offered at GSU as well as programs at peer institutions from across the country. We invite current college students, families, adults, and more to join us to meet and share information with colleagues and partners interested in pursuing an advanced degree. The GSU fair is an excellent opportunity to meet with students and alumni from many different schools and degree programs. For more information, call Stephanie Schafer at 708-518-7648 or e-mail: sschaefer@govst.edu. The fair will be from 3 to 7 p.m., in the Hall of Governors at Governors State University. To RSVP for this free event click: http://www.eventbrite.com/event/8251477391/eivtefrnd.

Purdue University Calumet: Purdue University Calumet in nearby Hammond, Ind., offers the opportunity to earn an internationally respected Purdue degree at an excellent value. Purdue Calumet is a great place to make the most of your academic talents, offering 50 undergraduate and graduate programs.

Purdue Calumet is a nationally recognized leader in Experiential Learning, giving you hands-on experiences to apply what you learn. As an undergraduate, you will have many opportunities to challenge yourself with research; gain practical work experience through internships, cooperative education and design projects; and build your portfolio.

Our faculty members are respected worldwide in such fields as steel manufacturing technologies, high energy physics, water quality and international media, and offer the highest level of personal attention to students.

Purdue Calumet students enjoy a vibrant campus with more than 80 academic and social organizations; fun and engaging entertainment; a fitness and recreation center; a thriving 12-sport intercollegiate athletics program; a full schedule of intramural activities; and more. The neighborhood campus is located minutes from Chicago and the scenic Indiana Dunes-Lake Michigan shoreline. The University Village provides apartment style housing.

See how Purdue University Calumet fits into your plans for success. To learn more, call 1-800-HI-PURDUE or visit www.purduecal.edu/admissions. If you would like to visit the campus, schedule a tour at www.purduecal.edu/visit.

University of Missouri–St. Louis: Three years ago, the University of Missouri–St. Louis began using its trademarked positioning statement: "Serious education. Serious value." That statement has resonated well with prospective students and its validity has received another national endorsement.

UMSL made Washington Monthly magazine's 2013 exclusive list of "Best Bang for Your Buck" colleges and universities. Only 349 colleges and universities rated "Best Bang for Your Buck" status out of 1,572 schools in the magazine's broader rankings. UMSL ranked 56 among national universities and was one of only three Missouri universities to make the list.

The magazine said the list addresses the question most students should be asking: What colleges will charge people like me the least and give me the highest chance of graduating with a degree that means something in the marketplace?

"Washington Monthly confirms what we've learned through our alumni surveys and marketing research," said Senior Associate Vice Chancellor Ron Gossen. "UMSL prepares students well for their chosen careers at a reasonable and manageable cost. UMSL graduates are work-ready."

Founded in 1963, UMSL today is composed of nearly 17,000 students, 1,500 faculty, 1,200 staff and 86,000 alumni. Several programs have attained national recognition for their quality, including: biology, criminology, education, information systems, international business, nursing, optometry, psychology, public policy and tropical ecology.

Kendall College: Chicago is a world-class city that's home to 33 Fortune 500 companies, nearly 7,500 restaurants, more than 200 theaters and 700 hotels. Nearly 40 million people visit Chicago annually.

It's no wonder that Kendall College in Chicago is the perfect place to earn a degree in business, culinary arts or hospitality management.

Chicago's leading hotels rank Kendall College the number one Chicago program for preparing students for hospitality management careers. And Kendall's Culinary Arts program has also been rated number one by Chicago MICHELIN Guide Restaurants for preparing students for careers in the exciting field of culinary arts.

Kendall understands the needs of students who may be balancing work or family commitments. Advisers work with each student to develop a plan that fits their schedule. Business students can choose to take classes entirely online, or choose on a class-by-class basis.

Kendall College is accredited by the Higher Learning Commission and is a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools (NCA).

Kendall College offers bachelor's degree programs in business, culinary arts, education and hospitality management. The College will be hosting its next campus open house on Saturday, Nov. 9. To learn more or to reserve a space, visit kendall.edu or call 888-905-3632.

DeVry University: Good is not enough for many employers today. J.T. O'Donnell, career strategist and author of "CAREEREALISM: The Smart Approach to a Satisfying Career," suggests that candidates need to learn how to G.L.O.W. in order to close the employer-candidate disconnect and shine in the job market. Here's how to G.L.O.W.:

G – Gain Perspective: Assess your situation. "No two people are alike," says O'Donnell. "You have to figure out what's important in your life and career. Evaluating your values, preferences and interests will provide you a customized plan and increase your ability to achieve success."

L – Luminate your Goal: To "light up" your career goal, break down your preferred position into a list of "must haves," "nice to haves," and "don't wants." Let these criteria act as a compass to guide you toward your destination.

O – Own your Actions: Be ready to put forth the effort to make change happen. "Some requirements will seem more daunting than others, like going back to school for the right education and career-oriented skills set," says O'Donnell. "However, there are excellent options like DeVry University, which provides flexible onsite and online scheduling so you can maintain current responsibilities while pursuing your dream career."

W – Work it Daily: Take steps every day to get closer to your goals. Display your goal and ask yourself at least five times a day, "Is what I'm doing right now helping me achieve my goals?"

For more information about flexible education options, visit DeVry.edu. To learn more about the G.L.O.W. Method, visit Careerealism.com.

University of Wisconsin System: The University of Wisconsin System is one of the largest systems of public higher education in the country, serving approximately 181,000 students each year and employing more than 39,000 faculty and staff statewide.

The UW System is made up of 13 four-year universities, 13 freshman-sophomore UW Colleges campuses, and statewide UW-Extension. Together, these institutions are a tremendous academic, cultural, and economic resource for Wisconsin, the nation, and the world. View the system at www.wisconsin.edu/about/UofWSystem_CherboPublishingGroup.pdf

Southeast Missouri State University: Founded in 1873, Southeast Missouri State University has a proud history of excellence in education. First founded as a teacher's college, the institution has grown into a comprehensive University with more than 150 academic programs in five colleges. With more than 150 social and special interest organizations, NCAA Division 1 Athletics, 10 national fraternities and eight national sororities, you are sure to find ways to spend your free time in Cape Girardeau.

Robert Morris University: Robert Morris University is an independent, not-for-profit, multi-location institution offering associate, baccalaureate, and graduate degree programs that focus on integrating theory and applications. Robert Morris University prepares students to be practitioners in their chosen fields, socially responsible to their communities, and a foundation for their families. The university has a total of 10 campus locations in the Chicago area.

Southern Illinois University: From its humble beginnings as the state's second teachers college - founded in 1869 with a dozen academic departments and an inaugural class of 143 - Southern Illinois University Carbondale now ranks among Illinois' most comprehensive public universities. Each year, we welcome students from all 50 states and more than 100 countries who take advantage of outstanding academic programs as they pursue associate, bachelor's, master's, doctoral and professional degrees in law and medicine.

Bradley University: Founded by Lydia Moss Bradley in 1897, Bradley University is a private, independent university offering undergraduate, graduate, and continuing education programs in the liberal and fine arts, the sciences, business administration, communications, education, engineering, technology and the health sciences. A residential campus of 5,700 students, Bradley is known for its excellent teaching and commitment to student success. Bradley University links academic excellence, experiential learning and leadership development with an entrepreneurial spirit for a world-class education.

Barry University: Named one of "America's Top Colleges" by Forbes magazine, Barry University in Miami Shores, Fla., offers exciting learning opportunities and so much more. You work with professors who not only know your name, but will also help you explore your field of interest, whether it's pre-med, business, communication, or any of the more than 75 majors and specializations on campus. You live on a 122-acre main campus just minutes from world-famous beaches and the city of Miami. You learn in small classes. You gain hands-on experience, no matter what your major, and prepare to compete in the global economy. You make a tangible difference in the local community. You apply what you've learned in the classroom to a rapidly changing world.

When you're not in class, you hang out by the pool. You live in one of 10 residence halls on campus. You make lifelong friendships with students from around the world. You express yourself and develop valuable leadership skills – after all, there are more than 60 student organizations on campus. You also cheer on – or compete on – Barry's title-winning teams. Barry is a member of the NCAA

Concordia University: As a distinctive, comprehensive university of The Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod, centered in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and based in the liberal arts, Concordia University Chicago equips men and women to serve and lead with integrity, creativity, competence and compassion in a diverse, interconnected and increasingly urbanized church and world. Concordia University Chicago is the university of choice for those seeking a Christian institution in the Midwest that provides a broad, liberal arts based undergraduate education, as well as graduate and professional programs in areas of demonstrated competence, which serve a particular need of society and advance the mission of the Church.

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville: Southern Illinois University Edwardsville is a public comprehensive university dedicated to the communication, expansion and integration of knowledge through excellent undergraduate education as its first priority and complementary excellent graduate and professional academic programs; through the scholarly, creative and research activity of its faculty, staff and students; and through public service and cultural and arts programming in its region. It is located about 20 miles northeast of St. Louis.

Indiana State University: Indiana State University combines a tradition of strong undergraduate and graduate education with a focus on community and public service. We integrate teaching, research, and creative activity in an engaging, challenging, and supportive learning environment to prepare productive citizens for Indiana and the world. Inspired by a shared commitment to improving our communities, Indiana State University will be known nationally for academic, cultural, and research opportunities designed to ensure the success of its people and their work. The university is located in Terre Haute.

Leeds College of Music: Leeds College of Music is a leading British conservatory, offering students an intensive education experience tailored to individual needs, talents and aspirations. In parallel with the music industry today, we encourage the integration of different disciplines, genres and styles to create amazing, groundbreaking work.

The college is renowned for combining rigor and focus with a personal approach. It is a member of both Conservatoires UK and the Association Européenne des Conservatoires. As an Apple Authorized Training Center and the only English conservatoire to hold the coveted All-Steinway School status, we demonstrate a commitment to excellence by providing our students with the best equipment possible for the study of music.

Our students perform nationally at venues such as London's Jazz Café, 606 Club and Steinway Hall, and at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival. Our recent alumni include Chantel McGregor, who has won Guitarist and Vocalist of the Year at the British Blues Awards; Dan McDougall, who signed a publishing deal with BMG Chrysalis; and Benji Boko, who performed at the launch of Robin Thicke's new album in New York as well as at the opening of the Toronto Film Festival. Other alumni include Rusko who is currently touring the United States; John Newman whose debut single Love me again reached the top 10 in nine countries and No. 1 in the U.K. charts; and Aamir Yaqub who has worked with big names such as Rihanna, Alicia Keys and will.i.am.

Indiana University Northwest: It was a root canal gone awry that served as the catalyst for Chris Sicinski of Munster to launch a collection drive for dental supplies. Early next year, the senior chemistry and pre-dental student at Indiana University Northwest plans to distribute the supplies, along with some oral health education, to those in need in Northwest Indiana.

If a pre-dental student with good oral health habits could suffer what he did, Sicinski thought, what about those without adequate access to care and supplies?

"Seventy-five percent of Americans suffer from some sort of oral health issue and that is because many of them can't afford the supplies or afford going to a dentist," Sicinski said. "I've grown from my health experience and I care a lot about the patient. The first thing I can do is help underprivileged communities.

"My mission," said Sicinski, "is to collect toothbrushes and toothpaste, dental floss, mouth wash, dental plaque tablets and other dental supplies for children and families in need, and to distribute them through local schools and clinics that serve the underprivileged. Children and families will be instructed and shown how to effectively use these supplies."

Friends, family, neighbors, fellow students and faculty have all rallied to help. Still, more donations are needed, Sicinski said, in order to meet his goals.

Sicinski will continue to collect supplies until Dec. 20. Supporters may send supplies to: Indiana University Northwest, c/o Ernest Talarico, Jr., Ph.D., Dunes Medical/Education Building, Room 3028A, 3400 Broadway, Ind. 46408. For more information, call 219-981-4356.

Robert Morris University: Through its College of Adult Continuing Studies, Robert Morris offers a practical option to working adults seeking to begin or complete a degree.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported in July 2013 that the unemployment rate for people 25 to 34 has declined to 7.6 percent. Most importantly, the unemployment rate for those with a bachelor's degree is much less (4.5 percent) than the overall rate and even less for those with a master's degree (3.5 percent).

With 10 different colleges offering 17 fields of study, the university's extensive list of accelerated degree programs include traditional business, paralegal, law enforcement management, networking, accounting & culinary. A dual-degree partnership with John Marshall Law School offers students the ability to earn both a Bachelor's Degree/JD Degree.

RMU's accelerated, career focused degree programs prepare students for the most demanding careers in fast growing fields. RMU's supportive faculty members provide individual attention from the first day of class until graduation. Ninety eight percent of RMU specialized faculty have worked outside academia in their fields.

"Adults may be looking at their careers and thinking, 'There must be something more, but do I have time?' You absolutely do!" explained Provost Mablene Krueger. "I look at it as a new but unwritten chapter in anyone's life who is ready for change and is now ready to say yes to a college degree."

"Having the feeling that I'm on the verge of something great in my field work is inspiring. The College of Education showed me the importance of imparting the same sense of inspiration to those I'm responsible for."

LACE EFFECT

A perennial style staple and the ultimate expression of femininity, lace is never far from the catwalks. But this year's crop is weaving a different story. Instead of simple lace dresses, labels like Alexander McQueen have taken to lace panels, sleeves and overlays, adding a new dimensions to a classic. There's no wrong way to lace your look, but whether you go with a bold color or elegant black, remember to limit accessories (too many will clash with the intricate pattern). Oscar de la Renta and Dolce & Gabbana nailed the trend with the sophisticated and sexy evening gowns in their Fall 2013 collections. 'Tis the season to embrace the lace.

THE AGE-OLD QUESTION

Should you date someone much younger or older?

Dear Jenny,

I hit on this hot waiter at a restaurant and gave him my number. He texted me to go on a date, then I found out he's 20. I'm 31! What do I do? Should I pursue it despite the age difference?

—Anonymous

Jenny says: Girl, I like to go with the saying "age is only a number." I have met numerous people who are happily dating despite a large age difference, and I myself was in a five-year relationship with someone who was 11 years older than me. It might feel more awkward for you because you are the girl in the relationship, and guys are usually the ones that are older. But who cares? Right now it would just be a date. So don't create a story of a future that doesn't even exist yet. Just take it moment by moment.

The only age-gap problem I ever noticed would happen when we were driving together and we would fight about which radio station we wanted to listen to. Other than that, enjoy the perks that come with it — of which there are many. And don't forget to have fun!

Tropical storm

It's always sunny at new River North tiki bar Three Dots and a Dash

BY RACHEL HANDLER

Tiki is alive and well in Chicago. Need convincing? Just follow the line of torches down the alley behind Bub City and descend the blue-lit, cavern-like stairs into new River North watering hole Three Dots and a Dash, where bartenders clad in Hawaiian shirts top tropical drinks with swizzle sticks, and where bamboo, hanging lanterns and carved totem poles abound.

"Tiki is all about escapism," explains owner and bartender Paul McGee (inset), who co-founded the spot with R.J. Jerrod and Molly Melman of Lettuce Entertain You and names tiki trailblazers like Trader Vic and Don the Beachcomber as his inspirations. "It's fun, it's cheeky, it's over-the-top. When I'm here, [it feels like] I'm at a resort."

Equally exotic are the drinks, which range from traditional tiki cocktails like the Mai Tai ($13) to McGee's own concoctions, such as the Amaro-drenched Tropic of Thistle ($13). "It's an herbal, bitter drink," he explains. "It's probably the least expected thing at a tiki bar." Be careful, though — as the menu warns, the drinks are of "impressive strength," so down more than two and you may find yourself three sheets to the (distinctly tropical) wind. Here's what else to expect at Three Dots and a Dash:

Bartender stats: McGee began his career bartending in Las Vegas spots like the Venetian, and later served as corporate mixologist for the Wolfgang Puck Fine Dining Group. In 2008, he moved to Chicago, where he opened The Whistler in Logan Square.

The vibe: A campy throwback to a 1940s hotel bar, but slightly more upscale. Waitresses tend to tables in floor-length floral dresses, and McGee culled much of the whimsical decor from the original (now-shuttered) Trader Vics, such as tiki totems and 70-pound clamshells. "The craft cocktail movement went from being really serious and precious to really casual," he says. "We're having more fun, creating a communal experience."

Must-try drink: McGee fell in love with the bar's namesake Three Dots and a Dash cocktail ($13) several years ago while throwing tiki-themed bashes at The Whistler. "It was made by Don the Beachcomber, who I look up to immensely as far as his drink creations go," says McGee of the concoction, made with rum, honey, allspice and cinnamon clove. "So it's an important cocktail." Its name is equally weighty: The symbols signify the letter "V" in morse code, which stood for "victory" during World War II.

Food for thought: "[The food] is here to soak up the rum," laughs McGee. The Polynesian-inspired menu includes crab rangoon ($11), crispy coconut shrimp ($13) and beef negamaki, topped with a soy glaze ($14).

Banish cold-weather woes: "I think this will be a great wintertime hangout," says McGee. "When it gets dark at 4:30, you'll want to be tricking yourself that you're someplace warm." Until then, sip the vanilla and ginger-filled Christmas in July, one of four cocktails that come in a sharable punchbowl ($50, serves 3-4).

THE 'GOOD' LIFE

'The Good Wife' star Josh Charles makes the case for his perfect day in Chicago

BY ZAK STEMER

Josh Charles' legions of fans would agree that the actor has a je ne sais quoi, a certain swagger, that — when combined with his tousled hair and roguish pout — makes him hard to resist. That indescribable air of cool is one of the reasons that Charles is so believable in his Emmy-nominated role as Will Gardner, the bad-boy name partner at a prestigious Chicago law firm on CBS' "The Good Wife."

With the show's fifth season premiering Sept. 29, Charles is eager to tease fans with some details. "There's going to be a civil war where they left the story line. It sets the stage for intense conflict and drama," he says. But as for the show's love triangle — a battle royal between Charles and Chris Noth over Julianna Margulies' lead character — Charles is mum. "That's on ice for the moment," he says.

This season will also see the multitalented Charles (known for his roles in 1989's "Dead Poets Society" and the late '90s TV show "Sports Night") step behind the camera to direct two episodes. "[I have] everything I need right now to challenge me in new ways," he says. "It's great to get the opportunity to do this in an environment that's so tight-knit."

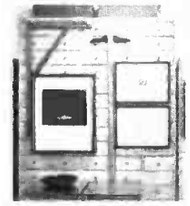
Though the Chicago-set series is filmed in New York, Charles fell hard for our fair city while acting in Steppenwolf's 2005 run of "A Well-Appointed Room." "I love the city so much," says the actor, who visited twice this past summer. "I'd love to do another play there. I was talking to Kerry Wood during his [Woody's Wiffle Ball Classic event] and I realized that it's the people, it's the food, it's the architecture, the theater, the arts community. There's always something new to do. Chicago is my kind of town, like Frank said."

When Charles isn't on the set of "The Good Wife," he's at home, enjoying his latest role as the good husband. The actor wed longtime love and Bunheads author Sophie Flack on Sept. 6 in an intimate Manhattan ceremony. He's also gearing up to promote "Bird People," a film by "Lady Chatterley" director Pascale Ferran that's nearing completion. In it, Charles plays a computer programmer passing through Paris as things go awry. "[Ferran] was a fascinating filmmaker," he says. "It was an intense but rewarding experience."

With his new bride, hit series and burgeoning movie career, Charles is on top of the world. But even with all of his success, he's managed to maintain his cool — as is true to character.

Watch "The Good Wife" at 8 p.m. Sundays on WBBM-Ch. 2.

10 A.M.
Charles heads to the Bongo Room (5022 N. Clark) for a plate of rich pancakes.



NOON
He stops by one of his favorite stores, Scout Vintage (5221 N. Clark), to check out the home decor selection.

2:20 P.M.
It's not an ideal afternoon without a trip to Wrigley Field (1060 W. Addison) for hot dogs and a Cubs game.

6 P.M.
Dinner at Balena (1633 N. Halsted). "I'm a sucker for Italian food," he says. "And the atmosphere there is great."

7:30 P.M.
Charles heads back to his old stomping grounds to take in a show at Steppenwolf (1650 N. Halsted). Currently on stage: "The Wheel."

10 P.M.
An admitted blues junkie, Charles finishes the night listening to music at Kingston Mines (2548 N. Halsted) or Rosa's Lounge (3420 W. Armitage).

SOMETHING BLUE

"When we signed up to do the show, we wanted the audience to know us through the bad and the good. I don't think it's fair to do a reality show and pick and choose what you want to do. It's not fair for the audience."

A MODEL OCCASION

From classic cuts to unconventional hues, newlywed JOANNA KRUPA showcases the best in bridal fashion

She has posed for more than 120 magazine covers worldwide, appeared on "Dancing with the Stars," co-hosts "Poland's Next Top Model" and currently stars on "The Real Housewives of Miami." But later this fall, the Poland-born, Chicago-raised Joanna Krupa will put one of her most intimate moments yet on camera: She's airing her wedding on the reality show's season finale.

"I wanted a fairy-tale feeling, very light and lush," says Krupa of her recent nuptials to love of six years Romain Zago. The couple tied the knot June 13 in front of 120 close friends and family members in Carlsbad, Calif., surrounded by 20,000 flowers — and it was all put together in just three months.

"It was stressful and definitely a challenge, but I had amazing wedding planners," Krupa says. "It was magical. We waited over six years, but it was definitely worth the wait."

Followers of "The Real Housewives of Miami" know the Krupa/Zago relationship has been far from perfect, but Krupa says that televising these difficult moments proved cathartic. "We almost fell apart. But filming the show and dealing with some situations on camera saved our relationship. We realized, 'Oh my god, we really do take each other for granted.' You learn a lot from seeing yourself on TV, especially with your significant other. You want to become a better person when you watch yourself."

One of the couple's major issues was a lack of intimacy, in part because of Zago's low libido, and this season has featured the pair visiting a sex therapist. It's this issue that has garnered the most support for Krupa; she finds it's opened up a new dialogue with her female fans. "It's crazy how many people can relate," she says. And she applauds her new husband for tackling the issue publicly. "I was surprised that he agreed to do it. Not only to see a sex therapist, but to do it in front of millions of people," she says. "I really give him a lot of credit."

WHITE WEDDING

"It's real," Krupa says of the show. "Sometimes they put you in situations or make you go to events where the other girls will be there, so they trick us that way. But otherwise, it's whatever happens."

Now that they're married, they'll continue to split time between Miami, where Zago runs the popular Mynt Lounge, and LA, where between modeling gigs, Krupa is working on a swimsuit line, a skincare line and helming Angels for Animal Rescue, the nonprofit animal rescue she founded with her friend, Gabriela Gutierrez.

Though the wedding day has passed, Krupa is looking forward to experiencing it all over again when the episode airs. "It was the most amazing time, but it's like a blur for me," she says. "I can't wait to relive it with my friends and family." But she teases that there's plenty more in store before "I do's" are exchanged. "My bachelorette was a riot, and there's a lot of drama between the girls. It's crazy," she says. "But if you watch the wedding, the best is saved for last."

"The Real Housewives of Miami" airs Monday nights at 8 p.m. on Bravo

THE REAL SCOOP

This season of "Miami" is moving toward a multiple-wedding conclusion: Both Krupa and her nemesis, Adriana De Moura, will have their nuptials televised, and the dual plot lines are even thicker considering their contentious relationship — De Moura famously slapped Krupa during a heated argument last season. So where do the enemies stand? "We've made peace," Krupa reveals. "We're at the point where we see each other and we'll say hi and be nice." But she's not completely letting her guard down just yet. "I don't trust her fully with everything that has happened. I'm just waiting for the next time."

OUTSIDE THE (BIG) BOX

Unique boutiques make it easy to stack your registry with gifts tailored to your relationship BY KATE STAHL

Sure, every newlywed home needs a new set of pots and pans or the hottest high-tech blender. But when saying "I do," it's also fun to get wedding gifts that are unique to you as a couple. From gift certificates to cooking classes to quirky serveware, we tracked down five local registry alternatives that offer everything newlyweds need to feather their nests with style.

Poladora

Chicago-based website Poladora (a combination of the Greek words "Pola" and "Dora," which together mean "many gifts") lets brides and grooms register for gifts from multiple Chicago retailers in one spot. Started by Chicago local Stephanie Pirishis — who was frustrated by her own wedding registry process — Poladora lets you register for everything from conventional pieces like plates and home decor items to nontraditional gifts, including cooking and yoga classes. Another cool perk for those who often experience buyer's remorse: After gifts are purchased from your list, you can choose to either have them shipped to you, or you can keep the value of the item to use as a credit toward any retailer in Poladora's partner network, which includes Provenance Food & Wine, TipsyCake, Yogaview and Crosell & Co. Poladora.com

Material Possessions

This Chicago shopping staple has offered a wedding registry program for more than 30 years, and partners brides and grooms with a wedding consultant to help them create a registry full of traditional and contemporary home accessories and tabletop items, including the shop's signature pieces created by American and international artists. Friends and family can purchase items online, by phone and in store, and if you don't want to wait for UPS, Material Possessions will hold your gifts until you pick them up at the Chicago or Winnetka locations. 704 N. Wabash, (312) 280-4885; 954 Green Bay, Winnetka, (847) 446-8840; Materialpossessions.com

Kneen & Co.

If luxury is your thing, then a trip to this by-appointment-only shop is a must for your registry. "People are attracted to Kneen & Co. because of our selection of hard-to-find and custom items," says owner Mary Jeanne Kneen. Lobmeyr crystal, Nymphenburg porcelain and Cristofle Collections silver are just some of the upscale labels carried at the shop, but if there's a luxury item that a bride wants, Kneen & Co. will get it, even if it's not a brand they currently sell. While the shop's offerings are definitely on the pricey side, Kneen says they also offer brides the option of creating a monetary registry, so guests can contribute any amount of money to high-ticket items. 399 W. Fullerton, (773) 880-8424; Kneenandco.com

Tabula Tua

Lincoln Park shop Tabula Tua is known for stocking one-of-a-kind pieces, often handcrafted and painted individually by artisans from around the world — but don't be intimidated by the impeccable artistry. The staff at Tabula Tua aims to help couples create a household filled with contemporary, eclectic and traditional pieces suitable for everyday use, mixed with special items that will add a wow factor to your next dinner or cocktail party. 1015 W. Armitage, (773) 525-3500; Tabulatua.com

Jonathan Adler

Always-chic home decor store Jonathan Adler stocks everything from glassware, dinnerware and tabletop accessories to furniture, wall decor, rugs and bedding. If you have the basics, but want to style your home with colorful, quirky and statement-making pieces, Jonathan Adler is the place to do it. The registry allows guests to purchase gifts online or in store; the company has 26 locations across the U.S. 676 N. Wabash, (312) 274-9920; Jonathanadler.com

Marissa Gillman & Nicholas Schaefer

BY KATERINA BIZIOS

When Nicholas Schaefer joined Match.com in 2011, he didn't expect to find love right away. But after the CRC Insurance Services, Inc. broker stumbled across Lanvin Assistant Store Director Marissa Gillman's profile, he knew he'd found his future wife. For Gillman, the spark was just as instantaneous. "It's what he didn't have on his profile that caught my attention," she laughs. "There were no shirtless pictures, and he didn't take himself too seriously." The duo's senses of humor helped them forge a lasting connection, and they tied the knot Aug. 31 at Saddle & Cycle Club (900 W. Foster) in front of 180 friends and family members. They exchanged vows in a nontraditional Jewish ceremony where Gillman promised to always give Schaefer credit for piecing together his outfits, including his attire for the night, which was head-to-toe Lanvin. Also dressed to impress was the bride, clad in a gown by Israeli designer Inbal Dror, and the bridal party, who donned Jenny Yoo bridesmaid dresses and Zara groomsman suits with Lanvin ties. But the evening didn't stay formal for long. A 15-piece band kept guests dancing all night. "They served the first course, and everyone said they were soaking wet from dancing," says Schaefer.

'News from Nowhere: Chicago Laboratory' envisions a time when we'll all be living on the edge

BY THOMAS CONNORS

Imagining a frightening future has long been the bailiwick of science fiction writers and dystopia-driven filmmakers. Now, the School of the Art Institute of Chicago ponders that less-than-pretty road with "News from Nowhere: Chicago Laboratory," the first U.S. exhibition devoted to the work of noted Korean artists Moon Kyungwon and Jeon Joonho.

Inspired by 19th-century British designer William Morris' novel, "News from Nowhere" tackles topics ranging from engineering to philosophy as it conjures a time when the species has been forced to start over. The show — anchored by the artists' film "El Fin del Mundo" — is a collaborative project that includes Pritzker Prize-winning architect Toyo Ito, Rotterdam design collaborative MVRDV and fashion designer Kosuke Tsumura.

Initially presented last fall at dOCUMENTA, a survey of cutting-edge art that takes place in Germany every five years, the visionary exhibit wowed Mary Jane Jacob, the exhibition's organizer and SAIC's executive director of exhibitions and exhibition studies. "We have seen many end-of-the-world sci-fi movies, but this was a vision we hadn't seen before," she says. "Then [there] was more — a scientific display, architectural models, futuristic clothing."

With its curious objects, plans and texts, "News from Nowhere" is a brainy musing on the art of survival. There are prototypes for artificial organs that recycle water within the human body, biodegradable "bubbles" fit for humans to live in and schemes for new foods. And the two-screen "El Fin del Mundo" depicts one artist living in a world on the edge of catastrophe, and another negotiating a post-apocalyptic future.

"The thing I find so remarkable about Moon and Jeon's practice as artists, and something which propelled me to bring their work to Chicago and which made the School of the Art Institute the right place for it, is that their artistic method is to bring together creative people for an open, respectful and deep exchange," says Jacob. "On the one hand, the conversation is about art — the role of the artist, the importance of beauty to humanity — things that have always concerned artists. But on the other hand, their subjects have relevance to our everyday circumstances, like how will we have clean water in the near future, and even now, for some populations?"

IN CHARACTER WITH ...

Justina Machado

The Chicago native stars in NBC's 'Welcome to the Family'

BY LIZ CROKIN

Justina Machado has come a long way from her days as a struggling teenage actor in Chicago. "As much as [I loved] Chicago, and Chicago has amazing actors, I wanted bigger things to happen," says the Lane Tech grad, who worked at Victory Gardens Theater and performed at the now-defunct Latino Chicago Theater before moving to New York City.

There, Machado found roles almost immediately in both TV and film, starring alongside Halle Berry in "The Call" and as Vanessa Diaz in "Six Feet Under." Now, she's playing Lisette Hernandez in "Welcome to the Family," a new NBC comedy set to premiere Oct. 3. "It's great to have a steady job," she says. "You get to build a family, and I love everyone I'm working with."

Humble beginnings: "I had a friend who was an agent in Chicago and involved in this theater company called the Latino Theater Company. She sent me on an audition and I got a part when I was 18. Unfortunately, there was a fire there, and the theater company dissolved. The move for me was New York, not LA — I'm a city girl. I was only there for five or six months, and then I got a job."

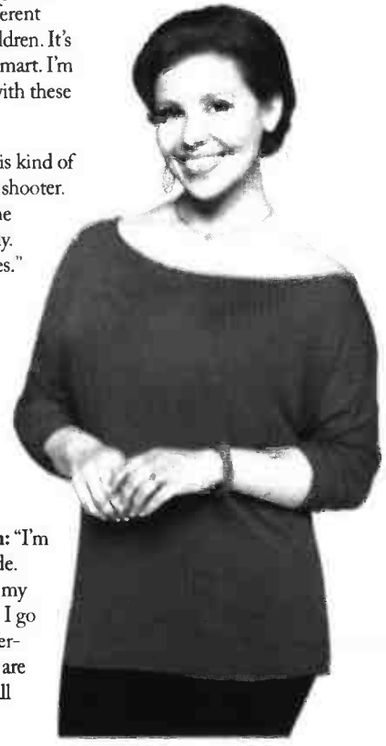
Family affair: "['Welcome to the Family'] is a comedy about a bunch of different couples. It's about philosophies and personalities colliding and different ideas of how to rear children. It's really funny and really smart. I'm excited to be working with these actors and producers."

Role call: "[Lisette] is kind of no-nonsense, a straight shooter. She's really loving — she loves her kids and family. She'll have lots of phases."

Playing house: "I went in and did a read with Ricardo Chavira, who plays my husband. We just clicked. We had chemistry. He's such a nice person, and funny too."

Chicago connection: "I'm from the Northwest Side. Logan Square is where my parents live. Every time I go back, Chicago is so different, the neighborhoods are so different. There are all these new restaurants. I'm always going to a new spot."

"Welcome to the Family" premieres at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 3 on NBC.



The best for less

Snag a smaller house on a high-end street in big-ticket Winnetka

BY LISA SKOLNIK

You have to open your wallet pretty wide to buy a home in Winnetka, where recent data compiled by Homefinder.com shows that 78 percent of single-family homes cost more than $1 million. In fact, the average price for the 103 for-sale Winnetka listings analyzed by the site is $2.42 million — a whopping number that makes the town one of the top 10 luxury suburbs in America and the only one in the Midwest to make the list.

So what do you get for the price? The average Winnetka house on the market today has 5.5 bedrooms, 6.1 bathrooms and 5,864 square feet. But if you can live with a little less, there are some prize properties to be had. One such charmer is a three-bedroom, two-bathroom 1928 home, built by a local artist to resemble a Mediterranean villa (the address is only given to serious buyers), for $699,000. It boasts 14-inch-thick brick walls and Spanish-style metal-framed windows; its original tile roof and dramatic 'Widow's Walk' are still intact. It's also been fastidiously updated with everything from new mechanicals and structural details (including two new balconies) to a gourmet kitchen with handsome cabinets and granite countertops. But best of all, notes Coldwell Banker broker Debra Kruger (inset, call 847-302-0550), is the lot, at 50 feet by 188 feet, in a prime Winnetka location: right near the town's vibrant downtown and award-winning Crowe Island Elementary School. "It's so large," notes Kruger, "that village code will allow you to add an additional 1,540 square feet to the house if you want to expand it." In other words, you get a big, beautiful house for way under $2.42 million.

Second to none

Prices are much lower in Wilmette, which is just south of Winnetka and has the same excellent school system but more of everything else: a burgeoning arts and culture scene anchored by the Wilmette Theatre, plus lots of shopping, restaurants and parks. Here, you can grab a 1941 three-bed, 1.5-bath abode at 2317 Lake — right near Harper Elementary School, public transportation and the Centennial Sports Complex — for $359,000. Contact Baird & Warner broker Betty Finn (call 847-987-3598).

CX-5 could be the segment leader

BY JEFF TAYLOR
For Sun-Times Media

For 2014 the Mazda CX-7 is gone, leaving the CX-9 and the smaller CX-5. The CX-5 is offered in Sport trim with a 2.0-liter four-cylinder standard while Touring and Grand Touring models get a larger 2.5-liter four-cylinder. If you want a manual you have to go with a front-wheel-drive Sport model. My test vehicle was an AWD Grand Touring edition which came with the SkyActiv Drive six-speed automatic and a 2,000-pound towing capacity.

Like the "zoomy" Mazda6 and new Mazda3, the CX-5 has rich bodylines that look like they belong on a more expensive vehicle. The wheel arches are large and house P255/55 R19 tires, and the bodyline is high pinching the windows. The nose adapts the new trapezoidal grille shape and headlight design.

The CX-5 maintains the "zoom, zoom" branding with good performance and handling. Acceleration is slightly above average. The six-speed automatic transmission is geared very well to the engine with well-timed up/downshifts, and it really works to squeeze every bit of mileage. Also helping the handling is a 3,532-pound curb weight to which Mazda bolts on 19-inch tires. Slicing up some curves and low-speed maneuverability is where this vehicle shines. The electric steering could use a bit more road feel, but braking was very strong with minimal fade after some around-town stop-and-go and hard braking.

Inside, the no-nonsense design features intuitive, easy-to-read screens and frequently-used controls within reach. The front seats look as if they were lifted from the Miata. The instrument cluster had bright, well-lit gauges that were easy to read, day or night. The three-spoke racing-inspired steering wheel also appeared taken from the Miata.

There is seating for five with a child in the rear center. Rear entry is a little tight but this is true for most compacts.

Rear legroom is also decent, and headroom is good for average-size adults.

Rear cargo volume offers 34.1 cubic feet behind the second-row seats. Fold down the second row 40/20/40-split seats and storage capacity expands to 65.4 cubic feet in the Grand Touring models.

Top-of-the-line Grand Touring models like my test car come equipped with all the luxuries of Touring models and add the Moonroof/Bose Package. The 17-inch aluminum wheels are replaced with larger 19-inch units.

Other standard niceties include automatic headlights, heated outside mirrors, rain-sensing windshield wipers, eight-way power, perforated leather-trimmed, heated seats with power lumbar support, dual-zone automatic climate control and Sirius Satellite Radio with four months' service.

BUILDERS SHOWCASE WEEK 3

Extended living: Patios and courtyards are offered at a number of Wilcox communities in Illinois and Indiana as a way for homeowners to add living space outside the walls of their new homes. | SUPPLIED PHOTOS

Patio pleasures

Wilcox adds beauty, function, value to outdoor living

A home's square footage is no longer confined to its four walls. Today's trends are favoring private outdoor areas, like patios and courtyards, which extend a home's living space to the yard.

These outside living rooms become a homeowner's outdoor oasis. When designed correctly they can add viable living space to the home, as well as scenic beauty, privacy and the perfect arena for backyard entertainment.

Patios and courtyards are extremely popular with new homebuyers and are considered one of the favorite features available in the single-family ranch and villa floor plans constructed by Wilcox Communities.

Wilcox is building at the Villas at Fox Run in Plainfield and Maples at the Sonatas in Woodstock in Illinois, and the Courtyards at Pepper Creek and the Villas at Vale Park in Valparaiso in Indiana.

"We believe that a properly designed outdoor area becomes a natural extension of a homeowner's indoor living space. By adding features like a fire pit, water features, furniture and landscaping to a courtyard or patio, it's easy to achieve indoor comforts outdoors for relaxation and entertaining," said Leigh Nevers, vice president of Sales and Marketing.

Depending on a homeowner's budget and space, options for outfitting a patio or courtyard are virtually endless. For those who enjoy entertaining, an outdoor kitchen, fireplace, grilling area or bar are great additions. Or, to achieve an outdoor retreat for momentarily escaping life's responsibilities, consider calming elements like water features, gardens and seat walls that blend seamlessly with the home's landscaping to create a peaceful outdoor sanctuary.

Wilcox Communities has vast experience designing attractive and versatile outdoor patios and courtyards that complement its beautiful ranch and villa style floor plans. Landscaped patios are an option available in Wilcox's Cathedral Series homes. Private courtyards come standard in their Courtyard Series homes with optional features available including covered or screened porches, as well as a variety of landscaping packages. Courtyards and patios provide customers welcomed privacy and extra comforts to their maintenance free homes.

"Buyers want an outdoor area where they could entertain family and friends. These beautiful outdoor rooms are easily one of the most utilized spaces in the homes. Whether it's hosting a barbecue with friends or simply relaxing after a long day at the office, they create a warm, inviting feel for residents," said Nevers.\

The private patios and courtyards are intended to support the carefree lifestyle that is the hallmark of every Wilcox community. The builder constructs communities that are perfect for active lifestyles, and within every thoughtfully designed development, daily hassles like yard work and exterior upkeep are taken care of so residents have more time to enjoy simple pleasures in life. From first time purchasers and career professionals to homebuyers looking to downsize, there is a Wilcox community and floor plan that suits every lifestyle.

Founded in 2002, Wilcox Communities is a regional, family-owned residential builder and developer, and the largest partner-builder of Epcon Communities. Wilcox exclusively builds lifestyle-rich, maintenance-free homes and have communities located in in seven syayes, including Illinois and Indiana. To learn more about Wilcox Communities and their maintenance-free communities, visit www.wilcoxcommunities.com.

Lake Chapin Shores offers custom lake living

Lake Chapin Shores is a quiet community of waterfront and woodland homes located on a 600-acre all-sports lake, 90 minutes from downtown Chicago. Homeowners each selected their homesite and one of 12 different models as the foundation for their vision, then worked with the builder and the developers to customize their home for maximum benefit from the open space and spectacular views to meet individual needs and lifestyle requirements.

Here's a sampling of what homowners say about their personal experience at Lake Chapin Shores, an on-going success story in Southwest Michigan.

Barb and Ken advise finding a location that lives comfortably and you can share with family and friends. Their choice was a hilltop location with expansive views of woods and the lake, a lot of windows and wrap-around deck.

Carol and Gary enjoy views on three levels with enough indoor and outdoor space that allows for their large family and to entertain comfortably.

Betsy and Paul said they wanted privacy, surrounded by mature trees, and a community where they can socalize with neighbors or take a walk down to the lake or pool. we can readily socialize with other couples, other families, just by walking down the road to the lake or pool.

Cheryl and Gary chose a homsite perched atop a hill above the lake and the pool, with several levels and steps down to a gazebo and a private dock. They have "busy business lives," so their is their family getaway. It "gives us a chance to exhale and take in the breath-taking beauty of the lake while our small children are happy playing at the pool."

Homes at Lake Chapin Shores are built to accommodate any size family, ranging from 1,300 to 3,200 square feet of contemporary living space (not including decks and porches). Homeowners enjoy boating and water sports, as well as the convenience of community services, including year-round maintenance of a heated pool, docks and roadways, common area landscaping and a concierge option to prepare the home and/or boat for each visit or special event.

Quiet country roads and quaint surrounding towns, first-rate restaurants nearby, unique local shops and boutiques, artist and antique galleries and easy access to Michigan's renowned wineries make the Lake Chapin Shores community a home-away-from-home family destination with endless options for all ages, any time of the year.

Visit the Web site at www.LakeChapinShores.com for a look at each of 12 model home options, photos and videos of Lake Chapin Shores living, a complete list of materials and specifications and a free helpful Buyers Guide. Recruitment Strategies: Virtual Recruitment Tools and Tactics

By: Melanie Berkowitz, Esq.

Do you remember the Jetsons -- the futuristic cartoon that featured flying cars, beds that made themselves and, with a touch of a button, long-distance "face to face" conversations? One episode even depicted a robot in charge of recruiting and hiring.

Technology has certainly become an integral part of today's hiring process. In fact, it's now feasible for a job applicant to not visit the worksite or even shake hands with his or her future boss until right before -- or even after -- receiving a job offer. In fact, virtual recruiting has the potential to save time and money in an age when recruiters and companies are often inundated with hundreds -- or even thousands -- of resumes for review. Yet it also raises legal and practical considerations.

Employers who follow a few best practices with their virtual recruitment strategy will have the most success -- and fewest missteps -- when it comes to using technology with new recruiting strategies.

How to Conduct a Legal Interview – Virtually

In some ways, virtual interviews raise the same legal issues as traditional recruitment strategies. Whether the interview process is conducted by a recruiter, a prospective supervisor, or an on-line "pre-screen" computer program, interview questions must not violate EEOC guidelines to maintain a legal hiring process. Also, interview questions cannot discriminate on the basis of a candidate's protected characteristics, including race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability or genetic information.

Because virtual interviewing provides employers with the opportunity to ask each candidate the same question in the exact same way, helping to reduce the chance of a misstep on the part of the interviewee. By the same token, however, an improperly worded interview question or unlawful subject matter that's included in the virtual interview could create widespread problems.

Reaching a Wider Selection of Candidates

For companies that are concerned about reaching a diverse applicant pool or demonstrating that they are an "equal opportunity employer," virtual technology can actually help employers to recruit across a much wider area.

For example, Job Search Television Network allows companies to create a "virtual open house" for interested job applicants. "With a virtual open house, employers can easily market themselves to potential employees all over the country without having to spend the time and money attending in-person job fairs," explains Lindsay Stanton, Senior Vice President of Sales and Strategy. "Candidates simply log in and are connected with a recruiter for a real-time, "face to face" discussion about the company at issue."

Using tools such as the virtual open house allow employers to target job candidates from faraway places, helping to diversify the applicant pool. It can also help level the playing field between those applicants who have the opportunity to speak to a recruiter and those who would otherwise have to submit a resume without any personal contact. "When a recruiter has a plethora of resumes to review, having "met" a candidate at a virtual job fair helps make a connection that wouldn't be there otherwise," says Stanton.

Get Appropriate Waivers and Releases

Just as you would in other situations, you'll want to find a reputable vendor "if you want to use video interviewing or online pre-screening to find top talent," says Kevin Grossman, founder and principal of Marcom HRsay. "The company should provide consent forms and disclosures that inform candidates as to what exactly is being recorded, whether it is voice-only, voice and image, or simply the answers to questions they type into the computer." Grossman adds that a proper disclosure will also explain how the recording will be used by the prospective employer.

Also, be aware that some virtual recruiting tools may implicate the Fair Credit Reporting Act. If an employer uses an outside company to pre-screen applicants, the vendor may be considered a "consumer reporting agency", in which case both vendor and employer are required to meet a number of legal requirements which include having candidates sign a release.

Virtual Recruiting Tools for both Large and Small Companies

If your company is new to virtual recruiting, the multitude of available products and tools can be daunting. Employers who have built their reputation on personal relationships may worry that automation will be at odds with their culture-based recruiting strategy.

Experts agree that virtual recruiting will never completely replace the in-person interview, but that when used appropriately for targeted purposes and positions, it can add value to every hire.

"Virtual recruiting is particularly useful -- even for a smaller company -- at the screening stage," explains Grossman. "Using an online screening product, where an applicant logs in and answers a series of "gatekeeping" questions, helps narrow the field to qualified applicants without using a lot of man-hours."

Dianne Michels, CEO and founder of Serendipity HR, agrees. "Online screens are a useful tool for getting a large amount of consistent information from a number of candidates, so you can decide who to take to the next level."

Michels cautions employers to be more selective, however, when using virtual interviewing products. "For some jobs and some organizations, you can only assess the intangible "fit" of a candidate with an in-person meeting," she explains. "And remember, you may need to sell your company to the candidate too, and it's hard to communicate culture and environment over a video screen."

To combat that concern, Grossman suggests using virtual interviews to hire for positions that will utilize video technology on a regular basis. "'Face-to-face' with a customer means something different in today's business," he explains. "Customer service, sales, marketing and business development roles already conduct a lot of business "virtually." Grossman says that companies will want to hire employees who are comfortable with the medium for these types of positions.

The Importance of Onboarding in Virtual Recruitment

Once hired, employees who have been "virtually" recruited may have a more difficult time feeling connected to their employer, particularly if they have never visited the workplace. It is up to the employer to make certain that these employees are taken through an onboarding process to ease their transition.

"It's important to make all new employees feel like they are an integrated part of the workplace, says Michels. "But when you are talking about someone who might not have visited the office before being hired, a well-planned onboarding process can mean the difference between a successful employee and redoing the job search next year."

Even with these challenges, Grossman sees virtual recruiting as an efficient and effective way for employers to create a 'short list' of candidates to meet face-to-face before making a final decision, adding, "This combination of automation and individuality gives companies the most opportunities to find top talent that fits their workplace and culture."

What is AMALUNA?

By Matthew Villanueva

From Sept. 26 to Oct. 20, Cirque du Soleil's latest breathtaking spectacle Amaluna will set up its Big Top on the north parking lot of the Mall of America in Bloomington, Minnesota. This production highlights the athletic dancing, beautiful music, dreamlike sets and fanciful costumes that have made Cirque du Soleil famous throughout the world. For the first time in Cirque du Soleil history, the band features an all-female ensemble of musicians and nearly three out of four performers are women.

Here is a closer look at Amaluna:

Setting

Amaluna takes place on a hidden island whose rhythms are attuned to the cycles of the moon and controlled by a council of goddesses led by queen Prospera. The show chronicles the story of the budding love between Prospera's daughter and a young man who finds himself shipwrecked on the island after one of Prospera's epic magical storms.

Costumes

The performers' costumes in Amaluna feature designs based on historic clothing with a 21st century twist. Deconstructed designs from the Italian renaissance feature fiberglass, metallic paper and denim, while voluminous robes features prints of images from nature and deep space. Though some of the garments are long and flowing, none impede the performers' athletic movements.

Sets

For the duration of the show, the area below the big top is transformed into the fanciful wooded island of Amaluna. Artificial trees circle the stage, while bamboo-like branches and limbs stretch up towards the canopy above. A water bowl at the center of the stage changes colors and provides a visual vortex where performers accomplish breathtaking acrobatic feats.

If you want to see this amazing production while it's in Bloomington, reserve your tickets now. You can find out more about your dining, lodging and shopping options in the third-largest town in the Twin Cities area by calling the Bloomington CVB at 800-346-4289.

Geneva Lakes Antique and Classic Boat Show

The Abbey Resort

Fontana, Wis. • Sept. 27-29

The annual Geneva Lakes Boat Show is an opportunity to admire classic and vintage boats from all over the country and for free! Presented by the Blackhawk Chapter of the Antique and Classic Boat Society, the show is held in the Abbey Resort's harbor.

Boat Show events kick off Friday with the estate tour and lunch. Take the estate tour and visit three of the finest estates on Geneva Lake, while cruising along the lake in one of the featured boats. Lunch is provided at the Lake Geneva Country Club, one of the oldest 18-hole golf courses in the Midwest. Later in the evening, you can mix and mingle while enjoying an opening reception with cocktails and dinner.

The boat showings begin Saturday and are on display during the day Saturday and Sunday with a boat parade scheduled Saturday. Boats range in all kinds of styles and sizes, with 2013 boat show entries including antique runabouts, canoes, classic cruisers, classic runabouts, classic utilities and Streblows.

'Days of Our Lives' book airs secrets for good lives

BY BRUCE INGRAM
For Sun-Times Media

While touring three years ago with the cast of "Days of Our Lives" to promote a book celebrating the soap opera's 45th anniversary, executive producer Greg Meng noticed one question being asked over and over, city after city.

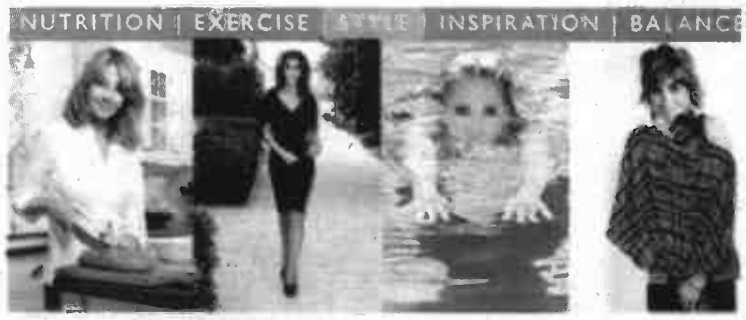
How did the cast members, who range in age from 18 to 85, manage to keep themselves looking so attractive, healthy and fit?

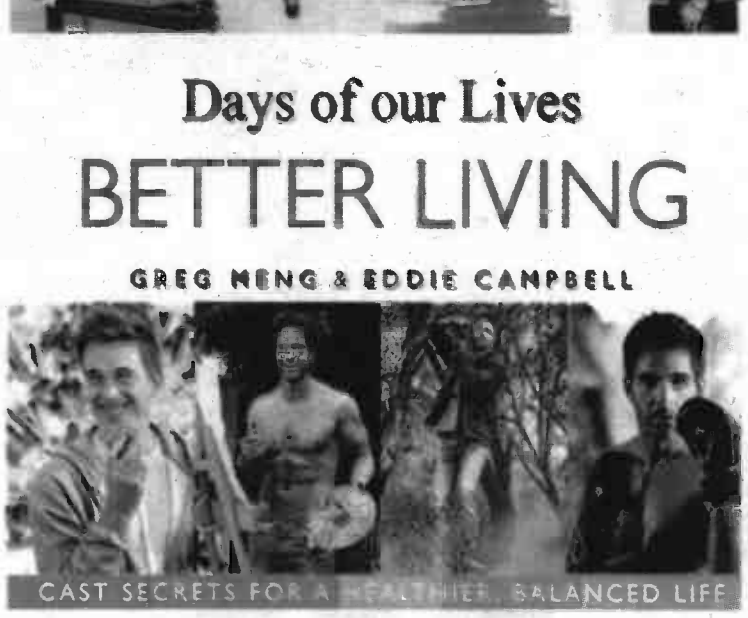
The answer to that question is revealed in the show's new recent book, "Days of Our Lives" Better Living: Cast Secrets for a Healthier Balanced Life. And cast members past and present are back on the road to support it, including stops Sept. 27 at Barnes & Noble in Skokie and Sept. 28 at Anderson's Bookshop in Naperville.

"I've always wanted to do a lifestyle-type book with the cast," said Meng, adding that he was as interested as the fans were in the topic. "I wanted to know their secrets and I found out that it kind of boiled down to five basic elements, namely nutrition, exercise, style, inspiration and balance."

As a result, Meng, who co-authored "Days of Our Lives" Better Living, decided to devote one section of the book to each of those elements, featuring different cast members in each section. Those include Alison Sweeney, Deidre Hall, Kristian Alfonso, Lisa Rinna, James Scott and Galen Gering, among others.

"I also realized that any of us could follow the same routines they do," Meng said. "None of them have any weird practices. They all just had a balance of those basic areas and a constant awareness of maintaining that balance."





He also noted that the cast's health and well-being practices seemed to contribute to their personal happiness "and a genuine sense of fulfillment. They all had other interests that balance their lives, whether it was another business or another creative outlet. And they also had a sense of cause — some sort of giving back or some spiritual element."

Best of all, he added, he learned that the actors don't necessarily work harder than the average person at their fitness routines — they just keep it.

"They constantly maintain it," he said. "It's part of their daily lives. They've found a way to be the best they can be and they keep at it. And that's something that's attainable for all of us."

Greg Meng

'Ruthless!' offers laughs with a side of revenge

BY MYRNA PETLICKI
For Sun-Times Media

Competition is fierce for the role of Pippi Longstocking in a school musical. Eight-year-old Tina Denmark knows she was destined to play that role, but when instead a child with connections is cast, Tina plots her revenge in "Ruthless! The Musical."

Abby Merrill plays that murderous would-be star in Big Noise Theatre Company's production of the Joe Paley (book and lyrics) and Marvin Laird (music) camp musical, Sept. 27-Oct. 13.

Although the 12-year-old seventh-grader wouldn't kill for a role, like Tina, she is convinced, "I was born to entertain." Abby loves performing so much that she comes all the way from Iowa City, Iowa, each week for the show, staying in Elk Grove Village.

"It's a really fun role," declared Abby, who reported that she has seen "The Bad Seed" and "Gypsy," two shows that "Ruthless!" mocks.

Abby giggled as she described Tina as a sociopath. "She's very complex. She doesn't really feel emotion or guilty when she does something. She doesn't feel empathy. She wants to be the star of everything."

Abby has taken dancing lessons since she was three and vocal lessons for four years, and spent a month last summer studying acting at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in Los Angeles. She likes the fact that this role makes use of all her talents.

But playing Tina can be a challenge, she admitted. "There are moments when you don't really know when she is being real or when she's just putting on an act."

Tina's mom, Judy Denmark, and her alter ego, Ginger Del Marco, are played by actor Elizabeth Morgan, who has performed with Circle, Quest and BoHo Theaters, among others.

"It's almost like two characters in one," Morgan explained. "She's the same person but she goes through a major transformation in-between act one and act two. In the first act, she is the quintessential perfect housewife but almost bordering on weird. And then, she finds out some things about her history and ends up transitioning into this big, flashy Broadway star-type in act two."

Morgan described playing Denmark/Del Marco as "a blast. If I had known about this show earlier, it would have been on my list of dream roles for years."

The score includes such playful tunes as "I Hate Musicals" and "Unkie's Muncle." Morgan's favorite is, "It Will Never Be That Way Again," which she described as having "a Norma Desmond feel to it."

Morgan has high praise for the book, which she called, "genuinely funny. There's never a dull moment." She also praised the cast, declaring, "Everybody in it is hysterical."

TABLEHOPPING

Christopher Barron, executive chef of Prasino, offers lighter, "greener" fare at his new Rosemont location. | LEE A. LITAS/FOR SUN-TIMES MEDIA

Lean, green ethic and true flavors rule at Prasino

BY LEE A. LITAS
Dining Columnist

PRASINO
5220 Fashion Outlet Way, Rosemont
10 a.m.-11 p.m. Monday-Saturday; 10 a.m.-7 p.m. Sunday
(847) 979-9900 or see prasino.com

Living up to one's name can either be a daunting task or a lofty aspiration. In the case of Prasino, which means "green" in Greek, the process has evolved into a philosophy.

In partnering with farmers, ranchers, vintners and brewers who produce their products in a way that is sustainable and humane to animals, and in using chemical and pesticide-free meats, the folks at Prasino take their mission as stewards of the environment to heart.

Prasino now has four locations — La Grange, Wicker Park/Bucktown, St. Charles, Mo., and the newest, Prasino Rosemont — that launched in September.

At its helm, executive chef Christopher Barron guides his staff to create dishes that are "Leaner, greener, and which do not maximize our carbon footprint."

Barron, who has cooked everything from 3-star Chinese food to American Bistro, to French and Italian, calls Prasino's cuisine "global."

Like the chorizo tacos created with an eye towards individual tastes. The dish is actually vegetarian, made with chorizo seitan instead of meat. The seitan, made of wheat gluten, is made aromatic with Mexican spices, sautéed and served on freshly-made, soft, corn tortillas with pico de gallo sauce and guacamole ($10).

The crunchy veggies in the vegan sushi roll may be prone to rolling around a bit but they are just making room for each flavor to come forward as the roll presents itself in your mouth. Fresh asparagus, earthy mushrooms and crunchy carrots come with a sesame-ginger sauce for dipping. The strength of this (also gluten-free) roll is its simplicity ($12).

"We try to let the true flavors of our products shine through. Less is more," explained Barron.

The signature dish is the Lobster Avocado small plate. And though you may be loathe breaking into the carefully-constructed tower of claw, knuckle and lobster body meat topped with a spicy butter sauce and mango salsa; you'll be glad you did. The mélange of fresh flavors play well together, providing the perfect balance of texture and spice ($16).

And the chef is not doing a hard-sell when he says, "You'll be hard-pressed to find a better roasted chicken anywhere." After a 24-hour brining, it's served with roasted potatoes in a lemon, garlic, parsley and wine reduction. Just knowing the meat comes from Amish Fieldale Farms, is antibiotic-free, organic and free-range, will help some sleep better at night ($18).

"There is really something for everybody on this menu all the way from gluten-free, to vegan to vegetarian. You don't have to look too hard — except to find the restaurant in the mall," said Barron.

FAMILY FRIENDLY

Ellie Elephant stars in dramatic reading

BY MYRNA PETLICKI
For Sun-Times Media

A mystery will be solved when author Elana Ashley presents a dramatic reading of Splunkunio Splunkey Detective and Peacemaker — Case One: The Missing Friendship Bracelet at 1 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 29, at Rhythm & Beyond, 8746 N. Shermer Road, Niles. The book is designed for ages 5-8.

"I'll take on the voices of the characters," Ashley said. Those are an alien named Splunkey, Ellie Elephant, her best friend Eli, and a narrator. Afterwards, kids will meet the Ellie Elephant puppet.

"We're going to be talking about some of the important ideas in the book," Ashley reported. "They include friendship, teamwork, not only solving problems but resolving conflicts. I focus on strategies. Probably, Ellie and I will close with a song."

Every child will receive a Splunkey bookmark and kids who answer questions about the book will get a Splunkey poster.

Copies of the book, in both English and English/Spanish, will be sold at a discount.

For details, call (847) 322-4260 or go to www.rhythmandbeyond.com.

Elana Ashley and Ellie Elephant teach valuable lessons about friendship and teamwork.

FACE IT

Kids are getting a little homework from the Park Ridge Public Library, 20 S. Prospect Ave. Bring them to the Children's Department anytime on Tuesday, Oct. 1, to pick up materials so they can create a Favorite Character Jack-O-Lantern. After they're finished, bring the jack-o-lantern back to the library to be displayed until Nov. 5.

FOOD

Unsung kohlrabi

BY MELISSA ELSMO
OUT OF MEL'S KITCHEN

As fall draws near, cooks everywhere clamor to conjure up a batch of cider-braised Brussels sprouts or a homemade sweet potato pie. Autumn's abundance of seasonal produce means that bushels full of savory winter squash, rotund pumpkins and frilly cabbages will arrive at markets everywhere in the coming weeks. Familiar comfort foods feature so many of these festive fall vegetables that it's no wonder quirky kohlrabi gets a little lost in the late harvest shuffle.

Like its more popular holiday worthy companions, green and purple kohlrabi varieties reach peak season in late September and early October. Frequently employed in a myriad of Hungarian, German and Asian dishes, this member of the cabbage family has the distinction of being largely unfamiliar to most American cooks.

"Unfamiliar vegetables like kohlrabi probably never caught on as an 'American' vegetable," said Oak Park resident and registered dietitian and nutritionist Maria Delis, "and ultimately fell out of favor to newer, easier-to-cook-with vegetables."

Delis is quick to point out, however, that disregarding kohlrabi is a missed opportunity to add a nutrient-dense vegetable to your ingredient arsenal. "Did you know that kohlrabi has more vitamin C than an orange?" asked Delis. "In fact, one cup of cooked kohlrabi provides us with more than a day's worth of vitamin C to help keep our immune system working properly."

In addition, this unusual vegetable is an excellent source of potassium, a good source of calcium, and offers three grams of protein per serving. This unsung hero of the produce stand also offers cooks maximum versatility, as everything from its bulb to the greens are edible and can be served cooked or raw.

"Mixing kohlrabi into a soup allows families to experiment with new ingredients in the context of a familiar recipe," Delis said. "Approaching new foods in this way makes trying new things easy and fun."

Long cooking times and an unfussy ingredient list let the sweet kohlrabi stand out in this velvety pureed soup without becoming overbearing. Caraway seeds, carrots and a few blanched kohlrabi leaves give the soup an elegant flair without compromising old world cooking techniques.

Raw kohlrabi tastes subtly of cucumber and packs a powerful crunch. Delis suggests adding raw kohlrabi to bountiful vegetable platters as a means to introduce it to younger children. Larger kohlrabi should be peeled for raw preparations like the salad I've created to honor this seasonal vegetable, but the ones I used were just 2 inches in diameter, making peeling unnecessary. Pairing thinly sliced kohlrabi with fennel and brightly flavored apple allows the textures in this healthy side dish salad to shine. Rounding out the dish with homemade lemon poppy seed vinaigrette and a few pecans makes it ideal to serve alongside grilled chicken or poached fish on warm Indian summer evenings.

So break out of your autumn produce patterns and embrace the versatility of kohlrabi this fall.

If there is a chill in the air:

CREAM OF KOHLRABI SOUP WITH CARROTS AND CARAWAY

(Serves 8)

INGREDIENTS:

1 tablespoon unsalted butter
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 sweet onion, chopped
Salt and pepper
3 small bulbs kohlrabi, diced
3 celery stalks, sliced
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 cup white wine
3 thyme sprigs
2 bay leaves
6 cups chicken stock
2 cups whole milk
Blanched kohlrabi leaves*, steamed carrots and caraway seeds for garnish.

METHOD:

1. Heat the butter and olive oil over medium heat in a soup pot until melted and bubbly. Add the onion and season with salt and pepper. Cook, stirring frequently, until onions are tender and lightly browned (about 10 minutes).

2. Add the kohlrabi and celery and continue cooking for an additional 10 minutes. Add the garlic, season with salt and pepper, and sauté just until fragrant (about 30 seconds).

3. Deglaze the pot with the wine and stir to scrape up the browned bits. Bring wine and vegetables to a boil and add the thyme sprigs and bay leaves to the pot. Add the chicken stock and bring to a boil.

4. Reduce heat to a simmer and cook the soup for 1 hour or until liquid is reduced by 1/3 and vegetables are very tender. Add the milk to the soup and adjust seasoning.

5. Transfer the soup in batches to a blender and puree until very smooth. Add more stock if soup is too thick. Strain the mixture through a fine mesh sieve, pressing with the back of a spoon until all liquid is extracted. Discard the solids and adjust the seasoning of the finished soup.

6. Serve the soup hot in small bowls garnished with blanched and chopped kohlrabi greens, steamed carrots and sprinkling of caraway seeds.

*To blanch the kohlrabi leaves, simply remove the stems and place the whole leaves into boiling water. When the leaves are bright green and tender, transfer them to an ice bath. Roll the cooled leaves up and chop or cut into ribbons.

If it feels a little warm outside:

RAW KOHLRABI SALAD WITH APPLES, FENNEL AND PECANS

(Serves 4-6 as a side dish)

INGREDIENTS:

For the dressing:
1 tablespoon sugar
2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
½ teaspoon lemon zest
1 teaspoon fennel fronds, chopped
1 teaspoon poppy seeds
¼ cup lemon juice
½ cup olive oil
For the salad:
1 cup watercress sprigs
1 small kohlrabi bulb, halved and thinly sliced
1 Granny Smith apple, halved and thinly sliced
1 fennel bulb, halved and thinly sliced
¼ cup pecan halves

METHOD:

1. To make the dressing, whisk together the sugar, mustard, zest, fronds, poppy seeds and lemon juice. Season with salt and pepper. Gradually whisk in the olive oil in a thin stream until dressing is emulsified. Adjust seasoning and set aside.

2. Place the watercress on a serving platter. Arrange the sliced kohlrabi, apple and fennel on top of the watercress and sprinkle with the pecans.

3. Drizzle the salad with the prepared dressing and sprinkle with additional fennel fronds and poppy seeds if desired.

HAUTE CUISINE

Rated PG-13 for brief strong language

Stars: Catherine Frot, Arthur Dupont, Jean d'Ormesson

The story of Daniele Delpeuch (Frot), an unknown regional cook who became the personal chef of French President Francois Mitterand — and the first woman ever to hold that post. Christian Vincent ("The Children") directed the drama.

RUSH

Rated R for sexual content, nudity, language, some disturbing images and brief drug use

Stars: Chris Hemsworth, Daniel Brühl, Olivia Wilde

Director Ron Howard's great strength has always been his ability to orchestrate emotions while telling involving stories, but he's stripped those narrative gears somewhat with this disappointing racetrack saga. The legendary rivalry between 1970s Formula 1 racers James Hunt (Hemsworth) and Niki Lauda (Brühl) was tailor-made for the movies, concluding as it did with a neck-and-neck showdown for the world championship. Yet there's a strange quality of emotional detachment to "Rush," combined with occasional confusion as the story jumps back and forth over time from race to nearly identical race, that prevents it from crossing the finish line in the expected blaze of glory. It doesn't help that both of the main characters are hard to warm to, despite strong performances. All in all, Howard's previous pedal-to-the-metal movie, his 1977 debut with "Grand Theft Auto," was a lot more fun.

STILL PLAYING

PRISONERS
★★★1/2

Rated R for disturbing violent content including torture, and language throughout

Stars: Hugh Jackman, Jake Gyllenhaal, Maria Bello, Viola Davis, Terrence Howard

This grim, unnervingly suspenseful thriller wastes no time getting to its central moral dilemma. After his little girl is abducted and the initial suspect (Paul Dano as a vacant-eyed young man with the IQ of a 10-year-old) is released by police for lack of evidence, an enraged father (Jackman in a career-best performance) kidnaps him and subjects him to tortures straight out of Abu Ghraib. Director Denis Villeneuve (Oscar-nominated for 2010's "Incendies") delivers a complex, well-executed mystery and character study of the increasingly conflicted father (a devout Christian) and of the misleadingly mild-mannered detective assigned to the case (Gyllenhaal, also excellent), with issues of his own. Most of all, though, "Prisoners" raises some of the same questions posed by "Zero Dark Thirty" about whether or not extreme means are justified by a crucially important end.

Death Notices

Stauber, Virginia L.

(nee Vinci) Age 94, passed away peacefully in her home, surrounded by her family, on the evening of Friday, September 20th, 2013. Virginia was the daughter of Bernice Hersey Vinci and Henry Vinci, and sister to Samuel and Robert Vinci, all of whom preceded her in death. She was the beloved wife of the late Louis F. Stauber, and is survived by her four adult children, Sue Blough, Louis Jr., Steven, and Barbara Schiappa; daughter-in-law, Kathleen Stauber; son-in-law, David Schiappa; and grandchildren, Robert and Samantha Stauber, Adam and Spencer Schiappa.

Virginia attended Senn High School and North Park College, while usually working full time for her father's business. Ever since she was a little girl, she always loved flowers. While married and raising her four children, she became a noted, award winning gardener as well as a Master Flower Show Judge. She was a very active member and past president of the Skokie Garden Club and also served as Horticulture Chairperson for the Garden Clubs of Illinois. She served on the Beautification and Improvement Commission for the town of Skokie for many years and became a garden consultant and a landscape design critic. Virginia especially loved orchids which she grew in her greenhouse and was a member of the Illinois Orchid Society.

Virginia was honored by having an annual award named for her, the Virginia Stauber Horticulture Program Award, which is awarded to a garden club member in the state for outstanding personal effort and service promoting horticulture.

She loved to travel and visited famous gardens all over the world, including Asia, Europe, South America and North America. To celebrate her 80th birthday, she went on a garden tour of South Africa and visited Zimbabwe to see Victoria Falls.

Virginia was also a wonderful cook and an avid bridge player till the end of her life. She was always happy to be surrounded by her children and grandchildren.

Memorial Gathering, Saturday, September 28th, from 11:30 a.m. until time of Memorial Service, 12 noon, at HABEN Funeral Home & Crematory, 8057 Niles Center Rd., Skokie.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Garden Clubs of Illinois, Inc., IL State Headquarters, 188 Industrial Drive, Suite 120, Elmhurst, IL, 60126. Funeral info: 847.673.6111 or www.habenfuneral.com.

PUZZLE ANSWERS

HOROSCOPES: OCTOBER 2 — OCTOBER 8

BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE INC.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your Aries charm helps persuade others to listen to your proposal. But it's still a long way from acceptance, unless you can stand up to the tough questions.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Plan to share a weekend getaway from all the pressures of your hectic workaday world with a very special someone. You could be pleasantly surprised.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Keen insight once again helps you handle a challenging situation with a clearer perception of what it's really all about. What you learn helps you make a difficult decision.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) If you want to steer clear of getting involved in a new family dispute, say so. Your stand might cause hurt feelings for some, but overall, you'll be respected.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Expect recognition for your efforts in getting a project into operation. Besides the more practical rewards, your Lion's heart will be warmed by the admiration.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Set aside time to rid yourself of clutter that might well be drawing down your creative energies. Consider asking someone to help you decide what stays.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A colleague could make a request that might place you in an awkward position with co-workers. Share your concerns with an associate you can trust.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Energy levels are way up, allowing you to take on the added challenges. Expect this move to lead to an important opportunity.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your continuing sense of confidence in what you've set out to do gives encouragement to others. Expect more people asking to add their efforts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might think it would be best to reject a suggestion others insist would be unworkable. Might be surprised by what you find if you give it a chance.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Changing a decision might disappoint some people, the important thing is to be honest with yourself. Don't go ahead with anything you have doubts.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) There could be some fallout from an emotional confrontation that you really should deal with before moving on. Best to start fresh with a clean, clear slate.

Vern Luebke's 1951 Ford custom sedan

By Kevin Griffin - kevin.griffin@wrapports.com

Vern Luebke's 1951 Ford two-door custom sedan has come a long way from where it was more than 30 years ago. Luebke called it a bird sanctuary. Abandoned from its previous owner, the Ford sat in a field for 25 years, untouched by anything but nature.

The car, at that point useless, was then sold to the owner previous to Luebke. Almost everything needed to be fixed, except Luebke says, the paint job, which is yet to collect one spot of rust.

Today, Luebke's Ford often finds itself at the center of all the attention at local car shows. It's true classic look and top condition is what makes it a favorite. The farthest trip the car has taken since Luebke has owned it was to Ontario, Canada, to take home a first place trophy in a classic car show.

Luebke has had the car for six years. He has done a lot to it including installing hardened valves and more modern engine parts. In it's original version, the car wasn't built to take unleaded gasoline. The valve and engine improvements were made so that the car could take today's unleaded gasoline.

Luebke is planning on holding onto his Ford for now. After enjoying as much success as he has had at car shows, he figures, "why not?"

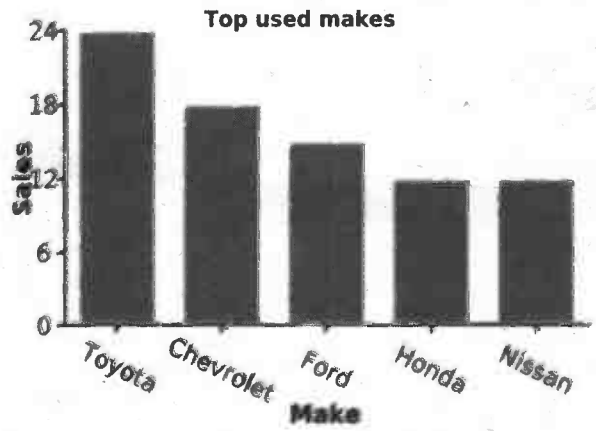
Used cars make up 64 percent of sales

TODRIVE.COM NEWS SERVICE



SOURCE: Illinois Secretary of State

PROVIDED BY TODRIVE.COM.

In the month of June, Niles residents chose Nissan more often than any other make when purchasing new vehicles and opted for Toyota over all other makes when buying used.

All told, new car sales accounted for 36 percent of overall auto sales to residents of Niles, totaling 82 of the 229 overall auto sales in the month. Toyota and Chevrolet followed Nissan to round out the list of the top three auto brands bought new by residents in June. Residents purchased a total of 13 new Nissan vehicles, 12 new Toyota cars, and nine new Chevrolet vehicles in the month.

Used car sales brought in 64 percent of overall auto sales, bringing in 147 of the 229 overall car sales. Toyota led the way as the most popular used auto brand, totaling 24 sales. Chevrolet and Ford also made a good showing in the used car sales category, with 18 and 15 sales, respectively.

Over the course of June, 62 percent of purchases by Niles residents came through a local dealer, while 38 percent were private party transactions. The 62 percent originating from auto dealerships translated to 142 total dealer sales in the month.

Golf Mill Ford (seven sales) sold more used cars to Niles residents in June than any other dealer, followed by Carmax Auto Superstores (six) and Star Nissan (three). The top three auto dealerships selling new cars to Niles residents in the month were Golf Mill Ford with nine sales, Bredemann Toyota (seven sales) and Jennings Chevrolet (five).

Notre Dame quarterback Ryan Greene fights his way through the Marian Catholic defense during their game Friday evening in Niles. | MICHAEL R. SCHMIDT/FOR SUN-TIMES MEDIA

NOTRE DAME

Greene scorching defenses set on stopping RB James

Senior threw for four touchdowns in victory over Marian Catholic

BY RYAN NEIMAN
For Sun-Times Media, @HSCNewsNorth

NILES — Given the hype surrounding Notre Dame star running back Chris James following his breakout junior season, some opposing defenses have viewed the Dons as a one-dimensional offense at the start of 2013.

Notre Dame senior quarterback Ryan Greene might just be making defensive coordinators think twice about how they try to slow the Dons.

Greene's talents were on full display in Friday night's 35-0 victory over Marian Catholic: He threw for 204 yards and four touchdowns. Greene, who played sparingly as a junior, has 755 passing yards and 10 touchdowns on the season.

"He's matured. He has a lot of poise and he understands the offense," Notre Dame coach Mike Hennessey said. "He can exploit things that are there for him to thrive in."

James ran for 97 yards and a touchdown against Marian Catholic, while Greene threw the ball with precision and did not turn it over. However, Greene was quick to give his teammates credit.

"I had some playmakers that made some exceptional plays," Greene said. "They were some good speed guys who ran good routes all night."

Greene connected with senior wide receiver Pat Cravens for a pair of touchdowns, including a 53-yard strike.

Cravens, who has become a favorite target of Greene's this season, believes his quarterback brings a different dynamic to Notre Dame's offense.

"It's an element of surprise for us. Most teams are not looking for us to launch it down the field," Cravens said. "Greene brings our offense to a whole other level."

However, it is not the statistics or the in-game achievements that drive Greene.

"We are 4-0, but we have to keep it going," Greene said. "First win in conference means the world, but the ultimate goal is to win it all and to keep it going."

Notre Dame plays Friday at St. Viator.

NILES WEST

Spillman's kick returns give Wolves a boost

Junior studied Jordan, now follows in his footsteps

BY DAN SHALIN
For Sun-Times Media, @danshalin

SKOKIE — At halftime of Niles West's 31-23 win over Glenbrook North, Wolves coach Scott Baum caught junior wide receiver/kick returner Quran Spillman hanging his head in the locker room.

In the first half Friday, Spillman lost a fumble near the goal line after catching a 50-yard pass from junior quarterback Tommy Galanopoulos. Spillman later admitted he also was disappointed the ball had not been thrown his way more often.

"At halftime, he's in there looking down and I said 'Quran, you're our guy, we don't have that many guys. You have to do this!' " said Baum, whose team improved to 4-0.

Spillman delivered an electrifying kickoff return for a touchdown on the final play of the third quarter. It was his third kick return for a touchdown this season.

"We always say, 'Change the momentum with kickoff returns,' " said Spillman, who caught two balls for 31 yards in the second half and finished with six grabs for 72 yards. "If we execute our blocks, I know we can take it to the house the majority of the time, if we all do our job."

The score came just after Glenbrook North (1-3) had closed the gap to 24-23 on a touchdown run by quarterback AJ Spitz. Niles West junior Jeremy Pignato blocked the would-be tying extra point.

"The kid is just shot out of a cannon," Galanopoulos said of Spillman. "Any time he gets the ball, something can happen. (The return) was really huge for our team, especially after I threw a pick (on the previous Niles West series). He comes and runs 90-something yards for a huge play. That totally changed the game around and helped us get to the end."

Niles West, which plays host Saturday to Evanston in the CSL South opener for both teams, has had its share of talented kick returners/receivers in recent years. Jeremiah Jordan was a key member of last year's squad that ended an eight-year postseason drought. Before him, Chris Wright thrilled Wolves fans during the 2007 and '08 seasons before going on to star at Eastern Illinois.

Galanopoulos said Spillman, a first-year varsity player, reminds him of Jordan. Though the 5-foot-11, 155-pound Spillman is a bit smaller than his 6-foot, 175-pound predecessor.

"It's cool to have a guy like that one-on-one, who can just go up and get the ball over a lot of people," Galanopoulos said. "He's not as big (as Jordan), but he's definitely more elusive and a lot quicker."

Spillman said he studied Jordan's game closely.

"After playing the sophomore games last season, I always would go directly and watch him returning kicks and playing wide receiver," he said.

Spillman said he realizes he needs to bulk up a little more for football and said he was contemplating skipping basketball this winter in order to concentrate on improving his strength and speed. Spillman also said he plans to join the Niles West track team in the spring.

Baum said Spillman mixes raw talent with a good work ethic, and said he looks forward to seeing Spillman play after he's added more muscle.

"He's a fun kid to watch. He reminds me of Jeremiah," Baum said. "(Spillman) is just so smooth out there. It doesn't look like he's moving (that fast), and all of a sudden, he's gone. He works hard. Some of the success he's having is because of hard work, it's not a fluke."

Baum added: "(Spillman) is not big. He's only going to get bigger. He's a young kid and he's going to grow and it's going to be fun this year and next year."

Seniors enjoying strong final seasons

Six of the Vikings' seven seniors have a winning record

BY MIKE CHAMERNIK

SKOKIE — Niles North started the season 7-4, and the core of the team, a septet of seniors, is thriving.

Six of the seven seniors on the roster have a winning record. Camille Paskind is tops among seniors with a 12-5 mark. (All the records are through Saturday.) She typically plays No. 2 singles.

Niles North coach John Amaro praised Paskind for her motor.

"When Camille plays tennis, she plays the right way and plays with a tenacity and drive that is really rare," Amaro said. "I love her game, I love her patience, I love her fierceness on the court. I think that when a girl plays her, they never want to play her again."

Emily Moy and Irene Cho play No. 2 doubles as a tandem and are 9-5 this season. The two have a close bond on the court, but the relationship goes past that.

"We've actually been best friends (since) before we started playing tennis together," Cho said. "We're really close, and I see her every day, like every hour."

Dana Maglaque, who plays mostly doubles, is 7-5 for the Vikings, and Hanjee Na, also a doubles player, is 4-2. Singles player Megan Whitehouse is 6-2, and her doubles-playing twin sister Hailee is a shade under .500 at 3-4.

The group has worked to create a team atmosphere. Not only are all the seniors familiar with each other after years of high school tennis, but they've welcomed in freshman Sabrina Palavra, the No. 1 singles player who boasts an 11-3 record.

"We've helped her get accustomed to the team and she's become a really good team player," Paskind said of Palavra. "We've befriended her and she's become a really good asset to our team."

Palavra could be around for a while, but most of the team will be graduating in June.

"It will be unrealistic of me to think that the seniors and their leadership can be replaced," Amaro said.

Demons show promise despite results

Three sophomores help Maine East finish sixth at its own tournament

PARK RIDGE — Maine East's young volleyball team has demonstrated plenty of energy on the court — with a few mistakes along the way.

The Blue Demons relied heavily on the Class of 2016 at the 2013 Maine East Blue Demon girls volleyball invitational. Middle hitter Niki Ahlstrand, libero Miranda Duro and outside hitter Maggie Chwieralski — all sophomores — played pivotal roles for Maine East this past weekend.

"We're young, and we have some ups and downs here and there mentally," coach Anne Bezek said. "But overall for as young as we are, the composure that especially the three sophomores show for the roles I'm asking them to take on, they're doing an amazing job of stepping in on their first year of varsity."

Their promise was demonstrated in Maine East's stunning victory over Trinity, in which the Blue Demons rallied from a 21-17 third-set deficit by scoring eight of the match's last nine points.

Their youth was more visible in their fifth-place match against Maine South, when a series of net violations and double touches allowed the Hawks to pull away.

"It's going to happen in every game," Chwieralski said. "Every ref is going to call stuff. We just need to get together as a team and side out, ignore it and play on."

Junior setter Sarah Hua-Pham had a hard time avoiding double touches.

"Trying to side out, it was a little bit difficult because I got called on it a couple of times, but I tried my best," Hua-Pham said. "As much as I could, I tried to show the ref that I'm not doing doubles or anything else."

Hua-Pham has generally been "amazing," according to Bezek, as the junior takes over setting duties for the first time.

"It was strange because my setter hasn't been called like that this whole season," Bezek said. "This is the first time. She had maybe one or two here and there a match like most setters, but that was kind of a strange run there and I think mentally it kind of took something out of us. The net violations, too. Normally, we're better and under better control."

Even with the sloppiness that occasionally got in Maine East's way on Saturday, the team can build on the way it rallied past a tough Trinity team and then, trailing 23-12 in the second set against Maine South, scored five straight points to put a little scare into the Hawks.

"The girls are really good about fighting no matter how tough it is, no matter how late in the game it is," Bezek said. "They just keep battling and they just always believe they can get back in it."

Wade emerges as an offensive threat

Sophomore running back rushes for 80 yards, touchdown against Titans

GLENVIEW — A 46-7 loss to Glenbrook South capped a tough week for the Niles North football team, but there was one bright spot among the struggles.

The Vikings (1-3) entered Friday's game against the Titans without junior starting quarterback Tony Granato and junior starting running back Julian Garrett.

Both players are likely done for the year, Vikings coach Mark Egofske said. Granato is sidelined with a left rotator cuff tear and Garrett has a meniscus tear in his right knee.

Niles North senior Charles Long started under center and sophomore teammate Barrington Wade started at running back against Glenbrook South. It didn't change Niles North's fortunes. The Vikings lost their third straight and struggled offensively for a second game in a row after losing 52-0 to New Trier the previous week.

The Vikings, who open conference play at Maine West on Friday, have something to be excited about, though.

Niles North rode Wade heavily in the first half against the Titans, and the sophomore rose to the occasion.

After he fumbled on his first carry, Wade recovered the ball and then he ran 12 yards on the next play. He continued to be a bright spot for the Vikings from there, finishing the first half with 73 yards and one touchdown on 20 carries. He ran for 56 yards in the first quarter alone.

His 5-yard touchdown run in the first quarter briefly gave the Vikings the lead. Wade would finish with 80 yards rushing after Niles North went to the air more in the second half and struggled to move the ball.

Despite the loss, Egofske spoke effusively about Wade's debut.

"We knew he was special," Egofske said. "He's been working his rear end off since the day he walked in our school as a freshman. He's someone special. What he did in a short period of time ... is amazing."

With the Vikings down two critical starters on offense, Niles North may be relying heavily on Wade the rest of the season, pushing the sophomore into the spotlight earlier than expected.

Egofske is excited to see what Wade can do the rest of the season.

"He still doesn't have all our plays down yet and he doesn't have a feel for that," Egofske said. "But the more he runs the ball the better he's going to be and the better we'll be."

Corey, Schanz defend decision to rest starters

Blue Demons coach expects to have all but two of his players back against Spartans

BY ERIC VAN DRIL
For Sun-Times Media, @VanDrilSports

PARK RIDGE — Maine East football coach Gabe Corey breaks his team's season into two categories.

Corey said he uses the regular season's first four contests to prepare the Blue Demons for the five-game CSL North stretch at the back half of the regular season. Corey treats those first four contests like a preseason, he said.

Corey rested the vast majority of his starters to try to get his team healthy for CSL North play, which Maine East begins Friday night against Glenbrook North.

As a result, Corey had what he called "a JV group" playing against a team that hasn't lost a CSL South game in 12 years.

"Could we have played some of them? Yeah, with the risk of making (the injury situation) worse," said Corey, after Maine South trounced the Blue Demons 49-0 Friday. "Injuries are going to happen. It just seems like right now, we needed to stop that chain of events and I just felt like tonight, if we played some of those kids, it was going to retweak some of those (injuries).

"I just felt like we needed to get healthy right now. I think, next week, we're going to have a healthy team. We're going to have a good shot in our first conference game with GBN."

Maine East, a team with 30 players listed on its varsity roster, had been beset by injuries during the first three weeks of its season.

It lost five players in its first game of those season, Corey said. Then, against Niles West on Sept. 12, junior left tackle Nick Pavlovic, senior fullback Javed Lukovic and senior wide receiver Andrew Wint were injured.

The Blue Demons' staff elected to sit those three players and several others. Among them were junior running back Munkhaldar Bayar; sophomore wide receiver, defensive back and quarterback Woody Corey; senior running back and defensive back Christian Lopez; and senior Julian Brummitt and junior George Corey — both start on Maine East's offensive line and also play defense.

Gabe Corey said all of Maine East's players, excluding senior quarterback Alex Corey (knee) and junior backup quarterback Steve Youel (shoulder), should be able to play against the Spartans. Woody Corey, Alex Corey and George Corey are Gabe Corey's sons.

The Hawks, in a display of good sportsmanship, pulled off the throttle very early against Maine East (2-2). Coach Dave Inserra removed his starters once Maine South led 14-0, and he removed many of his second-stringers after the Hawks took a 28-0 lead with 37 seconds remaining in the first quarter.

Only one Maine East player — junior quarterback Justin Ethakattu (ribs) — left the game due to an injury.

"I wasn't happy with (Maine East's decision)," Maine South coach Dave Inserra said after the game.

He added: "I can't comment and say it the right way, so I'll just say Coach Inserra has no comment on that issue."

Inserra was then asked another question and, after answering it, he added that, "It just shouldn't have been handled that way (by Maine East)."

Blue Demons athletic director Steve Schanz said forfeiting the contest was discussed in the week leading up to the game, but he considers forfeiting to be a last-ditch measure taken when there are no other options. Schanz said part of the reason Maine East decided against forfeiting was it didn't want to mess up Maine South's Hall of Fame ceremony and Maine South's ability to make money by hosting the game.

Schanz said on Monday that no one from Maine East had complained to him. Schanz stood by his coaches, saying that Gabe Corey and his staff made "Herculean efforts" to prepare a depleted Blue Demons squad to play against one of the best teams in the state.

Gabe Corey "had concern about going against a very good team like Maine South with a patchwork varsity crew, but as I told him, 'You don't have a choice,' " Schanz said. "You've got to go in and, even though a lot of these sophomore boys that you brought up are certainly not ready for varsity ball yet — especially against a team like Maine South — I thought he did a tremendous job getting them ready for that game."
