SHOUT OUT

Jack Foreman, recent Niles North grad

Jack Foreman is a member of the Niles North High School Class of 2015. He's looking forward to going to college in the fall, getting out of Illinois, and being on his own, but for now is planning to spend his summer vacation working and catching up with friends.

Q: What do you plan to do now that you've graduated?

A: I'm going to college to study civil engineering at the University of Wisconsin-Platteville.

Q: What made you choose civil engineering?

A: I just like building stuff with my hands and looking at what I can build.

Q: What are you going to do over the summer?

A: I'm going to be working and playing some baseball.

Q: Where do you work?

A: Maier's Bakery in Morton Grove on Waukegan.

Q: What do you like about working at a bakery?

A: The discounts on the food are great. But really I like helping other people and seeing the smile on a kid's face when they get a doughnut.

ALICIA RAMIREZ/PIONEER PRESS

Jack Foreman

Q: What is your favorite product at the bakery?

A: Definitely the doughnuts. Just the regular with chocolate.

Q: Have you seen any good movies?

A: No, I guess not. I've been watching more shows on Netflix.

Q: What's your favorite show right now?

A: Right now I'm in the middle of watching "Last Man Standing" but my favorite show is "Big Bang Theory."

Niles facility makes limited edition Blackhawks Stanley Cup Coca-Cola cans

BY LINDSEY COMPTON
Pioneer Press

Chicago Blackhawks fans can continue to savor the sweet taste of the Stanley Cup victory — while supplies last.

On June 16, Coca-Cola released two special limited-edition cans in honor of the Blackhawks' third Stanley Cup win in six years, one for Coke Zero and one for the classic Coke can. This will be the third time the Atlanta-based company has released a commemorative collectible for the Chicago market to purchase.

"We have a long-term relationship with the Blackhawks," said Eris Crosswhite, manager of the Coca-Cola production center in Niles. "We were with them for the championship in 2010 and we thought in tradition of that relationship we would continue producing these limited edition cans."

Similar to previous designs, this year's can includes the Blackhawks' logo with "2015 Champions" inscribed above it. What has not changed, he said, is the fan excitement.

"I have not seen so much excitement about one can in my entire life," he said. "A lot of people want to have a piece of the championship, and it has been an honor to be a part of it."

The Niles production center reported releasing more than 100,000 of each Coke and Zero can to the Chicago market during its first round of production, noting there are no plans to produce any more.

"We've already gone back into production one time to meet demands," Crosswhite said. "We even had a few people stop by the (Niles) facility because they couldn't find them in their local area market."

Blackhawks fans outside of Chicagoland — and even Illinois — have requested that the Cup-themed cans be shipped to them, but Coca-Cola said they're focusing on local fans first.

"For now, we still have product on the shelves and product to sell," said Kathleen Strand, Chicago-based director of government relations and public affairs for Coca-Cola. "That's where we're going to focus, to make sure the people in the Chicago area get it first."

Within a week of the release, sellers on eBay began listing the cans for purchase, one seller starting the bid for one Coke Zero can at $19.99. In stores such as Jewel-Osco, the cans could be purchased in either a 6-pack or 12-pack. Even though Crosswhite stated the company cannot speak for the value of its cans down the line, he hopes the message speaks to Coca-Cola's connection to the Blackhawks and the Chicagoland market.

"We're so very proud of the Chicago Blackhawks for a great win," Crosswhite said. "We're very happy to be a part of ... a dynasty, and hopefully that continues next year."

Coca-Cola's Niles facility has been producing and distributing products for the Chicago market since 1968, Crosswhite said. In his second year managing the facility, he noted the importance of being a part of the community. While there are currently no formal rules or policies regarding potential tours of the production plant, "I like to keep options open," he said.

"I have granted tours to people. We're part of the community, so we want to make sure that we behave as such."

Niles announces Fourth of July parade details, route

The village of Niles' Fourth of July Parade will take place on Saturday, July 4 at 9 a.m. The parade route, a village press release said, will begin at Notre Dame College Prep and end at Grennan Heights Park.

The parade will travel south on Ozark Avenue to Main Street, east on Main Street to Harlem Avenue, south on Harlem Avenue to Monroe Street and west on Monroe Street to Oketo Avenue.

The following parking restrictions, the release said, will be in effect until 2 p.m. on July 4:

There is no parking along the parade route, on Crain Street from Ozark Avenue to Ozanam, on Ozanam Avenue from Greenleaf Street to Dempster Street, on Keeney Street and Kedzie Street from Odell Ave-

Skokie PD offers safe location to conduct online transactions

BY LINDSEY COMPTON
Pioneer Press

People purchasing items through online sites such as Craigslist, eBay and Facebook can now use the Skokie Police Department lobby as a means for safe person-to-person transactions.

Announcing its facility as a "Safe Transaction Zone," on a May 6 Facebook post, the program began after research conducted showed other Illinois law enforcement facilities all over the country were offering space as a means to "minimize the risk when dealing with an online stranger," the post read.

Under 24-hour video surveillance, buyers and sellers can fulfill purchases in a well lit "safe haven" to help deter crime.

"Our lobby is one of those transaction zones where people can come in and feel secure here," Eric Swaback said, a spokesperson for the Skokie Police.

Reports of Craigslist and online-transaction related crimes have surfaced over the years, causing a national move for police stations all over the country to offer safe zones for transactions.

Craigslist features a personal safety page suggesting users meet in a public place, tell a family member where they are going and take a cellphone. The page notes that the "overwhelming majority of Craigslist users are trustworthy and well-intentioned," and that violent crime is low.

"Instead of a person coming to their house, someone can say 'meet me at the Skokie police department' so they don't feel like they will get robbed," Swaback said.

Police officers and law officials will not oversee or be involved with any transactions, and times do not need to be scheduled for any resident to come in, Swaback said. Items such as weapons are not allowed in the facility except by a sworn law officer, and illegal transactions, such as drugs and narcotics, are not permitted.

Niles, Lincolnwood and Morton Grove police have not responded to inquiries of a potential safe zone.

MWRD announces train service will not be restored until October

By MIKE ISAACS
Pioneer Press

Yellow Line trains have not rolled along Skokie's tracks for more than a month now, a closure that commuters will have to deal with into the fall after the Metropolitan Water Reclamation District announced Friday that service would not be restored until October.

The Yellow Line was shut down May 17, when the ground collapsed underneath tracks between Howard and Oakton streets across from McCormick Boulevard. CTA officials said the collapse took place during a construction project undertaken by the district and performed by Walsh Construction. No one was hurt.

Much of the past month was spent assessing the problem and determining the best way to tackle it, according to a release from the water district.

"This was the plan we accepted to restore service as quickly as possible while maintaining safety as the top priority," said CTA spokesman Jeff Tolman, referring to the repair timeline.

Many Yellow Line commuters said they were feeling the impact after only a month without service, and now they have months more to wait.

"I bought my house based on proximity to the Yellow Line," said Skokie resident Trina James, who regularly takes the line at the Dempster Street station. "I drove around the neighborhood and chose my house because of access to the CTA line. So this has really changed things for me."

The frustration was repeated by other commuters who said they rely on the Yellow Line to get to and from downtown. Many said they've had to find transportation alternatives or use CTA-provided shuttle buses.

The Yellow Line, for-

MIKE ISAACS/PIONEER PRESS

The CTA's Yellow Line train service in Skokie has been closed for more than a month now. The downtown Skokie station is relatively quiet although it is still open for customers who want to add money to their CTA cards.

merly known as the Skokie Swift, has two Skokie stops — the long-standing Dempster Street station on the north and a newer, southern Oakton Street station downtown. The line feeds into Howard Street, where commuters normally could transfer to other lines.

"I didn't know what to expect when I first had to use the shuttle," said Mary Raynard, who works at a hospital. "I got to work late those first few days. I've adjusted, but I have to wake up a lot earlier."

James said her total travel time has been extended by at least 40 minutes by taking the shuttle.

"The shuttle is nice," she said. "I give it to the CTA, and it's been a very pleasant ride. It just takes an extra 20 minutes each way, and that has an impact."

Village officials said they have been satisfied with the way the CTA and the water reclamation district have handled the engineering problem.

Shortly after the line closed, Skokie Corporation Counsel Michael Lorge said, the village met with the CTA, the water district and Walsh Construction, which was hired by the water district to perform tunneling work when the ground gave in.

"From the very beginning, we emphasized the impact this transportation has on our residents," Lorge said. "We wanted to personalize it because it was a room filled with individuals who were rightfully concerned about engineering issues. But we wanted them all to keep a personal face of our residents in mind."

When Skokie officials looked at photographs of the collapse, they felt fortunate that no one was killed or injured because of the embankment cave-in, Skokie Marketing and Communications Director Ann Tennes said.

"As difficult as this is, we could have been looking at a tragedy," she said. "When you look at the situation through that lens, it certainly makes sense that the remedy needs to be planned appropriately and executed appropriately."

Lorge said the village wanted assurance that the project would not get "mired down in legal and financial disputes." He said the village believes that has not been the case.

But the disrupted service has been a blow to Skokie, he said. Village leaders spent more than 10 years trying to bring a CTA station to downtown before it finally opened three years ago.

"The mayor and the trustees are frustrated, like all of us, because of all of the energy that went into building this station," Lorge said. "They put in heart and soul to get state money, federal money, to keep (the project) going even when the economy was otherwise stopping programs like this. You have elected officials who went to the mat to make sure this project got done, and now they see it stymied."

The promise of the downtown Yellow Line station was a key factor in drawing the adjacent Illinois Science and Technology Park. When the train station opened in 2012, science park and village officials called the day significant.

"Everyone has been looking forward to this for a long time," Richard Groh of the science park said during the grand opening.

Three years later, some science park employees have found themselves without their regular mode of transportation to get to their jobs.

Lynne Bamford said she usually doesn't take the Yellow Line to the science park, but the very day service was halted, she had planned to.

"I got caught the day it went down," she said. "I had only taken it four or five times before, so I'm not as impacted as others, but it just so happened I was that day."

Science park employee Harold Min said he drives to his job most of the time, but many of his colleagues rely on the Yellow Line.

"It's pretty hard on them," Min said. "It has taken them 15 to 30 more minutes each way. You would have thought by now something would have been done, but I guess we all have to live with it."

Downtown Skokie's Yellow Line station sits quiet, with a sign planted outside saying service is down. Every day, two CTA employees work there. They said people occasionally come to the station to add money to their transit cards.

The shutdown's impact on the downtown economy has varied greatly, according to business owners. Some report having felt no effect; others who draw customers from the city have a different perspective.

Kurt Wood of Aw Yeah Comics said he saw a "slight" downturn initially, but his customers quickly found alternative ways to get to the store. Kabul House supervisor Gerber Guerrero said he estimates business at the restaurant has dropped 10 to 15 percent since the Yellow Line went down.

"We have customers who come from the city who don't like to drive," he said. "We're just concerned. We want to see this come back as soon as possible."

Robert Katzman, owner of downtown Skokie's Magazine Museum, said customers have more difficulty getting to the area now.

"The train is a vital link for me," he said. "With that link gone, people just don't want to bother or don't have time to come here."

Some said their employees have had trouble getting to work. At Fogo's Peri Peri restaurant, assistant manager Terrycka Marsh said she has been late several times because she relies on the Yellow Line every workday.

"It's been an extra 30 minutes to an hour now to get here," she said. "It's definitely made a difference."

Skokie officials say they understand the frustration. The village recently made parking in the Dempster Street Skokie Swift lot free, something officials said would continue as long as the Yellow Line is closed.

Tennes said the village has other ideas to reward commuters for their patience once service is restored, but they still need to be discussed with the CTA. The first priority, she said, is to get the trains up and running.

Village Board approves mosque, religious center to open in Lincolnwood

By NATALIE HAYES
Pioneer Press

Muslim leaders of a Chicago-based mosque were welcomed to Lincolnwood by Mayor Jerry Turry on June 16 following a unanimous decision by the village board to allow a mosque and religious education center to open in the village.

Leaders of Sacred Learning NFP, a nonprofit Islamic religious organization, purchased the former Myron & Phil's steakhouse site on the 3900 block of West Devon Avenue with plans to build a two-story Islamic spiritual center for the local Muslim community, village documents show.

The group first submitted a petition to the village of Lincolnwood last month to demolish the former building that housed Myron & Phil's steakhouse, a Lincolnwood institution for more than four decades that closed down two years ago after a fire.

Muslim community members have gathered in support of the proposed mosque at Lincolnwood Village Hall during the past two village board meetings as trustees considered the organization's request for six variations in the village's zoning code that would allow them to begin construction at the site.

About 30 Muslim supporters gathered in the lobby outside of village chambers the night of June 16 to celebrate the village board's decision to allow their plans to proceed.

Sayed Shariff, executive vice president of the organization, said Sacred Learning's new Lincolnwood facility would provide better access to prayer and educational services for local Muslim families who live in the community.

"We're very excited," Shariff said following the board's ruling. "People have to drive all the way to the city or neighboring suburbs [for the nearest mosque], but now we'll just be a stone's throw away."

The mosque wouldn't open for at least a year and a half, Shariff said, adding that the former Myron & Phil's building hasn't been demolished yet.

The former owner of Myron & Phil's, Mark Freedman—whose late father and late uncle founded the restaurant—said he has purchased new property on Caldwell and Touhy avenues with plans to open a new restaurant next month called Wildwood Tavern.

Shariff and other Islamic leaders representing Sacred Learning explained their plans for the property to trustees during the May 19 Village Board meeting.

Although plans for the facility include a mosque, Shariff explained to village officials that the building would primarily be used as site for Islamic education that would offer classes on evenings and weekends.

According to the site plans submitted to the village, the Islamic center would host five daily prayer sessions per day beginning at dawn and ending 90 minutes after sunset. The building would have a worship space with room for 113 prayer mats that would double as a classroom, and would also include office space and a lecture area.

Classes are planned for weekday evenings between 7 and 9 p.m. and on weekends, according to information from the village.

Husain Sattar, president of Sacred Learning, said he designed the organization's academic programs and classes would focus on spiritual development.

"We focus on the basic pillars of our faith, as well as the legal and spiritual aspects of our faith," Sattar said.

The property is already properly zoned for religious uses, but officials had questions about a traffic-impact study that examined the effect increased traffic could potentially have on the area when the mosque opens.

A traffic safety report conducted by an engineer firm, Gewalt Hamilton Associates, Inc., hired by Sacred Learning showed no major concerns regarding the increased traffic the mosque would bring to the area.

Sacred Learning currently houses its operations in a building on the north side of Chicago on the 5900 block of North Lincoln Avenue.

No one from the public opposed the opening of the mosque at any of the village's public meetings.

POLICE REPORT

The following incidents were listed in the official bulletin of the Niles Police Department. Readers are reminded that an arrest does not constitute a finding of guilt. Only a court of law can make that determination.

PROPERTY DAMAGE

■ Dariusz Smyk, 45, of the 7800 block of Nordica Avenue, Niles, was charged with criminal damage to property on June 14 after he allegedly broke a window on a neighbor's town house in the 7700 block of Nordica at 2:40 a.m. He was located nearby and taken into custody, police said. He has a July 7 court date.

RETAIL THEFT

■ Lisa Galasinski, 30, of the first block of Dartmouth Court, Lincolnshire, was charged with retail theft on June 16 after she allegedly stole $125 worth of merchandise from a store in the 8500 block of Golf Road. She has a July 2 court date.

■ Joseph Ruzicka, 23, of the 5400 block of North Wellington, Chicago, was charged with retail theft June 16 after he allegedly stole nine items of clothing, valued at $54.62, from a store in the 5600 block of Touhy Avenue. Police said Ruzicka was accompanied by another individual, who also allegedly stole merchandise, but fled on foot from the store. Ruzicka has a July 2 court date.

■ Ankhjargal Janchivdorj, 34, of the 4800 block of North Rutherford, Harwood Heights, was charged with felony driving under the influence, driving on a suspended license and having no insurance after two motorists reported a vehicle was driving recklessly on Milwaukee Avenue around 5:25 p.m. Police located the vehicle in the 9000 block of Milwaukee and conducted a traffic stop. Janchivdorj was taken to Advocate Lutheran General Hospital for medical treatment after he reportedly needed help standing up. It was also learned his license had been suspended for a previous DUI, police said. He had a June 18 court date.

■ Fidel Quiroz, 40, of the 400 block of Bridle Trail, Wheeling, was charged with driving under the influence on the morning of June 13 after he reportedly struck a raised center median with his car, leaving pieces of the front wheel scattered along the 9600 block of Milwaukee Avenue, police said. He has a July 7 court date.

■ Lauren Talaber, 35, of the 6200 block of Kirschhoff Road, Rosemont, was charged with driving under the influence on June 16 after she was allegedly involved in two motor vehicle accidents. Police said Talaber's vehicle struck a car in a parking lot in the 7900 block of Milwaukee Avenue and later rear-ended another car on eastbound Touhy Avenue, just west of Lehigh Avenue. According to police, she was unaware of the Milwaukee Avenue collision. She has a July 24 court date.

THEFT

■ Three bottles of an undisclosed "controlled substance" were reported missing from a pharmacy in the 9000 block of Greenwood Avenue on June 9.

■ A wallet was stolen from a purse June 13 after it was left unattended in a shopping cart inside a store in the 5600 block of Greenwood Avenue.

Niles police: Man steals steak, loses shirt, backpack

BY JENNIFER JOHNSON

Pioneer Press

Niles police say a man attempted to steal a steak from a local grocery store and ended up losing his shirt.

According to police, the man entered the store on the 8900 block of Greenwood Avenue June 16, selected a skirt steak from an aisle, and then placed it in a backpack he was carrying before exiting the building.

When the store's manager confronted the man outside, police said he recovered the steak from the suspect's backpack. As the suspect attempted to run away, the manager grabbed his shirt and ripped it off his body, police said.

The suspect, who left the remains of his shirt and his backpack behind, was last seen running west on Ballard Road, dressed only in gray pants, according to police.

A police investigation was pending.

A MESSAGE FROM THE TASTE OF PARK RIDGE

Tastee Tidbits Food Focus

As we know, there cannot be a Taste of Park Ridge without food vendors, and the July 9-11, 2015 line-up is incredibly well balanced, just like a healthy meal. During its previous incarnations, many Taste attendees have gravitated to their favorites, many of which still grace us with their presence (as well as their presents-of incredible edibles).

Affresco, All on the Road Catering, Boston Fish Market, Crème of the Crepe, Hay Caramba, Himalayan Restaurant, J.D. Kadd's, Lisa's Italian Ice, Maki Sushi, Panino's, Park Ridge Dairy Queen, Rex Italian Foods,

Spuntino's, St. John Chrystastamos Monastery, Subway (of Uptown), Sunrise Grill, and Wine Styles have all served first rate food and drink during multiple Tastes. Each of them has established a loyal legion of dedicated followers year after year. The Taste Committee is excited to announce the latest additions to this gathering of gastronomic goliaths. They are B's Sweet Bites, Charcoal Delights, Dolcetti, Jason's Deli, The Sandlot, and Whole Foods. B's Sweet Bites is a paradise for the sweet-toothed among us. "Pie-Pops", which are handmade pies on a stick, decadent fudge brownies, warm chocolate-chip cookies, individual key lime pies, and individual banana cream pies, highlight their delectable Taste menu. Charcoal Delights has long been acclaimed in the Chicago metro area for their flavorful interpretation of everybody's favorite-charcoal-grilled hot dogs and hamburgers. They will also serve mouth-watering brats, along with roasted corn on the cob. Dolcetti will provide a treasure trove of treats for dessert devotees, with cakes to go, strawberry shortcake, tiramisu, and several uniquely delicious cookie flavors, including lemon ricotta, and oatmeal walnut.

Jason's Deli, which serves a great variety of dishes in their restaurants, will represent many of them at the Taste, including their legendary half Rueben sandwich, half turkey wrap, "nutty salad" (no chicken), along with chicken and hot dog "nuggetz." The Sandlot has a simple, but effective philosophy-keep the menu focused on what you do best. Since hot dogs and hamburgers are what they do best, that's exactly what you will discover at their Taste booth-what area customers are calling "amazing burgers and dogs." Whole Foods will feature a variety of healthy foods, including Mediterranean veggie wraps, fresh fruit skewers with yogurt dip, cinnamon donut holes with apple dip, and handmade tortilla chips.

If this talk of food teases your taste buds, just wait until you experience the extraordinary variety of comestibles at this year's Taste of Park Ridge. You will not leave hungry. Visit the Taste website at www.tasteofparkridge.com to get the full story- entertainment schedules, food vendor information, sponsors, and more.

Niles North alum spends summer helping businesswomen in Central America

BY ALICIA RAMIREZ
Pioneer Press

With just six months until the end of her undergrad, Rebecca Gilbert is making the most of her summer term.

Gilbert, 22, of Morton Grove, is a Niles North alum and a senior studying international business and marketing with a certification in Spanish at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

"I really enjoy learning about other cultures, and in today's growing global economy, it's important to know how to conduct business in other countries," she said in an email.

With help from her university, Gilbert will be working with women in Ecuador on a project called Wisconsin Without Borders (WWB) Marketplace.

"WWB Marketplace is a student organization that collaborates with artisans in Ecuador, Mexico, and Kenya to share their stories, sell their products and reinvest profits in their communities," Gilbert said.

The program is funded by the Baldwin Grant which funds projects that support "the development of new and innovative projects," according to the University of Wisconsin-Madison's website. For this particular project, the students work with the artisans, purchase their wares and sell them back in the states.

As a marketing student, Gilbert has a two-part internship. For the end of May and beginning of June, she is working in the village of Camarones with a group of women who make soap. She will help the women develop a business strategy and help them streamline the soap-making process.

"The process to make the soap is very elaborate and they do everything manually, which includes peeling seeds and grinding them with a hand crank in order to extract the oil," she said. "They are in need of an oil press to combine and expedite the process of peeling and grinding the seeds."

In order to help fund this, she said she is setting up an Indiegogo campaign in hopes of crowdfunding the money for their oil press.

After her time in Camarones ends, she will be sent to the village of La Calera to help women in their jewelry making enterprise create a business plan, ensure financial stability and put in place quality control measures.

"So far, my favorite part about living in Ecuador has just been adapting to a new culture and way of life," she said. "I am living in a hut, I don't have Internet access unless I take a bus into town [an hour away], I use dry composting toilets and I am slowly but surely getting over my fear of bugs, which I often find in the food, shower, bathroom, and even under the mosquito nets in my bedroom."

To help offset the cost of the internship, Gilbert was awarded multiple scholarships from the university, including one from the International Internship Program.

"We help find opportunities for students to engage in internships, they can either be a corporate, business type internship, or it can be in the nonprofit volunteering world, but it's a way for students to get practical, hands on, real world experience overseas," Maj Fischer, director of the program, said. "Our goal is to help create or develop a work force that has a global mindset and the skills to work in our increasingly interconnected world."

And while there are definitely cultural barriers for Gilbert working in Ecuador, she says her passion for using business for social good has guided her.

"Whatever you're passionate about, find an organization that's values and mission align with your own," she said. "As a business student taking a non-traditional path, I can testify that is has been challenging to go against the grain, but with the time, effort and dedication to your goal, I can promise that you'll make an impact."

Park Ridge-Niles District 64 student artwork on display

BY BOB CHIARITO
Pioneer Press

The artwork of 46 students from Park Ridge-Niles District 64 is currently on public display at Le Peep restaurant in Park Ridge.

Each year for the last seven years, a few pieces of art done by students in District 64 schools are selected by teachers to be put on display, according to Sonja Dziejdzic, curriculum specialist in the art department at Emerson School.

The program began eight years ago when Dziejdzic applied and received grants from an Elementary Learning Foundation and the Park Ridge Cultural Art Council which allowed the district to purchase 42 frames to showcase student artwork.

"It's a beautiful example of the community supporting the visual art of students," Dziejdzic said.

According to Dziejdzic, every student in the district takes art, meaning there are a lot of entries for staff to go through.

"The teachers really exemplary work," Dziejdzic said.

Among the 46 chosen this year are works in a variety of mediums and themes, from drawings and photography to watercolors and collage.

One student, 11-year-old Mia Lee, a fifth-grader at Carpenter School, said she found out her oil pastel entitled "Cake" was chosen when she noticed it missing from the hallway of her school.

She said of her teacher "Mrs. Bianchi teaches us a lot of cool techniques that we do in class and that I also work on at home."

Recently, Lee said she went to

Le Peep at 100 Euclid Ave. in Park Ridge, to eat with her father and sister and got a thrill at seeing her art displayed in public.

"It was really cool to see," Lee said.

The art will be exhibited at Le Peep through October. After that, it will be displayed until April at the Brickton Art Center, 306 Busse Highway in Park Ridge, according to District 64 spokeswoman Bernadette Tramm.

Niles West student takes third in engineering contest

BY NATALIE HAYES
Pioneer Press

A Morton Grove teenager who said he invented a contraption to make his dad's job easier has won a $1,000 prize after coming in third place in the 2015 Illinois Engineering Design Competition.

Hubert Gawin, 17, said he designed and created what he calls a "locking extension cord" in his engineering design and development course at Niles West High School during the past school year.

Gawin's invention is simple, but the device solves a common problem for carpenters or anyone doing housework that requires an extension cord.

The locking extension cord does exactly what it claims to do—it holds two extension cords together with a locking mechanism that stops the plug side of one cord from slipping out of the outlet of the other cord.

"The device is like the two sides of the plugs you'd see on normal extension cords, except that they're round," Gawin said. "The plug side with the pins in it has a sliding collar with two grooves in it, and it locks into place if it's plugged in."

As part of Gawin's engineering class, his instructor, Ken Albert, asked his students to come up with an invention that could solve an everyday problem.

Gawin's dad works as an electrician and told his son about a frustrating situation that arises when extension cords disconnect while he's working.

"His dad works outside...and the cords are always coming apart," Albert said. "If you try to tie them together they get worn out."

Gawin said he spent almost the entire school year figuring out how to turn the idea for the locking extension cord into a functional object that could actually be useful.

"After the school day was over, I would sometimes spend hours trying to make it a workable prototype," he said.

Gawin, who said he plans to study nursing in college, pitted his locking extension cord against other inventions created by high school students across Illinois during the statewide engineering competition at the Illinois Institute of Technology (ITT) on May 27.

The competition was set-up like the TV show "Shark Tank" where entrepreneurs have just a few minutes to convince a panel of investors to fund their idea, Albert said.

Gawin was one of four Niles West students who entered the competition, along with seniors Matt Alasu, Skyler Chatman, and Chris Troiani.

Although he said he doesn't plan to pursue a future for his locking extension cord, Gawin said the experience was a lot of fun.

"Generally speaking, I like to create things, so this was a hobby for me," Gawin said. "I might print some more of them on a 3-D printer, but I don't plan on selling them unless people decide they like it that much."

The Illinois Engineering Design Competition was created to recognize the importance of engineering design and problem solving in STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math) education, according to information from School District 219.

Students who enter have the chance to win up to $2,500 and a product development assessment by the Wisconsin Innovation Service Center.

Annual farm day covers all things dairy

BY GINA GRILLO
Pioneer Press

Days begin early on the farm, and June 20 at Wagner Farm was no exception, when Glenview Park District and Heritage Center staff, along with some very hospitable farm animals, hosted the 13th annual Dairy Breakfast and Farm Day.

This local celebration of National Dairy Month kicked off at 8 a.m. for a fun-filled morning of all things dairy, giving local families a firsthand opportunity to interact with friendly livestock, enjoy hay rides and dairy lawn games, and view the "Pic-cow-so" contest winners.

Many enjoyed a breakfast of pancakes, scrambled eggs and sausage, provided by Egg Harbor Cafe of Glenview.

Jim D'Altorio of Glenview said he and his family come to support the farm every year for this event, and his kids just love it.

Entertainment was provided by strolling musicians The Blue Water Ramblers, and educational activities included a cow-milking demonstration in the milk parlor, a visit to the 1920s farmhouse, lessons on how to make ice cream and Dairy Cow 101.

Friends of Wagner Farm board member Peter Brown said events like these reflect the farm's purpose, allowing people from Cook County and surrounding counties to experience what farming was like during the 1920s through the 1950s.

"This annual breakfast is a great way to spend time with your family while learning about dairy farming and engaging in fun activities and events, while enjoying a great breakfast," said Sarah Schoeneberg, program manager at Wagner Farm.

All proceeds from this community recreation and entertainment event support general farm operations, officials said.

The Morton Grove Park District Tunes on Tuesday annual concert series opened under blue skies and cooler temperatures June 16 at the Harrer Park Pavilion.

The Dairy Queen of Niles was the featured restaurant June 16 and will continue to provide desserts for each concert date. Concerts begin at 7 p.m. and run Tuesdays (June 23, June 30, July 14 and July 28). One concert falls on a Thursday (June 23) to coincide with the annual car show.

"We're really excited to get it kicked off and we couldn't have asked for better weather," said Katie Halverson, Morton Grove Park District recreation supervisor, before the band The Student Body took the stage.

In case of rain, concerts are moved across the street to the Park View School gymnasium at 6200 Lake St.

New Park Ridge gym caters to the 'unlikely exerciser'

By JENNIFER JOHNSON
 Pioneer Press

Amid a growing number of fitness choices, a new Park Ridge training center is using technology and the promise of short workouts to draw members.

Glenview native Michael Kupperman recently opened The Exercise Coach at 946 N. Northwest Highway.

Previously located in Niles, the center is part of a franchise that specializes in customized, high intensity workouts — largely strength training — that last just 20 minutes, twice a week.

“Clients, regardless of age and experience, can come in and be taught to work effectively, efficiently and safely, and achieve the results that everybody wants in a fraction of the time,” Kupperman said.

The Exercise Coach uses personal trainers and its own technology-based cardio system to set goals and limits for clients based on factors like age, health and fitness level. And only 20 minutes, two days per week, is recommended.

“Our technology suggests the intensities for each individual,” said Kupperman, who owns a franchise in Arlington Heights as well. “We’re not shooting in the dark with people, which is reminiscent of traditional training [where] you’re performing a random amount of reps and doing random amount of activities, searching for this goal. We have a way of measuring exactly what you should be doing.”

The Exercise Coach is also geared toward people who may have difficulty establishing a regular exercising routine, Kupperman indicated.

“The Exercise Coach program was really built around folks that aren’t really fitness fanatics,” he said. “We kind of term them the ‘unlikely exerciser’ because of the many obstacles they would face.”

Those “obstacles” include finding the time for a regular workout, unfamiliarity with the gym concept or fear that they may be injured if they embark on a workout alone.

“They really need the guidance, they really need the accountability,” Kupperman said of many of this clients. “Since they are very novice, they don’t want to be put on display in a big box gym.”

The Exercise Coach has carved out a niche clientele of people largely over 40, many of them from the baby boom generation and older. One client arriving for her session on June 19 was getting ready to celebrate her 80th birthday.

“They want to be healthy and have quality of life as long as possible — they just didn’t have an avenue before,” Kupperman said.

Barbara Zeleny has been working out with The Exercise Coach for the last year-and-a-half and followed Kupperman and his staff to the new Park Ridge location. She says the workouts by appointment keep her motivated.

“I work better when I have things scheduled,” Zeleny, of Park Ridge, said.

She even got her sister Dorothy Silver, 72, of Park

Ridge, to join with her.

“Going to a gym was very intimidating for me,” Silver admitted, referring to larger facilities. “People expect you to know things you don’t know.”

Nancy Steinfink of Skokie has been seeing a trainer at The Exercise Coach since 2011. She says the exercises help her arthritis.

“I really do feel better when I come here,” she said.

There are about 18 machines available at The Exercise Coach, including stationary bikes. Workouts are one-on-one with a trainer, and memberships are required.

S.C. shootings increase focus on mission for Race Against Hate

BY KARIE ANGELL LUC
Pioneer Press

The Ricky Byrdsong Memorial Race Against Hate brought out 300 volunteers and more than 5,000 event participants on June 21, near Northwestern University's Floyd Long Field in Evanston.

The annual Race Against Hate remembers Ricky Byrdsong, a Northwestern University basketball coach and Skokie resident who was shot and killed in 1999 in his neighborhood while jogging his children.

While racial equality has been a primary focus during the race's 16-year history, this year's event took on added significance in light of the nine victims who died in what appeared to be a racially driven shooting at a church in Charleston, S.C., June 17.

"First, they took schools away from us with Columbine and Sandy Hook, and now they've taken away churches," said Bonnie Greene of Oak Park and the race's announcer.

"It's a shame that we still have people who just don't have that love for everyone and that we have such easy access to guns," said Ricky's widow Seralyn Byrdsong of Atlanta, whose husband was murdered by a man about the same age as the Charleston suspect, Dylann Roof.

"I am upset," said 18-year Evanston resident and YWCA of Evanston/North Shore CEO Karen Singer, who became emotional discussing the Charleston massacre on a Sunday holiday when Charleston congregants worked to heal. "But we have to do something with that, we have to channel that into constructive ways of bringing our community together to eliminate racism."

Before the first race of the day, Byrdsong reflected on her husband's legacy as a motivator for change.

"I think he would say, maybe it was worth it," Byrdsong said of what her husband might say about the loss of his life.

This year's race raised about $150,000 to benefit YWCA of Evanston/North Shore's racial justice and violence prevention work. People representing 22 states participated.

Longtime Evanston resident Will Van Dyke, also an Evanston Running Club member, visited the Unitarian Church of Evanston booth, where one could learn about the church's yearlong missive for racial justice.

"(We're) determined to end this hate," said Gail Smith of Chicago and a While runners celebrated and congratulated one another, the recent Charleston tragedy served as a powerful backdrop to the event.

Why pretending to be black is a problem

RANDY BLASER

The case of Rachel Dolezal, the white woman from Spokane, Wash., who has been posing as a black woman, is one of the more bizarre cases of identity politics to confront our sensibilities yet.

In an age when a man can become a woman, a la Bruce Jenner becoming Caitlyn Jenner, is trans-racialism also possible?

Of course it is possible, but is it right?

I have no problem with white people self-identifying with African-Americans in order to join in the fight for civil rights. Many in the past have done so. Weren't the white Freedom Riders in the early 1960s doing the same thing.

Dolezal claims that she "self-identifies" as black. That's the term she has used.

That would be OK, I think, if Dolezal would just admit to being white.

But she doesn't, and she hasn't.

Dolezal doesn't just "self-identify" as black, whatever that means. She also claims to be black. And that's the problem.

By claiming to be black, she has taken jobs and positions she might not otherwise have been offered.

I'm not talking about being head of the Spokane NAACP, a position from which she resigned. Many whites have served in positions with the NAACP, and the organization certainly has no policy banning whites.

But she's also on the local police board. Considering all the controversy this year about police practices in regards to race, would a white Dolezal be appointed to such a position? Maybe, but probably not.

And if not, that is a position that could go to a real black person.

Dolezal was a professor of African-American studies at the local collage. Certainly a white can fulfill that job as well as a person of any color. But is that another potential job that could go to a real black professor?

Some may ask, "What difference does it make?" As long as Dolezal is qualified and can represent the interests of the interest group she pretends to be a part, then so what?

Again, I would agree with such analysis except for one thing. The difference is Dolezal wasn't a white person being on the police board to ensure fair treatment for blacks, or teaching African-American studies.

She was a phony, pretending to be black. And people pretend to be something they are for one of two reasons.

The first reason is to gain something, a position or title or influence, they ordinarily might not be able to obtain.

The second reason? It's just not normal.

Either way, Dolezal is disqualified from the positions she gained, not because she "self-identified" as black but because she pretended to be black.

Lunch from the boss won't pay the bills

Here's a depressing new (to me) concept: Variable compensation.

Perhaps, like me, you don't know what variable compensation is. Well, variable compensation is something employers can give employees instead of salary increases.

Lunch with the boss. Gift cards. Permission to nap in the afternoon. Birthdays off. Gift items.

These are just a few of the ways employers are variably compensating employees for doing a good job.

Who in their right mind would want lunch with the boss instead of a good raise? The boss, of course.

Gifts, naps, lunch with the boss, even bonuses are temporary, ephemeral. They are easy to take away. But salaries are more permanent. It is way more difficult to cut someone's pay than to cancel a lunch. Also, raises are cumulative and build on each other.

The concept of short-term employee rewards is not new, but seems to have taken off when the Great Recession hit.

In 1988, short-term rewards were about 3.9 percent of U.S. corporations' payroll, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. In 2014, that amount jumped to 12.7 percent of payroll. And over the last 12 months, real hourly wages have increased only 2.2 percent.

A survey of more than 1,000 organizations by the global human resources firm of Aon Hewitt found that the share of payroll budgets allocated to straight salary increases sank to a low of 1.8 percent in the depths of the recession. It dropped to 4.3 percent in 2001 from a high of 10 percent in 1981. The percentage of payroll budgets allocated to salary increases in 2014 still was only 2.9 percent.

I'm not devaluing the value of bonuses. And gifts are nice, though I would limit my enthusiasm for lunch with the boss.

But when push comes to shove, salary is what is important to people who work for a living.

Not just today, but for the future.

Salary is what determines what workers receive in Social Security benefits, for instance. The lower the salary, the lower the Social Security benefits.

And I doubt that the boss will take you to lunch once you are retired. Or pay your mortgage, or electric bill ...

Time for farmers markets and Whole Foods?

Whoa! Did my eyes deceive me? Was it actually in black-and-white print that there may be a potential deal between Whole Foods and Vernon Hills? Well, that came out of left field, but was a most pleasant revelation.

For a time not long ago, there was an absence of grocery stores in the community. But things have improved lately, and this latest news flash would prove a welcome addition to the local food shopping options.

Let's face it, our grocery shopping patterns are not in the least like they used to be. Once a week, one-stop shopping has gone the way of the Atari, and now we have one store for staples, another for produce, a different spot for meats and protein, as well as the need-it-quick convenience options for last-minute items. Or, there's another way to get groceries without even leaving home, by having one of the delivery services simply drop everything off at your door. With so many choices, it's easy to see why the grocery store's new prototype is so much less defined than in previous eras. And also more confusing for the consumer. Do you run around to every store and shop their sales items, so as to capitalize on the best prices possible? Or do you logic that all the gas you use driving here and there will likely cost more than your savings, and therefore bite the bullet and simply shop at the one spot where you find yourself? It's a real dilemma.

In addition, eating healthy often means spending more money. Organics and top quality fresh produce, meats and fish just cost more, and many families are caught between wanting to eat well yet needing to watch expenses. That's why this time of year is the best for eating healthy on the cheap. Planting a vegetable garden is about as organic and inexpensive as it gets. However, if you're like me and just can't get into the backyard produce garden's demands, you make nice to your green thumb family/friends and hope their abundance of tomatoes overflows into your kitchen. Or, there's one other option: local farmers markets. Not only do they offer the best of regionally-grown produce, but every purchase is like a thank you to the dedicated farm families who do demanding work year-round to bring us the garden's best bounty.

No matter where you may find yourself during the summer months, you can be sure there's a market with farm-fresh foods nearby. Just think about how healthy you'll feel at the end of the summer, after eating all those fresh zucchini and cucumbers. And if you have extra tomatoes you need to get rid of, just email me and we'll work something out.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Randy Blaser wrong on Hastert charges

How does Randy Blaser get it so wrong?

His opinion piece ("Another Side To The Hastert Story," June 11) ends with his concern that "regular shmooes...have to wonder...what kind of a country are we living in?"

The only ones that have to worry are the drug dealers and money launderers that the law was written to try to weed out, and oh yes, the Denny Hasterts that may have lied to the FBI when questioned about the unusual cash withdrawals.

Blaser's silly examples about withdrawing $10,000 to buy a car, redo a kitchen or put in a home theater and you're reported makes no sense. How many of us take out $10,000 in cash to do these things? Some of us today have discovered checks to buy things with, or better yet, credit cards to get all those wonderful gift-getting points.

So transferring money to car dealers and TV stores does not get you reported — taking out $1.5 million in cash and then trying to cover it up by lying and then changing the amounts to try to get around the law, that seems to be what Hastert has been indicted for.

The fact that the money may have been cover-up money or even extortion for possible bad things done will not be the issue because the statute of limitations may have run out. But the law is a good one, even if it only catches one drug dealer or one dumb politician.

Protecting yourself from summer rays

SUSAN DUBIN

As I write this column, the sun has not come out in ages and it's been raining for days. However, since I like to think on the bright side, I thought I'd write about something obvious in times like this: sunscreen! So, I called up my friend, dermatologist Julie Goldberg, to give the readers of this column a refresher course in everything sunscreen.

Dr. Goldberg is founder and director of Dermedica Innovative Dermatology in Northbrook and had lots to say on the topic of sunscreen.

"Sunscreen application is one of my favorite skin related topics to talk about," says Dr. Goldberg. "There are many myths and misconceptions about sunscreen, so I enjoy educating my patients on what I know to be true about sunblock. Millions of people get skin cancer each year. By instructing people on sunscreen application and sun avoidance techniques, these skin cancers can be prevented."

First, I asked Dr. Goldberg what brand of sunscreen she liked best. Instead of one particular brand, Goldberg recommended certain things for consumers to look for and do.

"Liberally apply a broad-spectrum, water-resistant sunscreen with a Sun Protection Factor (SPF) of 30-50 plus to all skin not covered by clothing," says Dr. Goldberg. "Broad-spectrum provides protection from both ultraviolet A (UVA) and ultraviolet B (UVB) rays. How you apply the sunscreen can also affect how it protects you — a shot glass of sunscreen is needed to cover the surface area of an average adult. The preferred active ingredient that I recommend is Zinc Oxide (greater than 7 percent) because it is the best physical protection against the longer UVA rays. The fine particles of Zinc do not appear white on the skin as they used to when we were kids. Also, sunscreen should be applied 20 minutes before you leave the house, so it has time to be absorbed properly. And don't forget to block your ears and lips."

Next, I asked if it really makes a difference if one's sunscreen container gets too warm.

"Leaving a tube of sunscreen in a hot car could cause it to separate and become inactive," says Dr. Goldberg.

I also wanted to know if we need to wear sunscreen when the sun is not completely out and if we really need to reapply sunscreen.

"Yes, even on cloudy days we need sunscreen," says Dr. Goldberg. "Reapply approximately every two hours, and also after swimming or sweating. Sun protective clothing, like a long-sleeved shirt, pants, a wide-brimmed hat, and sunglasses should be worn during peak hours from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. And, seeking shade is a great alternative."

What about other tanning methods?

"Tanning beds should be avoided at all costs," says Dr. Goldberg. "The increased radiation exposure leads to an increased risk for skin cancer. The safest alternative to getting tan, are self-tanning creams or lotions, or spray tans. They don't provide added protection from the sun, but they may give you the 'healthy glow' that you are looking for."

And how am I supposed to get my Vitamin D with limited sun exposure?

"The American Academy of Dermatology does not recommend getting vitamin D from sun exposure or indoor tanning because the ultraviolet (UV) radiation from the sun and tanning beds can lead to the development of skin cancer," says Dr. Goldberg. "It is recommended that Vitamin D is obtained from a healthy diet, which includes naturally enriched vitamin D foods, fortified foods and beverages, and/or vitamin supplements. Good sources of Vitamin D include fortified milk, cheeses and yogurt, fortified cereal, and oily fish like salmon and tuna. Vitamin D cannot be used by the body until it is processed by the liver and the kidneys. The usable form of vitamin D created by our body is the same, regardless of how it enters the body."

Lastly, I was curious about spray-on sunscreens.

"The FDA is currently investigating the risks of accidental inhalation of spray sunscreens," says Dr. Goldberg. "I typically do not recommend using spray sunscreens for two reasons. First, it is difficult to know if you have used a thick enough amount of sunscreen to cover all sun-exposed areas of the body, so coverage may be inadequate and not meet the SPF as stated. Next, since most spray sunscreens are clear, they do not contain Zinc Oxide as their active ingredient."

Blackhawks are over; time to read

Once the Blackhawks secured the Stanley Cup again and no longer required my rapt attention, I felt like I could begin my summer reading.

Here are a few books from book clubs and other sources that look interesting. The nonfiction list seems especially provocative.

Most readers probably know that David McCullough has published a new book, "The Wright Brothers," and that Erik Larson has also come out with another acclaimed look back at history with "Dead Wake: the Last Crossing of the Lusitania."

For those who keep up with the New York crowd, "Primates of Park Avenue: a Memoir," is supposedly a sociological study of the life of privileged women living large on New York City's Park Avenue. You might find a side helping of envy in this book by Wednesday Martin, Ph.D. This book is the source, apparently, of the term "wife bonus."

In our household, "Do No Harm: Stories of Life, Death and Brain Surgery" by Henry Marsh, a neurosurgeon, has proven fascinating reading for everyone, and we are not a family of doctors or health care workers, though our daughter aspires to work in that field. "On The Move: A Life by Oliver Sacks," is on the to-be-read pile. Over the years, I have read many of Sacks' pieces — newspaper editorials, books and articles, and he is a remarkable man and neurology professor who reports on science in a clear and compelling way. He is battling terminal cancer.

I've already started another science, medicine and social studies book,

SARA CLARKSON
Dateline

"The Birth of the Pill: How Four Crusaders Reinvented Sex and Launched a Revolution" by Jonathon Eig. It is quite engaging as well as informative. With water shortages all over the planet and food safety issues, population control should get more attention than it does.

And, the last nonfiction book on the pile is "Nothing to Envy: Ordinary Lives in North Korea" by Barbara Demick. It was short-listed for both the National Book Award as well as the National Book Critics Circle and offers a glimpse life in North Korea through the stories of six "ordinary" North Korean citizens.

In terms of fiction, I hear everyone talking about "Girl on the Train" by Paula Hawkins as well as Judy Blume's latest novel "In The Unlikely Event." I thank Blume for making me become a reader, and now my tastes have matured.

Practically every book club in town has the Pulitzer Prize winning "All The Light We Cannot See" by Anthony Doerr on its list. The prose has been praised about this story of a 14-year-old blind French girl and a German orphan whose lives intersect during the Second World War, and which features the conflict between moral issues and survival.

"Everything I Never Told You" by Celeste Ng has a lot of people talking too. This is a literary thriller and Ng's first published novel. "Lydia is dead. But they don't know this yet" are the opening lines of the novel, which features a Chinese-American family dealing with the loss of a daughter, Lydia, and concerning issues of ethnicity and family.

And, on July 15, I plan to be among the first people to read "Go Set a Watchman" by Harper Lee, yes the Harper Lee of "To Kill A Mockingbird" fame. Even the most casual student of Harper Lee and "To Kill A Mockingbird" knows that Harper Lee never really wanted to publish anything after the astounding success of Mockingbird, feeling that how could she improve on anything. So it is surprising that "Go Set a Watchman" is coming out next month.

Watchman was written before Lee wrote Mockingbird but takes place 20 years after Mockingbird. I am going to do my best to be a non-judgmental reader of the new work.

"How to be Both: A Novel" by Ali Smith sounds challenging for book groups. The book is apparently printed in different ways — different stories will appear in different sections — so readers will have intentionally differing experiences of the novel, which has time settings of the Renaissance as well as the 1960s.

For those of you put off by the hard-cover heft of "The Goldfinch" by Donna Tartt, it is now out in paperback. Yes, it is more than 600 pages long, but it is a terrific literary novel, thick with enduring characters and challenging themes. I highly recommend it as a meaty and satisfying piece of literature.

Astellas commits to 10,000 volunteer hours in 2015

By Jackie Pilossoph
Pioneer Press

When describing the culture at Astellas, Moyra Knight refers to the pharmaceutical company's commitment to patients.

"That commitment is our North Star and the guiding philosophy every day for everyone who works here," said Knight, senior director of corporate and employee communications for the Tokyo-based company, whose U.S. headquarters can be seen from Willow Road just west of Interstate 294 in Northbrook. "It's what drives us and what brings a certain caliber of excellence here."

Knight joins 1,000 Northbrook-based employees in observing the company's 10th anniversary on the North Shore, a celebration that included an all-employee meeting and elaborate reception last month, as well as a commitment to 10,000 hours of employee volunteer services in the areas of patient health and community development.

"Giving back is such a big part of the Astellas culture, and this is our commitment to the community, which includes patient groups, advocacy groups, nonprofits, and industry organizations that support the pharmaceutical industry," said Jeff Winton, senior vice president of corporate affairs and chief communications officer.

The volunteer hours are part of Astellas' "Changing Tomorrow Day" initiative, which takes place annually on Sept. 11. Over the past decade, Astellas employees in North America and South America have volunteered 61,000 hours and donated $1 million to charitable organizations through the company's StarGIVING program.

"The impact we are making is hugely motivating and goes way beyond any monetary compensation we earn," said Winton, a Cornell University graduate who has spent 35 years working in the pharmaceutical and agriculture industries.

According to Winton, philanthropic work goes on all year long at the company, as every Astellas employee gets five paid work days per year to volunteer instead of coming to work. The company also closes at noon every Friday, a time when many employees spend time volunteering.

Astellas, which was formed in 2005 with the merger of the Japanese pharmaceutical companies Fujisawa and Yamanouchi, opened its first U.S. headquarters in Deerfield the same year. The company is traded on the Tokyo Stock Exchange and employs an estimated 18,000 people globally.

Astellas moved to its current Northbrook location in 2012: a spectacular two building campus that offers 160,000 square feet of space and includes a workout facility, cafeteria, coffee shop and dry cleaners.

"This is an entrepreneurial type company and no matter what level you come in at, you immediately start making contributions," Winton said. "Part of the reason for that is that we're only 10 years old. We started over in many ways and we said, 'We have the opportunity to create something from scratch.' Ten years into it, we're still doing that."

Astellas, which was recently voted by Forbes Magazine as one of the top 500 places to work in America, focuses on 12 pharmaceutical products marketed in the U.S. in the fields of oncology, cardiology, urology, transplantation, and infectious disease.

"We're truly impacting patient lives," said Knight.

"We come to work and we feel that at the end of the day we've made a difference," Winton said.

Tour de Cure's young fundraising champ

BY BRUCE INGRAM
Pioneer Press

Some people, faced with a serious problem, try to do something about it — like 10-year-old Joseph McDonagh of Niles.

The Field Elementary School student, known as Jojo to friends and family, was diagnosed with type 1 diabetes last year. So, this year, he and his family decided to participate in the local Tour de Cure cycling fundraiser, joining 65,000 cyclists and volunteers nationwide. Jojo and his team raised $11,161 (including $7,775 he raised personally from pledges), more than any other local child.

This year's Tour de Cure, held in Aurora on June 14, included over 1,400 riders and organizers estimate has raised $800,000.

"When I was first diagnosed I heard so many amazing stories about fundraising," said Jojo, who rode 10 miles for the first time in his life in the June 14 event. "And I thought if I tried I could have a story of my own."

And so he did. But Jojo had a larger goal in mind as well.

"It's important," he said. "Because mostly children have type 1 diabetes and children should be doing whatever they want instead of having to worry about stuff like checking their blood sugar."

"Everybody involved in this has raised a lot of money, so I really hope researchers can find a cure."

A lot of money, by the way, means $700,000 tallied so far by the national event, which continues to take donations through July 15.

Jojo's mother, Christine Quinn, who coordinated additional efforts to raise money for Team Jojo (including friends who organized donations at a pub quiz and secured restaurant gift-card raffle prizes), also believes Tour de Cure is important for another reason.

"We feel like diabetes doesn't get enough coverage," she said. "People aren't well-educated about it, so they tend to think type 1 is similar to type 2 and it's something that can be reversed. We're trying to call attention to the fact that it's much more serious — more serious than even we knew. We've all been overwhelmed the past year, getting up at 2 in the morning for fear that Jojo might not make it through the night. So we think it's important to get out there and let people know that this disease can hit you at any time and at any age and just how scary it is."

"The more people who know about it, the better chance there is that they'll get involved."

That's certainly been the case for friends of their family, Quinn noted.

"We've been blown away by the people who have come out of the woodwork to help," she said. "Friends I had gone to grade school with, people I haven't seen in 10 or 15 years, have been so supportive."

"And I hope this is the just the start. We're hoping to do even better next year."

The Event: Always working toward a brighter future for the visually impaired, the Chicago Lighthouse held its annual benefit at Chicago's Drake Hotel in Chicago May 14. The event's 340 attendees celebrated the ongoing, innovative work of this 109-year-old institution.

In addition to raising critical funds for Lighthouse programs, the celebration honored ABC7 Chicago and U. S. Rep. Danny K. Davis (IL-7) as champions of people with disabilities.

Cause Celebre: "It is an outstanding organization that helps folks who have an unemployment rate of 75 percent to actually become self-sufficient...feel good about themselves and become contributing members to America," said Richard R. Boykin of Oak Park, Cook County Commissioner.

"The Lighthouse is unique because it is one of the most comprehensive social service agencies in the country," explained Dominic Calabrese of Harwood Heights, vice president of public relations.

Included in Lighthouse's offerings are 28 programs ranging from a low-vision clinic and school for children with multi-disabilities, to one of the few clock manufacturing facilities left in the United States.

"It is truly a beacon of hope to all those who are in need of assistance," said Commissioner Boykin.

Bottom Line: The benefit raised nearly $300,000 for the Lighthouse to expand the scope of its programs. See chicagolighthouse.org.

The best ways to get help from Comcast

Dear Help Squad,

I have been having trouble with my Comcast service since March 2015. It began as a complete outage of all services. Telephone and Internet were restored after about a week. The TV service has never been resolved. It was determined that a new drop from the pole to the house was necessary, which was ordered by the technician on April 1, 2015. I have made several calls to Comcast since then with no resolution. At least 50 percent of the service is not working and many stations are pixilated. I have been told on many occasions that a supervisor will call me back, but have never received any calls. Today I was told that the order of April 1 was canceled with no explanation. I have tried to get the email addresses of the senior customer service VP to no avail. If you can help me I would really appreciate your assistance. I will provide further information if needed. All I want is the service that I'm paying for and am entitled to.

Thank You,
Ed, Deerfield

Help Squad started by reaching out to our Comcast contact Jack Segal, regional vice president of communications, to ask him to look into this issue on Ed's behalf. This he did and two days later let us know that, "Our team has been in contact with [Ed] and we're working to address his concerns. I understand we have restored service and are working toward completing the job."

When we called Ed to confirm this, he reported that a Comcast supervisor had been to his home to tell him that a hole had to be bored under the road to connect the cable to his house. "The supervisor said he'd get back to me in a couple days with a time frame for the work."

As for the canceled repair order, Ed did receive confirmation from a Comcast escalation supervisor that the appointment had been canceled, but there was no explanation as to why. After some investigating, Jack discovered that Ed's initial complaint — when all three of his services went down — resulted in a cable "drop bury" order. According to Jack, "It can take 45 days or more to gain approval for this kind of work due to village permits surrounding quality and safety that are required." So though Ed made another service call when his TV continued to have issues, this appointment was likely canceled by Comcast workforce operations because the "drop bury" had not yet occurred. Unfortunately Ed received no communication informing him of any of this.

A week after receiving Ed's request for assistance, Help Squad followed up with him to learn that, "Everything got done. I'm thrilled! The Comcast employees were very nice. It's amazing how quickly things get done when the right people are contacted. And it seems the pipe under the road was already there, so they didn't have to bore a hole after all." Ed added in an email, "It's just amazing that this and many other frustrating issues reported to Comcast are not resolved in a timely manner. Thank you again for your service in resolving this matter. Many kudos to you and your staff."

How to Contact Comcast for Best Results

Because Help Squad receives its fair share of Comcast complaints, we asked Segal for his suggestions on how customers can best go about getting their issues resolved in a timely manner — without writing in to Help Squad. He offered this via email:

"Customers with service issues can contact Comcast by phone, via online chat, by coming to a Comcast service center or retail store or on social media. In fact, we recently announced that we're tripling the number of Customer Care reps devoted to responding to service inquiries on Twitter (@ComcastCares) and Facebook (Xfinity - click Help and Support). Having multiple methods feeding into a single Customer Care system helps us more effectively route, manage, track and monitor inquiries. It also allows us to benchmark and measure how effective we are at managing and resolving customer issues and make adjustments if necessary." He continued, "We're adding 5,500 in-house customer service personnel in the next three years and already have begun to hire in call centers around the country."

The take-away from this might be: If at first you don't succeed, try, try again — this time on social media!

Love is unpredictable

JACKIE PILOSSOPH
Love Essentially

Jackie, I recently went from casually seeing someone to officially being her boyfriend. I'm wondering what's going to change and if I can handle it.

Love is a funny thing. If you're looking for it and you feel ready, chances are you won't find it. You'll be frustrated and sad and have a sense of loneliness or maybe hopelessness. Yet, almost always when you aren't looking for love or expecting it, it sneaks up on you. Why is that? The only possible explanation I can think of is, perhaps love's unpredictability is meant to help us feel even more gratitude for such a powerful gift.

Not everyone agrees with me, but I think that people go on dates because they are looking for love. You can fool others or fool yourself and say you are dating just for fun, or for sex, or just to meet interesting people, or to get over your ex, or many other reasons. Ultimately, even if we want those things, we want love, too, which is the real reason we put ourselves in the dating pool.

There are several outcomes of casually dating. Ever have a string of really bad dates that makes you say, "Enough. I need a break." That recently happened to one of my girlfriends, who declared she was taking a "mancation."

Then there's the dry spell, which I personally hate. I have gone through times in my life when I wanted to go on dates and felt like I couldn't get one to save my life. It's awful. The good thing about dry spells is, they always come to an end.

That leaves the last outcome of casually dating: you meet someone, you start developing strong feelings for the person, and then it hits you: you realize you're in love. It's both incredibly scary and the best feeling in the world. Maybe you wanted it, maybe you didn't. Either way, you've got it and you've got it bad.

To answer your question, "What's going to change?" Here are three things:

1. When you were casually dating, it was fun, it was harmless, and honestly, it was safe. Now your relationship is fun, minus harmless and safe. Now you feel like you have something to lose. You might get hurt. You might feel vulnerable, shaky and frantic. These emotions are frightening, but I think they are normal, wonderful feelings that should be embraced and celebrated—not feared or looked at in a negative way.

2. This is tricky. Unlike casual dating, relationships can be work, at times. Girlfriends can nag. Boyfriends can get complacent. It's not a bad thing, it's just reality. Ask yourself, "Am I up for this?" It's not always going to be rosy. Being in a relationship means being there for everything: not just romantic dinner dates and good sex. It means dealing with each other's families, her cat, her complaints. He might drive you crazy at times. Eye rolling, frustration, the need for patience and the true belief in someone else doesn't happen during casual dating.

3. Perhaps the biggest change going from casual dating to boyfriend/girlfriend status is the best one: You're going to experience indescribable happiness. In the right situation, there is nothing more fulfilling, joyous, breathtaking and meaningful than connecting with someone in every possible way. So, forget figuring out if you can "handle it." Instead, enjoy it! You're about to embrace the newness of giving yourself to this person and receiving her love in return. That to me means a heck of a lot more than polite dinner conversation, flirting, good night kisses at the door, and wondering if he or she will text you for a second date.

The key to going from casual dating to being in a relationship is realizing that love isn't always perfect, and with the bliss comes many imperfections that might seem overwhelming at times. But, I'll leave you with a quote that should answer your question, "Can I handle it?" It's from the classic film, "Casablanca."

"Kiss me as if it were the last time."

Words like these are reserved only for true love. They aren't what you hear on a casual date. Who wouldn't want to handle that?

Eating less meat? Pick substitutes with care

BY ELLIE KRIEGER

The Washington Post

If you are trying to eat less meat, you have plenty of company. Our cultural tide is flowing steadily in that direction. There are multiple best-selling books touting the benefits of plant-based eating; the Meatless Monday campaign has gone mainstream, with awareness and participation climbing rapidly over the past decade; and the word “flexitarian” is now in the Merriam-Webster dictionary (meaning “one whose normally meatless diet occasionally includes meat or fish”).

Americans still eat about triple the global average of meat, but consumption trends show we are starting to back off. And people no longer consider meals free of beef, pork or poultry to be a fringe idea: 47 percent of those polled by the Vegetarian Resource Group said they eat at least one vegetarian meal each week, and the group reports 1 in 4 people says he or she is a “meat reducer,” actively trying to eat less of it. It’s a trend supported by our country’s top nutrition advisory committee, which, in its recent report for the Dietary Guidelines update, recommended we cut back on meat for the sake of our health and the environment.

But simply eating less meat is not a solid plan in and of itself. What you decide to pile on your plate instead of that steak, chop or cutlet is equally, if not more, important. If less meat translates to more stuffed-crust pizza or boxed mac and cheese for dinner, you could be doing yourself more harm than good.

Even those committed to healthful vegetarian options often don’t strike the right balance. Many turn to dairy, particularly cheese, as their default protein, which can certainly make for nutrient-packed and delicious meals. But if you are eating meatlessly a lot, and dairy is your only go-to, you could be missing out on some important nutrients and getting more unhealthy fat than you realize.

Meat is more than just protein; it is incredibly rich in several essential minerals and vitamins, particularly B vitamins, zinc, iron and selenium. While dairy packs many B vitamins, selenium, and other nutrients in spades, it doesn’t have zinc, iron or much B6. And while options such as low-fat yogurt and milk are lean, a piece of cheddar cheese the size of your thumb has about double the saturated fat of 3 ounces of lean beef.

To eat healthfully with less meat, it’s important to include more plant protein: nuts, seeds, beans, lentils, peas and whole grains. While these are incomplete proteins, lacking the full spectrum of essential amino acids in sufficient amounts on their own, the amino acids in grains complement those in the nuts and legumes, so together they are complete.

You don’t have to eat them at the same time, as was once thought. Just getting a variety throughout the day will help cover you, not only for the protein you’d otherwise be getting from meat but for iron, zinc, and B6 as well. Plus, they contain healthful fats, fiber and a spectrum of pro-

Cutting back on meat could leave you short of some vitamins and nutrients. Fill that need with eggs, dairy, fish, beans and nuts, experts say.

Enjoying them is as easy as opening a can of chickpeas to sprinkle on your salad, tossing some frozen shelled edamame and/or almonds into a vegetable stir-fry to serve over brown rice, slapping together a peanut butter sandwich on whole-grain bread, making some lentil soup or buying a container of hummus. Thanks to the meatless trend’s popularity, there are more plant protein options than ever in restaurants and fast-casual spots, from bean burritos to salads with topping options like quinoa and sunflower seeds.

It would also be a step in the right direction if eating less meat got you hooked on more seafood. The average American gets less than half the recommended 8 ounces a week, an amount that studies show can reduce your risk of dying of a heart attack by about a third. That benefit is mostly due to protective omega-3 fats, but seafood is a total package, with high-quality protein, many of the minerals and vitamins that meat has and other nutrients. So toss some shrimp or a salmon fillet on the grill, flake some tuna on your salad or toss some chopped sardines into your pasta.

Eggs can also be a stellar way to get some of the protein and nutrients meat would provide. For just 140 calories, two large eggs give you 8 percent of the daily value for zinc, iron and B6, plus choline, vitamin D and many other nutrients. It is worth keeping in mind, though, that those two eggs have about the same amount of saturated fat as a 3-ounce serving of T-bone steak. Nonetheless, eggs are so easy and economical it’s not surprising they are the latest darling of the culinary world. Add an egg to just about anything, from a salad to a rice pilaf, and it becomes a main course. If you need inspiration, search #PutanEggonIt on Instagram and you will find 21,000 entries. Whatever protein you choose, the bottom line is don’t blindly take the meat off your plate: Think, instead, about the quality and variety of what to fill it with.

Latest HPV vaccine may increase cancer protection

BY LESLIE MANN
Tribune Newspapers

The latest generation of human papillomavirus vaccines, 9-valent, offers "potential" 11.1 percent greater protection against HPV-related cancers than does its predecessor, according to a study funded the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The projection is based on the prevalence of HPVs in 2,670 patients with cancer of the oropharynx (tonsils, tongue, throat), cervix, vulva, vagina, penis or anus. The study analyzed the DNA of the cancers to see if the new vaccine could provide greater protection.

The new vaccine is marketed by Merck & Co. as Gardasil 9. It replaces Gardasil.

What surprised the lead author of the study, Marc Goodman, were the higher-than-expected rates of oropharyngeal HPVs. Based on these, he suggested the vaccine be given to children before they have oral sex. Goodman is the director of cancer prevention and genetics at Cedars-Sinai Samuel Oschin Comprehensive Cancer Institute in Los Angeles.

According to the CDC,

81.7 percent of men and 80.4 percent of women ages 15 to 44 have had oral sex. The percentage of people who have had oral sex, though, declined from 2002 to 2010, the CDC reported. It has not tracked the percentage since then.

Critics of the vaccine say that it targets only some of the HPVs that could lead to cancer and that some of its manufacturers wrongly bill it as a "cancer vaccine."

Also, the vaccine's long-term efficacy is unknown. Both generations of the vaccine are FDA-approved, but the CDC said "post-licensure safety data" are not collected until after approval.

Some of the children who took the vaccines during clinical trials suffered serious side effects. Manufacturers say the incidents were not "causal." (They could have happened anyway.)

Critics also say compliance with the three-dose schedule is difficult for the age group the vaccine targets. The Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices, a committee of health care professionals selected by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, recommends children begin the vaccine at age 11 or 12.

Advocates and critics of the vaccine agree that percentages of oropharyngeal cancers are affected not only by HPVs introduced by oral sex but also by smoking and having multiple sexual partners.

"It's screening that reduces cervical cancer rates, not the vaccine," said Dr. Diane Harper, professor and chairwoman at the University of Louisville's School of Medicine, author of dozens of articles about HPV-caused diseases and the lead researcher for Phase II and Phase III trials for the Gardasil and Cervarix brands. "We need to make sure all women begin getting Pap smears at age 21. Ninety percent of the HPVs of the cervix just go away by themselves."

As for oropharyngeal cancers, Harper suggests a trip to the drugstore for products that prevent skin-to-mouth contact during oral sex. "Strawberry-flavored condoms, for example," she said. "There are plenty of choices."

The study was published in the May issue of the Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

Drop of blood may disclose person's whole viral history

BY AMY NORTON
HealthDay

A single drop of blood may reveal a range of viruses a person has contracted recently or possibly years ago, a new study suggests.

Writing in the journal Science, researchers describe a new technology that can test for more than 1,000 viral strains at the same time, using one drop of blood.

Experts said the achievement could represent an advance over existing tests, which look for just one virus at a time. But for now, they see the one-stop, $25 test as useful for research purposes rather than real-world diagnostics.

"It's hard to say how far off any clinical application could be," said Tomasz Kula, one of the researchers on the study and a graduate student at Harvard University in Boston.

More immediately, Kula said, the test, called VirScan, could aid research.

"One example would be studies that look for correlations between people's viral exposures and their risk of developing various diseases," Kula said.

The Epstein-Barr virus, one of the most common viruses in humans, has been linked to increased risks of certain cancers. But studying such virus-disease connections has been challenging, Kula said, partly because current tests look for one virus at a time.

With VirScan, he explained, it might be possible to test a large group of people with a given disease and another group without the condition. Researchers could then see whether certain viral exposures were more common in people with the disease.

The VirScan test works by detecting antibodies to viruses known to infect humans; antibodies are evidence of a past immune system response to a particular virus.

CHIP SOMODEVILLA/GETTY

VirScan tests for more than 1,000 viral strains.

To test the technology, Kula and his colleagues used blood samples from almost 600 people from the United States, Peru, South Africa and Thailand, all of whom were known to carry certain viruses, including HIV and hepatitis C.

Overall, the test accurately picked up more than 90 percent of those known infections, the researchers said. Plus, it rarely gave a positive result for someone who did not carry one of the viruses.

The test also detected antibodies against viruses that study participants were not known to harbor. On average, people had antibodies to 10 viruses, though a few had antibodies to at least 84.

Cold and flu viruses, along with various herpes viruses, including Epstein-Barr, were among the most common bugs detected.

According to Kula, it's not clear how far back in time the test can dig. Over the years, antibodies to infection wane, he explained.

"This test gives a snapshot of the antibodies in your blood right now," Kula said.

Plus, the typical adult has been exposed to far more than 10 viruses, the average in this study group, said Dr. Aaron Glatt, an infectious disease specialist who was not involved in the research.

"This is an interesting technology," said Glatt, a spokesperson for the Infectious Diseases Society of America. "But I'm not sure how this would be used clinically."

For one thing, Glatt explained, it takes time for the immune system to form antibodies to a particular virus. "It's not clear how evidence of a past exposure would say anything about the acute symptoms a patient is having now," he said.

"If you think a patient has HIV," Glatt added, "you order an HIV test."

He agreed, though, that the test might prove useful in the research setting.

The research team did come across one unexpected finding, Kula said. Overall, study participants had very similar immune responses to specific viruses: That is, each person's antibodies were directed against the same amino acids within a given virus.

"That was surprising because the immune response is thought to be very personal," Kula said.

Going forward, he added, that finding could have implications for understanding the immune response to infection.

PEOPLE'S PHARMACY PRESCRIPTIONS AND HOME REMEDIES

There are alternatives to antihistamines for allergies

BY JOE GRAEDON AND TERESA GRAEDON
King Features Syndicate

Q: My allergies cause me to sneeze excessively when I get up in the morning. Eventually the sneezes calm a bit, but I snuffle throughout the day, which drives my wife crazy.

I am concerned about the long-term effects of antihistamines and nasal sprays. Is there an alternative to these medications?

A: There are actually a surprising number of options, ranging from stinging nettle (Urtica dioica) supplements and vitamin C to butterbur (Petasites hybridus) and NasalCrom nasal spray (cromolyn, originally derived from bishop's weed or Ammi visnaga).

You can find out much more about these options in our book "Best Choices From the People's Pharmacy" (online at www.peoplespharmacy.com). You also will learn about HEPA (high-efficiency particulate air) filters for the home.

Q: Whenever the weather gets warm, I know athlete's foot is sure to follow. Yesterday my feet began to itch, and when I looked, I had signs of fungus between several toes.

Do you know of a home remedy for this condition? I have been plagued with athlete's foot for decades, and have used drugstore products without much success. They hold the fungus at bay for a while, but then it always comes back.

A: There are numerous home remedies for athlete's foot. We can't promise that any one of them will work better than drugstore creams, but they might help.

MICHAEL ROSENFELD/GETTY

Some people find that soaking feet in a solution of half vinegar and half water several times a week is a cheap-and-easy way to overcome the fungus that causes athlete's foot.

One very old-fashioned, if slightly unappealing, option is to soak the affected feet in urine. One reader wrote: "My ex-wife was a nurse, and she convinced me to try it. It worked like a charm for my athlete's foot. I had tried many different creams through the years, and it always kept coming back. I have now had 15 years with no athlete's foot. Try it; the only thing you have to lose is your fungus."

One ingredient in urine is urea. This natural nitrogen-containing compound made by the body can fight foot fungus in concentrations of 20 to 40 percent (Cutis, May 2004).

Q: Two years ago, my doctor said my good cholesterol was too low and asked if I was using artificial sweeteners in sodas. I wasn't drinking any sodas, but the next two checkups showed the same cholesterol counts.

She insisted I must be using artificial sweeteners and urged me to check everything I put in my body. I found artificial sweetener in a medicine the dentist had prescribed for me to treat a common dental condition. I swished and brushed with this blue liquid every morning and night.

I told my dentist, and she recommended using tea tree oil toothpaste instead. After six months, my good cholesterol count is going up, and my dentist can't believe that the tea tree oil has done more for my mouth than the original medicine.

A: We weren't familiar with the association your doctor uncovered between low HDL (good) cholesterol and artificial sweeteners. When we looked for research, however, we found a study showing that artificial sweeteners can disrupt the beneficial function of HDL cholesterol (Molecules and Cells, May 2011).

Tea tree oil comes from the Australian tree Melaleuca alternifolia. It has antimicrobial effects that can be helpful in the mouth (American Journal of Orthodontic and Dentofacial Orthopedics, February 2014).

Fecal matter can spread to toothbrush in bathrooms

HealthDay

People using communal bathrooms with many others, beware: There could be traces of fecal matter on your toothbrush.

So finds a study by researchers at Quinnipiac University in Hamden, Conn.

The researchers analyzed toothbrushes from Quinnipiac students who used communal bathrooms with an average of more than nine users per bathroom.

Regardless of the students' toothbrush storage methods, at least 60 percent of the toothbrushes were contaminated with fecal matter, the investigators found.

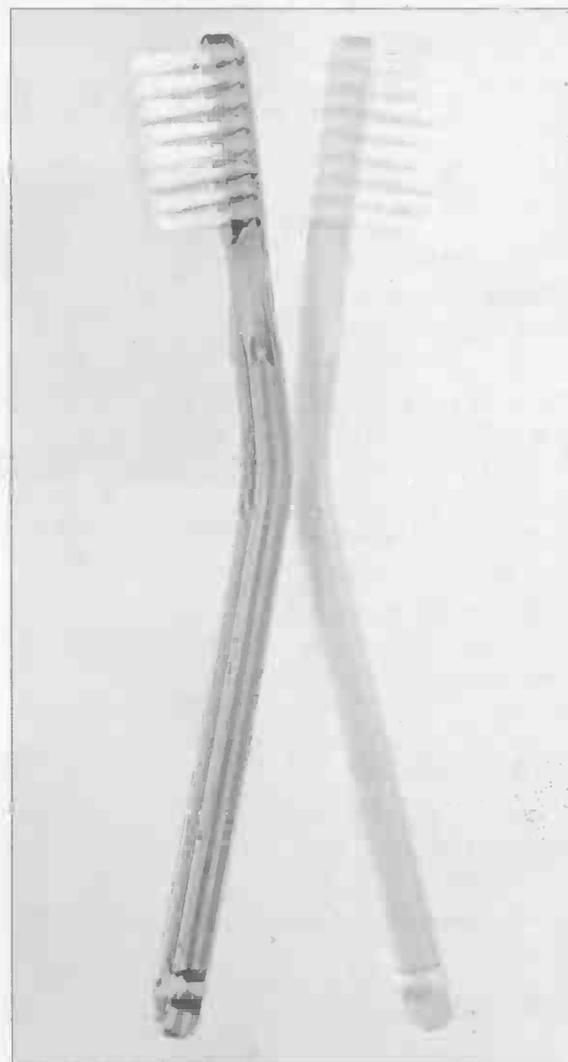

There was also an 80 percent chance that fecal matter on the toothbrushes came from another person using the bathroom, when flushing would spread matter through the air.

The findings were presented recently at the annual meeting of the American Society for Microbiology in New Orleans. The data and conclusions should be viewed as preliminary until published in a peer-reviewed journal.

"The main concern is not with the presence of your own fecal matter on your toothbrush but rather when a toothbrush is contaminated with fecal matter from someone else, which contains bacteria, viruses or parasites that are not part of your normal flora (microbes)," said study author Lauren Aber of Quinnipiac University.

Her team found no difference in the effectiveness of methods used to clean toothbrushes, such as rinsing with mouthwash or cold or hot water.

In addition, "using a toothbrush cover doesn't protect a toothbrush from bacterial growth but actu-

A mark of egg-cellence

Have no fear: You can make a fabulous frittata in just 5 steps

BY JAMES P. DEWAN
Tribune Newspapers

Given our American infatuation with eggs, it's peculiar that you don't hear more about the frittata, an Italian concoction that's like a cross between an omelet and a crustless quiche.

I think people are afraid that it's too easy to end up with a great, big, eggy mess. Well, grab your whisk and ignore your fears. It's frittata time.

Why learn this

Come on. You know you want to. All the cool kids are doing it. Don't you want to be cool? Yeah, I thought so. Now, let's go make that frittata.

The steps to take

If you've made omelets, you know what goes into a frittata. First, eggs. Most omelets are made with two or three eggs and intended to be one serving. Frittatas, on the other hand, are usually designed to be cut into slices like a pie or a traditional pizza (someday I'll address this whole "pizza cut into squares" abomination — but, another time). For a nice, thick frittata, use eight eggs in a 10-inch nonstick skillet.

Next, you need some quality fillings. Here's the thing: Like an omelet, the frittata has only a handful of ingredients. Thus, each one takes on a higher importance. Meats from a reputable butcher and fresh herbs and vegetables from a farmers market are Pour the beaten eggs and any ingredients you are adding into a hot skillet into which you've added butter or oil.

Use a spatula to stir gently, moving the coagulated egg off the surface, allowing more liquid egg to hit the hot pan until the egg mixture is mostly solid with just a bit of liquid on top.

Move the nearly set frittata into a hot oven or under a broiler to finish cooking, just long enough to set, about two minutes. It should emerge lightly browned on top.

E. JASON WAMBSGANS/TRIBUNE NEWSPAPERS PHOTOS

Although some people avoid making frittatas, which are usually designed to be cut into slices like a pie or pizza, the egg dish is actually easy to whip up.

perfect.

Also, the temperature and cooking time of the frittata aren't enough to cook most raw ingredients, so make sure everything is perfectly cooked before you begin. For a shortcut, you can always use leftover vegetables, meat and starches like pasta, potatoes and rice.

The method is simple:

1. Beat the eggs and whisk in the other ingredients, including salt to taste.
2. Place a nonstick pan over medium heat, and add enough oil or butter to coat the bottom.

3. Pour the egg mixture into the pan. Use a spatula to stir the mixture gently, moving the coagulated egg off the surface, allowing more liquid egg to hit the hot pan (as you would an omelet). Do this until the egg mixture is mostly solid with just a bit of liquid still on top.

4. Move the pan into a hot oven or under a broiler to finish cooking. Leave it just long enough to set, about two minutes. Easy, right?

Now, the challenge is getting the frittata out of the pan. Truthfully, it's not really that tough with a nonstick pan. If you don't have one, stick to scrambled eggs. Few things in life are more disappointing than a perfect frittata destroyed in its unmolding by a sticky, uncooperative pan.

OK, many, many things are more disappointing. The yearly collapse of the Chicago Cubs, for example. The inevitable dishonesty of even our most trusted politicians. A broken frittata's not even close.

5. Easy-peasy: Use that spatula to loosen the frittata from the pan, then slide it out whole. Or, go for the hold-your-breath option: After loosening the frittata with your spatula, lay a plate upside down over the pan. Hold the panhandle with your dominant hand while your other hand holds the plate securely against the pan. Rapidly flip pan and plate, allowing the frittata to fall gently from the former onto the latter.

Frittatas can be served hot, room temperature or cold. Hot, they belong on a plate. At room temp or colder, small slices can be passed as finger food for parties.

Here are some great flavor combinations to get you started. Un-helpfully, I'm not giving you amounts. But for eight eggs in a 10-inch skillet, a total of 1 1/2 to 2 cups of filling should be enough. Remember, there are a billion different right ways to do this. It's only wrong if you don't like the final outcome.

Or if it somehow comes to life and eats your cat. But that almost never happens.

■ Grill, broil or simmer asparagus spears. Cut into bite-size pieces, and combine with diced ham and shredded Gouda.

■ Wilt spinach in simmering water or a buttered saute pan, then combine with grated Gruyere or Swiss and crumbled, crispy bacon.

■ Dice or shred leftover cooked chicken, and combine with quartered canned artichoke hearts and grated Parmesan or Romano cheese.

■ Saute julienned bell peppers and onions, and combine with cooked, crumbled chorizo and shredded cheddar. You could also whisk a few tablespoons of your favorite salsa into the eggs before you pour them into the pan.

■ Whisk a few ounces of dashi into your eggs with a splash of soy sauce and another splash of sesame oil. Make this frittata with cooked shrimp or chicken along with sliced, raw green onions.

*No Interest If Paid in Full within 12 Months On purchases with your Ashley Advantage™ credit card made 6/23/2015 to 7/6/2015. Interest will be charged to your account from the purchase date if the promotional purchase is not paid in full within 12 Months. Minimum Monthly Payments required. Ashley Furniture does not require a down payment, however, sales tax and delivery charges are due at time of purchase.

Offer applies only to single-receipt qualifying purchases. Ashley Furniture HomeStores require Sales Tax and Delivery charges to be paid at the time of purchase for finance terms of 12 months or more, on purchases made with your Ashley Advantage™ credit card. No interest will be charged on the promo purchase if you pay the promo purchase amount in full within 12 Months. If you do not, interest will be charged on the promo purchase from the purchase date. Depending on purchase amount, promotion length and payment allocation, the required minimum monthly payments may or may not pay off purchase by end of promotional period. Regular account terms apply to non-promotional purchases and, after promotion ends, to promotional balance. For new accounts: Purchase APR is 29.99%; Minimum Interest Charge is $2. Existing cardholders should see their credit card agreement for their applicable terms. Promotional purchases of merchandise will be charged to account when merchandise is delivered. Subject to credit approval.

§No Interest for 72 Months On purchases of $1999 or more on Tempur-Pedic® and Stearns & Foster® mattresses with your Ashley Advantage™ credit card from 6/23/2015 to 7/6/2015. Equal monthly payments required for 72 months. Monthly payments shown in this advertisement are required for 72 months with special financing on your Ashley Advantage™ credit card. Ashley Furniture does not require a down payment, however, sales tax and delivery charges are due at time of purchase.

††No Interest for 54 Months On purchases of $1499 or more with your Ashley Advantage™ credit card from 6/23/2015 to 7/6/2015. Equal monthly payments required for 54 months. Monthly payments shown in this advertisement are required for 54 months with special financing on your Ashley Advantage™ credit card. Ashley Furniture does not require a down payment, however, sales tax and delivery charges are due at time of purchase.

††, § Offer applies only to single-receipt qualifying purchases. No interest will be charged on promo purchase and equal monthly payments are required equal to initial promo purchase amount divided equally by the number of months in promo period until promo is paid in full. The equal monthly payment will be rounded to the next highest whole dollar and may be higher than the minimum payment that would be required if the purchase was a non-promotional purchase. Regular account terms apply to non-promotional purchases. For new accounts: Purchase APR is 29.99%; Minimum Interest Charge is $2. Existing cardholders should see their credit card agreement for their applicable terms. Promotional purchases of merchandise will be charged to account when merchandise is delivered. ASIAN BBQ

DELICIOUSLY DIFFERENT

This summer take your BBQ to the next level with Lee Kum Kee products.

SRIRACHA MAYO

Kick up your summer grilling with the fiery taste of Sriracha Mayo.

HOISIN SAUCE

Add an Asian twist to your summer BBQ with our sweet and tangy Hoisin sauce.

BRAISED HOISIN RIBS WITH BEER

- 3 lbs beef ribs (or short ribs)
- 12 oz good ale
- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- 4 tbsp rice vinegar
- 3 tbsp vegetable oil
- 2 cups Lee Kum Kee® Hoisin Sauce
- 12 garlic cloves smashed
- 3/4 cup water
- 1 inch piece ginger, peeled & sliced into 1/4-inch slices

SEASON the ribs with salt and pepper. Heat the vegetable oil in a pot with a lid over high heat. Brown the ribs on all sides. Remove the ribs from the pot. RETURN the pot to the stove, and sauté the garlic and ginger on medium heat for about 3 minutes. Add the ribs, beer, vinegar and water to the pot. Stir and then cover and simmer for 2 hours.

PREHEAT the oven to 350 degrees F.

POUR the Hoisin Sauce over the ribs, move the pot to the oven, and cook, uncovered, for 30 minutes.

REMOVE ribs and ginger from sauce and pour remaining sauce over the ribs for extra flavor.

Quote-Acrostic

- Define clues, writing in Words column over numbered dashes.
- Transfer letters to numbered squares in diagram.
- When pattern is completed, quotation can be read left to right. The first letters of the filled-in words reading down form an acrostic yielding the speaker's name and the topic of the quotation.

The real estate is improved with a residence. Sale terms: 25% down of the highest bid by certified funds at the close of the sale payable to The Judicial Sales Corporation. No third party checks will be accepted. The balance, including the Judicial sale fee for Abandoned Residential Property Municipality Relief Fund, which is calculated on residential real estate at the rate of $1 for each $1,000 or fraction thereof of the amount paid by the purchaser not to exceed $300, in certified funds or wire transfer, is due within twenty-four (24) hours. No fee shall be paid by the mortgagee acquiring the residential real estate pursuant to its credit bid at the sale or by any mortgagee, judgment creditor, or other lienor acquiring the residential real estate whose rights in and to the residential real estate arose prior to the sale. The subject property is subject to general real estate taxes, special assessments, or special taxes levied against said real estate and is offered for sale without any representation as to quality or quantity of title and without recourse to Plaintiff and in "AS IS" condition. The sale is further subject to confirmation by the court. Upon payment in full of the amount bid, the purchaser will receive a Certificate of Sale that will entitle the purchaser to a deed to the real estate after confirmation of the sale. The property will NOT be open for inspection and plaintiff makes no representation as to the condition of the property. Prospective bidders are admonished to check the court file to verify all information. If this property is a condominium unit, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale, other than a mortgagee, shall pay the assessments and the legal fees required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/9(g)(1) and (g)(4). If this property is a condominium unit which is part of a common interest community, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale other than a mortgagee shall pay the assessments required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/9(g)(1) and (g)(4). If this property is a condominium unit which is part of a common interest community, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale other than a mortgagee shall pay the assessments required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/18.5(g-1). IF YOU ARE THE MORTGAGOR (HOMEOWNER), YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO REMAIN IN POSSESSION FOR 30 DAYS AFTER ENTRY OF AN ORDER OF POSSESSION, IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 15-1701(C) OF THE ILLINOIS MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE LAW. You will need a photo identification issued by a government agency (driver's license, passport, etc.) in order to gain entry into our building and the foreclosure sale room in Cook County and the same identification for sales held at other county venues where The Judicial Sales Corporation conducts foreclosure sales. NILES TOWNSHIP HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT 219 PREVAILING WAGE ACT RESOLUTION (2015)

WHEREAS, the State of Illinois has enacted the Prevailing Wage Act ("Act") 820 ILCS 130/0.01 et seq. and WHEREAS, the Board of Education of Niles Township High School District 219 investigate and ascertain the prevailing rate of wages as defined in the Act for laborers, mechanics and other workers in the locality of the District employed in performing construction of public works, for the District.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY the Board of Education of Niles Township High School District 219, Cook County, Illinois, Section 1: To the extent and as required by the Prevailing Wage Act, the general prevailing rate of wages in this locality for laborers, mechanics and other workers employed in construction of public works coming under the jurisdiction of the District is hereby ascertained to be the same as the prevailing rate of wages for construction work in the Cook County area as determined by the Department of Labor of the State of Illinois as of May, 2015 a copy of that determination being attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference. As required by the Act, any and all revisions of the prevailing rate of wages by the Department of Labor of the State of Illinois shall supersede the Department's May determination and apply to any and all public works construction undertaken by the District. The definition of any terms appearing in this Resolution which are also used in aforesaid Act shall be the same as in said Act.

Section 2: Nothing herein contained shall be construed to apply said Act, any and all revisions of the prevailing rate of wages or employment except public works construction of the District to the extent required by the Act.

Section 3: The Superintendent shall publicly post or keep available for inspection by any interested party in the main office of the District this determination or any revisions of such prevailing rate of wage. A copy of this determination or of the current revised determination of prevailing rate of wages then in effect shall be attached to all contract specifications.

Section 4: The Superintendent shall mail a copy of this determination to any employer and to any association of employers and to any person or association of employees who have filed their names and addresses, requesting copies of any determination stating the particular rates and the particular class of workers whose wages will be affected by such rates.

Section 5: The Superintendent shall promptly file a certified copy of this Ordinance with both the Secretary of State Index Division and the Department of Labor of the State of Illinois.

Section 6: The Superintendent shall cause to be published in a newspaper of general circulation within the area a copy of this Ordinance, and such publication shall constitute notice that the determination is effective and that this is the determination of this public body.

RESOLUTION AUTHORIZING ADOPTION OF PREVAILING WAGES

WHEREAS, the State of Illinois has enacted the Prevailing Wage Act ("Act") 820 ILCS 130/0.01 et seq.; and

WHEREAS, the aforesaid Act requires that the Board of Education of Morton Grove School District No. 70 investigate and ascertain the prevailing rate of wages as defines in said Act for laborers, mechanics and other workers in the locality of said School District employed in performing construction of public works for Morton Grove School District No. 70.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED BY THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF MORTON GROVE SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 70 as follows:

Section 1: To the extent and as required by the Prevailing Wage Act, the general prevailing rate of wages in this locality for laborers, mechanics and other workers engaged in construction of public works coming under the jurisdiction of Morton Grove School District No. 70 is hereby ascertained to be the same as the prevailing rate of wages for construction work in the Cook County area as determined by the Department of Labor of the State of Illinois each year. As required by said Act, any and all revisions of the prevailing rate of wages by the Department of Labor of the State of Illinois shall supersede the Department's determination and apply to any and all public works construction undertaken by the public body. The definition of any terms appearing in the Resolution which are also used in aforesaid Act shall be the same as in said Act.

Section 2: Nothing herein contained shall be construed to apply said general prevailing rate of wages as herein ascertained to any work or employment except public works construction of Morton Grove School District No. 70 to the extent required by the aforesaid Act.

Section 3: The Secretary of the Board of Education shall publicly post or keep available for inspection by any interested party in the main office of Morton Grove School District No. 70 this determination of such prevailing rate of wage or any revisions of such prevailing rate of wage. A copy of this determination or of the current revised determination of prevailing rate of wages then in effect shall be attached to all contract specifications.

Section 4: The Secretary of the Board of Education shall mail a copy of this determination to any employer, and to any association of employers and to any person or association of employees who have filed their names and addresses, requesting copies of any determination stating the particular rates and the particular class of workers who wages will be affected by such rates.

Section 5: The Secretary of the Board of Education shall promptly file a certified copy of this Resolution with both the Secretary of State and the Department of Labor of the State of Illinois.

Section 6: The Secretary of the Board of Education shall, within 30 days after filing of the Resolution with the Secretary of State, cause to be published in a newspaper of general circulation within the area a copy of this Resolution, and such publication shall constitute notice that the determination is effective and that this is the determination of this public body.

PASSED THIS 15th day of June 2015.

French bookstore seduces chefs, readers

BY MARGARET SHERIDAN

Tribune Newspapers

PARIS — In trying to find Librairie Gourmande in the Montmartre neighborhood of Paris, heed the address: my destination, rue Montmartre, was blocks away from boulevard Montmartre. After several wrong turns and misfires with Metro stops, I found it. When I opened the door, my navigation frustration dissipated.

This gem of a shop with its 30,000-book inventory on all things gastronomic is worth the search. Shoe-horned among cafes, clothing stores and dry cleaners on a bustling street, the shop announces itself, modestly: via a creme-colored, name-embossed awning, dropped from the second floor, and French terms such as gastronomie, oenologie, livres anciens et modernes stenciled across the display windows and front door.

Crammed and cozy, this shop, owned by Deborah Dupont and her mother/business partner, Sophie Daguet, is open six days a week. During several visits, the steady stream of customers talked in hushed voices in several languages. Employees, one on each floor, multitasked as greeters, research librarians, cooking muses and sales associates. International clients and locals also come for the monthly newsletter, author book signings and informal discussions.

What the shop lacks in square footage, it makes up for in content. But be patient. Narrow aisles meander around tables stacked with books, and columns of shipping cartons, awaiting pickup. Visitors with overloaded backpacks or wayward elbows are advised to pivot slowly: those spinning metal racks of recipes, postcards and stationery can snag a sweater.

Customers, courteously, vie for standing room to thumb pages from the stack of discounted books or get a closer view of details from a wine map of Provence. A spiral staircase in the rear of the shop brings you to an atticlike emporium, upholstered in shelves and bookstands. A pillow-strewn sofa provides respite for page-turners.

Names of customers (including rich and famous chefs) are confidential. "We ship all over the world," Daguet explains. "Every day." Our interview, squeezed into a busy afternoon on the second floor, has Daguet leaning over a desk computer to answer customers' questions, answering the telephone and apologizing for her "poor" English, which wasn't.

The store, once located in the 5th arrondissement and founded in 1985 by a bookstall vendor who focused on gastronomy, was purchased by Dupont in 2007. It was moved, inventory and all, to its present location. Dupont, a former university professor of European law, redesigned the logo and convinced her mother, a computer analyst in film industry marketing, to leave her 32-year career. No regrets, Daguet assures.

Imagine a topic: Regional cuisine of Madagascar. Knives. Kitchen design. Histories of restaurant menus. Genoise. Sausage. Seaweed. Tapas. Regional wines of Spain. Street foods of Vietnam. Gelato. Chef biographies. Vegetable carving. Terrines. Fondant. Molecular gastronomy. Vegan. Gluten-free diets. And a book is found. Eighty percent of the books are in French; the rest in English, Japanese and Spanish.

There's an entire wall dedicated to children's cookbooks, including learn-to-cook sets for aspiring chefs ages 7 to 12. There are aprons and dish towels, utensils, food-related artwork, prints of fruits and vegetables in watercolors.

What's the criteria for buying books? "We know what the customers want," says Daguet. "Every year, 2,000 books related to food and wine are introduced in France. We buy only a few, then listen to our customers." On current trends, she says that French people are cooking more at home in the evenings. Her daughter, for example, the mother of two, manages the evening meal. Trends among home cooks include adding more fruits and vegetables to their diet.

But technology with its online cookbooks, Internet, food blogs and Amazon deals raises a question about the future of books. "Books are a passion, for many. It's about the feel and smell of paper. The color. The sheen of a page. The heft." To demonstrate, Daguet reaches for a copy of "Quay," a tome of photos and recipes from Peter Gilmore, an award-winning chef of Quay Restaurant in Sydney, Australia. She hands it to me.

Then she picks up a coffee table-sized tome, "Bleston Court Yukawatan" by Japanese chef Noriyuki Hamada. Her hand glides across a page. Her red fingernail points to a photo of a minuscule green garnish atop a fish entree. She looks at the page, then me, disbelieving and mystified by such a question.

"Touching a book, holding it, turning its pages. It's different than reading a screen," she adds. "Cooking is sensual. So are books."

Chicago author Colleen Taylor Sen has written several books on Indian food, including "Curry: A Global History," "Food Culture in India" and "Pakorras, Paneer, Pappadums: A Guide to Indian Restaurant Menus."

Yet when she decided to tackle India's culinary history, she found few books on the subject. So she scoured libraries and online booksellers, here and in India, for sources, accumulating more than 100 books now stacked on 30 shelves in her office.

"I always wanted to write this because I've been collecting material for 30 years," she told us. Thanks to an insistent publisher in London, Taylor Sen finally did.

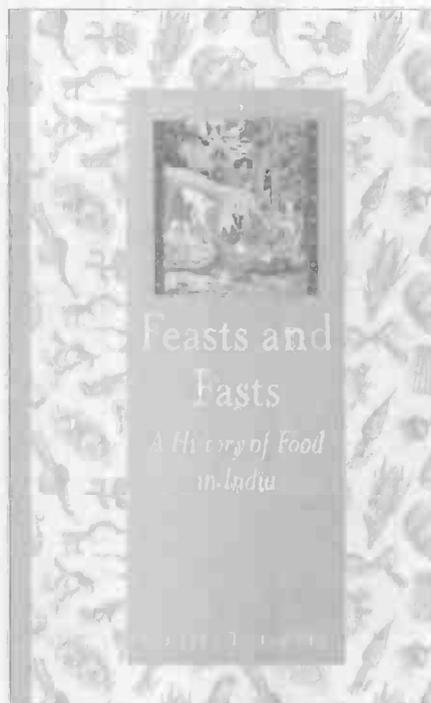

"Feasts and Fasts: A History of Food in India" (Reaktion Books, $39) which is being distributed in North America by the University of Chicago Press, is a richly detailed volume, with colorful historic images, some poetry ("Ode to Ghee") and a few ancient recipes. It begins with the prehistoric era and moves on to religious influences, the arrival of Marco Polo in 1292, the development of regional variations, the Partition of India in 1947 and the creation of tandoori chicken, a relative newcomer to the Indian table.

What sets "Feasts and Fasts" apart from her previous volumes, she says, is that "this book is actually a history of Indian food."

Other than two volumes by author K.T. Achaya (a history and dictionary), there is little history-focused literature on this ancient cuisine, she said. "It is so shocking when you think about how many histories there have been of every other cuisine."

Perhaps other food historians found the challenges too great. India's eight regions are spread over a vast area, which has created wide regional differences, with much determined by geography as well as food habits, she explained. "Having said all that, what is it that all these things have in common? I think the most common is the use of spices and why people use spices," whether for their health benefits or to season foods.

Another challenge? Dealing with translations from Sanskrit, the ancient language of India, and recipes dating to the 14th century. "I can kind of pick out letters (in Sanskrit), which is useful because some of the people who did the translations didn't know how to cook," she said; that helped her decipher some ingredients — as did a Sanskrit professor.

Those 14th-century recipes in the book have not been tested. "They're just historical recipes for illustration," she said. "I tried to make a couple of them. They used a lot of unusual spices. ... (And) some of the recipes people still eat today. One of them is sattu. It's just basically ground (chickpea) flour with a little onion and chili pepper on the side. It's very simple."

It took Taylor Sen three years to write "Feasts and Fasts," but she has been feeding her appetite for India's culinary history much longer than that. She first traveled to India in 1972 and added another dozen plus trips since then — always writing articles for newspapers and magazines in addition to her books.

The bitters truth

BY LAURA LEVY SHATKIN
Tribune Newspapers

House-made bitters — the liquid in the tiny droppers you spot lined up at any good cocktail bar — do much more than make the guy or gal mixing your drink look like an awesome mad scientist. These tinctures, brews of roots and barks combined with pungent spices like cinnamon, clove or sarsaparilla, then steeped in the sort of stiff grain alcohol you probably haven't had since college, are the finishing agents of a balanced cocktail. A scant few drops draw out the other flavors in your drink, transforming it from good to great.

The final and most important ingredient in homemade bitters? Time. Devote a little to this recipe, and wow your friends at your next cocktail party.

Orange spice bitters

Prep: 25 minutes Rest: 2 weeks Makes: 1 1/3 cups

To find burdock root, visit an Asian grocery store. Variation: To make cherry bitters, omit allspice and cloves and add 1/4 cup dried cherries

- 1 cup Everclear
- 1 medium orange
- 4 tablespoons peeled and chopped burdock root
- 1 teaspoon black peppercorns
- 1 tablespoon cardamom seeds
- 1 cinnamon stick
- 1 piece fresh ginger, cut in half (approximately 1 1/2 inches)
- 4 allspice berries
- 4 whole cloves
- 1 tablespoon honey dissolved in 2 teaspoons of hot water

- 1 Using a vegetable peeler, remove the zest of the orange, leaving pith behind.
- 2 Combine the zest with the aromatics and herbs in a wide-mouth canning jar. Pour in Everclear, add honey and 1/3 cup of juice from the orange. Cover with a tight-fitting lid, and store at room temperature for at least two weeks, giving the jar a good shake every other day.
- 3 After the steeping process is finished, strain into a clean jar using a coffee filter. Store in an airtight container in a cool, dark place. Use sparingly to add intense flavor to your favorite cocktail.

CULINARY GIANTS G. FRANCO AND MARGARET ROMAGNOLI

'70s TV series shined light on real Italian food

BY BILL DALEY
Tribune Newspapers

G. Franco and Margaret Romagnoli brought real Italian cooking to a national audience in the mid-1970s with their public television series "The Romagnolis' Table." The show sparked a number of cookbooks and three restaurants.

"They presented to the American public for the first time what was authentically served at the table by the multitudes," Marco Romagnoli, of Corinth, Vt., said of his parents. "It was very simple stuff."

Simple, maybe. But at a time when most Americans equated Italian food with spaghetti and meatballs, what the Romagnolis were cooking on television was a revelation. Lidia Bastianich, the celebrity chef, restaurateur, cookbook author and television cooking star, said the Romagnolis were among the first to present a "real traditional kind of Italian food."

On television, the Romagnolis were "simpatico," Bastianich recalled.

"I don't think people before then had a sense of what food in Italy was like," said Gwen Romagnoli, a lawyer and writer who became Franco's second wife in 1998. "They showed that on the program."

Franco Romagnoli was a photographer and filmmaker working in his native Rome when he met Margaret O'Neill, an American born in Madison, Wis. They fell in love, married and moved to the United States.

According to Franco Romagnoli's biography, he went to work setting up the film section for WGBH, Boston's public television station. He became a freelance producer-director-cinematographer, creating documentaries, films and commercials. Margaret Romagnoli, as her son recalled, stayed home and raised four children. They lived in Watertown, Mass.

Michael Ambrosino, who was WGBH's associate director of programming in the mid-to-late 1960s, said Romagnoli was a "superb cameraman" but that moving back and forth between the United States and Italy "didn't advance his career. When Franco came back, we had a new cameraman."

The question of what to do next is how the Romagnolis got on television, their son said. WGBH enjoyed enormous success with Julia Child and her series, "The French Chef." Marco remembered his mother asking, "Why not a show about Italian cooking?"

Why not, indeed. "The Romagnolis' Table" aired locally in Boston beginning in 1973, according to The New York Times' obituary of Franco Romagnoli, and it went national in 1975. Marco Romagnoli said his parents loved doing the series.

"They needed the income," he said. "The film industry was evolving quickly. They said, 'We've got to work; let's do something.' And it flew."

The couple's first cookbook, also titled "The Romagnolis' Table," was published in 1975. Other cookbooks followed. Their last, "Zuppa! A Tour of the Many Regions of Italy and Their Soups," was published in 1996. Margaret Romagnoli had died the year before. Franco Romagnoli would continue to write books, including a 2008 collaboration with his second wife titled "Italy, the Romagnoli Way: A Culinary Journey."

The television show also led to a restaurant, Romagnolis' Table. It opened in 1979 at Faneuil Hall Marketplace, a historic area of Boston. While the Boston restaurant remained open until 1989, Marco Romagnoli said two suburban offshoots opened and closed quickly.

"My father was never a restaurateur per se," the son said. "He enjoyed the role, but that was a lot of work. He was a freelance filmmaker all of his life."

Nor did he consider himself a chef. Gwen Romagnoli said he would correct people, saying, "I'm not a chef. I'm a cook."

"Franco was a big purist," she added. "He needed to make the dish the way it was made in Italy. You didn't add a lot of stuff to it, because that takes away from the purity of the original dish."

Spaghetti with lemon sauce

Prep: 10 minutes Cook: 13 minutes Makes: 4 to 6 servings

This recipe from G. Franco and Margaret Romagnoli was included in a Nov. 13, 1980, story in the Chicago Tribune about their cookbook "The New Italian Cooking." In testing the recipe, we found that the half-and-half can curdle. Using heavy cream solved the problem.

- | | | | |
|---|----------------------|-----|--------------------------------|
| 1 | pound spaghetti | 1/4 | cup vodka or grappa |
| | Grated zest of lemon | | Juice of 1/2 lemon |
| 1 | cup half-and-half | 1/8 | teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg |

Cook pasta in 4 quarts boiling salted water. Grate the zest of lemon, but be careful not to grate any of the white part of the rind. In a large skillet over very low heat, put half-and-half and zest and let steep 5 minutes. Add vodka and stir in lemon juice and nutmeg. Drain pasta when it is barely al dente (tender yet firm); add to sauce in skillet. Raise heat to medium, and stir and toss spaghetti until pasta has absorbed most of the liquid, and the sauce is thick and creamy. Serve hot.

Tony Bennett, Lady Gaga to swing 'Cheek to Cheek' at Ravinia

BY HOWARD REICH
Chicago Tribune

At first glance, the idea might seem preposterous: an 88-year-old jazz crooner partnering with a 28-year-old pop star in the recording studio and on tour.

But as soon as Tony Bennett and Lady Gaga released their duets album "Cheek to Cheek" last September, it was clear that this was no mere marketing gimmick.

To the contrary, Bennett's worldly wise interpretations and Gaga's inarguable luxuriance of voice in the standard jazz repertoire — Bennett's songbook, really — represented a serious, often high-flying, sometimes hard-swinging, approach to what Bennett lovingly calls "the silver lining songs." Tunes of an earlier day by Duke Ellington and Billy Strayhorn, Cole Porter and Irving Berlin, Jerome Kern and Jimmy Van Heusen.

When tickets went on sale to Ravinia Festival donors for Bennett and Gaga's duo shows there June 26 and 27, the pavilion and lawn sold out faster than any event in the park's 111-year history, according to a Ravinia spokesman. "Cheek to Cheek" debuted at No. 1 on the Billboard 200 chart, selling 131,000 copies its first week and making Bennett the oldest artist to have released a No. 1 record, the album going gold (500,000 copies sold) by December.

Even if "Cheek to Cheek" never had cracked the charts, however, it would have represented a significant statement from both Bennett and Gaga about the value and durability of age-old jazz repertoire in a social media age.

"The way that we dispose of music all the time, and dispose of art and decades (past) all the time, as if they're dated, that being nostalgic is for geeks — it's painful," says Gaga, who turned 29 in March.

"So much of the music that has been introduced through the Great American Songbook, through Fred Astaire, is passed on through generations of men and women, and Tony is one of those men," adds Gaga.

For though musical tastes have changed radically and several times over since Bennett's first major record, "Boulevard of Broken Dreams" in 1950, he has clung to his artistic values. Like Frank Sinatra, the other great male vocal icon of this music, Bennett went years without a major-label recording contract during the heyday of rock. In Bennett's case, the hiatus lasted from the early 1970s until the mid-1980s.

But even as the record industry turned its Cheek to cheek: Lady Gaga and Tony Bennett.

ANDY KROPA/AP

back on Bennett and the inextinguishable traditions he represents, he never stopped touring with the music he believed in. Eventually, the pop-music world rediscovered him with his "MTV Unplugged" album of 1994, not his subtlest work, but winner of Grammy Awards for Album of the Year and Best Traditional Pop Vocal Performance.

In Gaga, Bennett found not just the rare pop star with the vocal prowess and musical curiosity to address his technically and artistically demanding repertoire, but also someone open to counsel from a seasoned veteran.

Gaga, says Bennett, "was around some people that were promoting her originally that just wanted her to do contemporary stuff for little teeny boppers. And she said (to Bennett): 'Every time I sing naturally (they say): 'Oh, that's old-fashioned, don't sing that way.'"

"And I said: 'Are they crazy? You sing beautiful.'"

That she does on "Cheek to Cheek," producing more sumptuous sound and more swing-era finesse than jazz listeners might have expected. When she and Bennett swing Porter's "Anything Goes" and Berlin's "Cheek to Cheek," which open the album, there's no mistaking the joyousness of Gaga's vocals or the unstoppable rhythmic undertow of Bennett's.

Jazz "is the first music I fell in love with — then in love with rock and roll, and then I started to sing pop music," says Gaga, who was born Stefani Joanne Angelina Germanotta and grew up on the Upper West Side of Manhattan.

Immersed in vocal and piano lessons, she began singing jazz at around age 13, encouraged by a teacher at a boys school down the street from where she lived to take on "Lush Life" at 14. The jazz greats, Billie Holiday and Ella Fitzgerald whose work she studied.

As Gaga grew up, she also devoured her father's classic rock albums, eventually renaming herself after Queen's "Radio Ga Ga." But even after she catapulted into pop-music consciousness with "The Fame" (2008) and via over-the-top costumery and stage shtick, her jazz roots remained, she says.

Bennett, of course, traces his artistic lineage much farther back, practically to the origins of American jazz and pop singing.

He considers himself an heir to "the tradition of Louis Armstrong, who taught us all how to have a good time and entertain the people," says Bennett. "He's been a big influence on my life, you know. And also Sinatra."

These two artistic lineages — Bennett's dating back to Armstrong and Gaga's inspired by Holiday and Fitzgerald — intertwined when Bennett and Gaga met up at a 2011 gala for the Robin Hood Foundation. They clicked, leading her to singing "The Lady Is a Tramp" with Bennett on his "Duets II" album of that year, and then, "Cheek to Cheek."

Each artist draws specific pleasures from performing with the other, they say.

"She's singing beautiful on the stage with me now — we just get along great, and the audience just adores the whole thing," says Bennett. "She's a great jazz singer. ... She really improvises. She plays beautiful jazz piano. She's had very good schooling. ... She reminds me of the way Doris Day could just pick up sheet music and memorize the lines."

To Gaga, singing with Bennett "is an extremely emotional experience, almost every night when I watch him perform. Because it feels almost impossible that someone at 88 could be so incredible and so on-the-money with the note and the intonation. ... When me and Tony are singing in unison, I swear I hear a third voice. I swear it's not either of us. It's a whole other different one."

The effect of these nights working with Bennett, Gaga says, have deepened her understanding not only of jazz but of the nature of the culture we live in.

"I've learned so many things from Tony," she explains. "One of my favorite things I've learned from him is you can live your entire life and be exactly the same way — you don't have to fear growing older. In my generation, this is like at the center of everything, especially in celebrity culture: It's all about staying young and staying perfect and staying youthful, and once you're 39 years old as a woman, you're a grandma in this industry."

"But Tony has remained the same."

Yes, but isn't Bennett — despite the grandeur of his singing and the scope of his artistic legacy — really the last of his era, the final survivor of an era that gave America and the world so much great music?

"Well, yeah," says Gaga. "But I think the true question is: Will we let him be the last? And why do we do that? Why do we let things die that we (value), things that we can take with us?"

Actress determined to get 'Bad Jews' role

New Trier grad to take the stage in Skokie

BY MYRNA PETLICKI
Pioneer Press

As soon as Laura Lapidus read the script of Joshua Harmon's "Bad Jews," she was determined to play the role of Daphna.

The Winnetka native and New Trier graduate jokingly insisted that her immediate reaction was, "If I don't get this part, I'm going to just be dead."

Fortunately, she is alive and kicking as the star of Theater Wit's critically acclaimed production which, following an extended run at the company's Chicago home, is moving to the North Shore Center for the Performing Arts in Skokie.

Lapidus reported that she was in a coffee shop when she first read "Bad Jews."

"I was laughing and laughing and laughing," she said. "But then, at the end, I had to lock myself in the bathroom because I was crying and crying and crying."

The play is set in the studio apartment of Daphna's cousin Jonah (Cory Kahane) immediately following the funeral of their beloved grandfather, a Holocaust survivor. Daphna is staying there for the shiva (mourning) period and, as it turns out, so is Jonah's brother Liam (Ian Paul Custer), who has a contentious relationship with Daphna, often over religion. Further stirring Daphna's agitation is the fact that Liam has brought along his shiksa girlfriend Melody (Erica Bittner).

bitter confrontation over the disposition of their grandfather's Chai necklace, which has significance for both of them. "She's 22 and when you're that age you're looking for a way to understand who you are, what you care about and what drives you," Lapidus explained. "Her connection to her grandfather was a big part of that because it was also her connection to her heritage and her religion and these traditions."

The war of words between Daphna and Liam manages to be both frighteningly intense and often simultaneously hilarious.

Lapidus spoke of the "duality" of the script, noting, "Even in the funniest moments, it's never just funny. There's always something rumbling underneath."

Daphna is responsible for a lot of that rumbling. "Nobody writes this kind of a character for a young woman," Lapidus said. "She's floundering in a lot of ways but she's strong and she's sure of what she thinks. And she's sure of what she wants until she gets it."

Lapidus, who was Bat Mitzvah-ed at Am Shalom in Glencoe, said, "It was a revelation to see something on the page that I recognized so much. There is a specific brand of young women Jews who, for whatever reason, have the courage to speak up that a lot of young women don't. It's kind of a learned behavior and Daphna gets that. It's really special to find a person like that in a play."

New Bushnell novel deals in identity, fake death

BY LILLI KUZMA
Pioneer Press

Since her success and fame as the author of Sex and the City (1996), which went on to become the hit HBO series (1998-2004), Candace Bushnell, 56, has continued a publishing streak with “Four Blondes,” “Lipstick Jungle,” “One Fifth Avenue,” “The Carrie Diaries” and “Summer and the City.”

Bushnell’s new novel is “Killing Monica” (Grand Central Publishing), a farcical romp centered on Pandy Wallis, a successful author who is trying to move on from the long-living character she created — the hugely popular Monica — and become a serious writer of historical fiction. The storyline takes on hyperbolic aspects that are both hilarious and which act as cutting social commentary.

We spoke with Bushnell about her book, which she will discuss June 26 at The Book Stall in Winnetka.

Q: What influenced the writing of “Killing Monica”?

A: I just wanted to write a book that was fun and entertaining, and that you have a laugh. It’s supposed to be a fun ride.

Q: It is a fun read, but also filled with underlying themes of love, friendship, success and failure, truth and identity, the last on several fronts. Tell us more about the genesis and planning of the novel.

A: The book I was writing was put in the drawer because it wasn’t gelling, so I put it aside. I picked up Philip Roth’s “Zuckerman Unbound,” and started reading it, and realized it was a classic device, and took the literary idea, and knew I wanted a character to fake her own death, which I knew was a really, really, interesting territory to go to. A friend of mine is a Shakespeare scholar and we’d talk about these classic devices, like farce and mistaken identity. When I was writing this book, I explored ideas, but at the same time I wanted to write a pop kind of novel, like novels in the ‘70s, like Vonnegut.

Q: You write dialogue amazingly well, a very natural flow, like glib conversation. What or who influenced this style for you?

A: Author Joan Didion. And “Something Happened” by Joseph Heller. For me, a dialogue is something I’ve always been interested in because I’m interested in what people say and how they talk and what the meanings are beneath it. So, I always say that dialogue is not something you’re recording, but actually has to be written.

Q: How has your writing evolved? Any desire to move on to another style like Pandy in “Killing Monica”?

A: There is a female point of view in all of my works, sort of a feminist thing. And that’s what they have in common. But there’s no reason why these characters live in opposition. In “Lipstick Jungle,” the characters were not in opposition to Carrie Bradshaw (from “Sex and the City”). But every time a new book comes out, there’s some question of “Sex and the City” and Carrie Bradshaw that will come up. It’s just part of the landscape. I’m super, super proud of everything I’ve done, and (this is) another piece of my work that I’m very proud of. I don’t need to let anything ‘go.’ I also don’t feel that my books following “Sex and the City” were “Sex and the City”-type books. To me “Sex and the City” to where I am now is an evolution of somebody who just keeps working and working and working and working, and who has been writing professionally since the age of 19.

Marionette acrobats will perform in Morton Grove

BY MYRNA PETLICKI
Pioneer Press

Your kids will marvel at the feats of daring accomplished by miniature performers when Marc Dunworth Puppets Presents: "Here Comes the Circus," 2 p.m. June 27, at Morton Grove Public Library, 6140 Lincoln Ave.

"'Here Comes the Circus' is a marionette variety show," Dunworth said. "It's a half-hour long program where every two-and-a-half to three minutes a different marionette act will come onstage and perform for the audience. They might be juggling, or walking a tightrope or even swinging from a trapeze. There's going to be a demonstration beforehand on different types of puppets and different types of puppetry."

Following the performance, Dunworth will answer questions from the audience and teach kids and parents a little more about puppetry.

Dunworth creates all the puppets himself. He noted that Alice the Gooney Bird is the most popular puppet with kids. "She does some dancing and flying around in the audience," the puppeteer said.

A recipe for a rainy day

We put a brand new deck on our house eight years ago with the intention of using it to host loads of festive summer parties. Our planked party space has seen many good times come and go over the years, but ever since building our outdoor living room, it rains every single time we host a party. Our unique ability to

has become a well-loved joke around our house.

My husband can cover the lawn furniture cushions in two seconds flat if a storm cloud dares peek over the horizon and our weather related misfortunes taught me how to dodge raindrops while saucing ribs on the grill. In desperate times we've even been known to enjoy an umbrella drink with an umbrella in hand!

Only under the direst of rainy conditions will we move a cook-out indoors, but I've spent enough summer holidays changing course and tossing a grill-bound chicken into the oven instead to know planning ahead for weather woes is essential to being a good summer party hostess.

After one of the rainiest Junes on record I am betting more than a few folks are tired of feeling the wrath of the summer party weather hex. Thankfully, if weather reports are looking a little sketchy for your next summer time soiree, you can bring the cooking inside without sacrificing bold BBQ flavor.

Sunny flavors abound in my slow-cooker pineapple-pulled pork. A slathering of rich bacon-studded BBQ sauce ensures these easy sandwiches are worthy of an outdoor get-together without worrying about raindrops.

Cheers to staying dry!

Pineapple Pork Shoulder Sliders with Bacon Barbecue Sauce and Pineapple-Red Pepper Salsa

Makes 24 sliders. Be sure to plan ahead when making this recipe. Prepping the roast and finishing the sauce should be done one day before you plan to serve these sliders.

FOR THE ROAST:

1-4 pound boneless pork shoulder roast
1/2 cup brown sugar
2 Tablespoons ground cumin
2 Tablespoons paprika
1 Tablespoon salt
2 teaspoons black pepper
1-3 inch piece of fresh ginger peeled and finely chopped
6 garlic cloves, sliced
1/2 cup pineapple juice

FOR THE BBQ SAUCE:

6 bacon slices, chopped
1 medium sweet onion, minced
5 garlic cloves chopped
1 12-ounce pilsener beer
2 1/2 cups ketchup
3/4 cup unsweetened applesauce
1/2 cup pure maple syrup
1/4 cup brown sugar
1 chipotle pepper minced plus 2 Tablespoons adobo sauce
1 Tablespoon spicy brown mustard
1 Tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

1 teaspoon ground cumin
Salt and pepper to taste

FOR THE SALSA:

2 cups chopped fresh pineapple
1 roasted red pepper
1/2 cup sliced scallions
1/4 cup minced red onion
2 Tablespoons chopped cilantro
1 teaspoon lime zest
Salt and chili powder to taste

TO SERVE:

Hawaiian rolls and small pretzel rolls
To prepare the roast combine the brown sugar, paprika, cumin, salt and pepper in a small bowl. Cut the roast into 4 equal pieces and rub the dry spices over the surface of the meat. Toss the seasoned meat with the garlic and ginger; transfer to a re-sealable storage bag and refrigerate overnight. When ready to cook, place the seasoned meat in a large slow cooker and pour in the pineapple juice. Cook on low for 10-12 hours or until the meat shreds easily with two forks. To prepare the sauce, sauté the bacon and onion in a medium pot over medium-high heat until bacon is crispy and onion is tender. Add the garlic and cook until fragrant (30 seconds). Add the remaining ingredients to the pot and season to taste with salt and pepper. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer, stirring occasionally, for one hour until sauce thickens and flavors balance. Cool and refrigerate until ready to serve. Rewarm sauce before assembling sandwiches.

Combine all the salsa ingredients in a small bowl and toss well to combine. Toss the hot shredded pork with bacon BBQ sauce to taste. Place the dressed meat on a slider roll, drizzle with additional sauce and top with the pineapple salsa before serving. Serve any leftover pork and pineapple salsa over brown rice with a side of steamed broccoli for a quick weeknight meal.

Now playing

"Insidious: Chapter 3" ★★★

PG-13, 1:37, horror. Audiences have become so desensitized to blood and guts that horror movies now have to be smarter. And that makes them better. The PG-13 film is the third in the series, but it goes back in time before the haunting of the Lambert family that made up the first two offerings and explains how psychic Elise Rainier (Lin Shaye) was able to face her own demons to be able to help others. A lesser film would have concentrated entirely on this battle between the living and dead. Writer Leigh Whannell balances the terror with complicated characters, and the movie is a fun and chilling creep show that is more concerned with scares than being gross. — Rick Bentley, The Fresno Bee

"Jurassic World" ★★½

PG-13, 2:10, action. Balled out by a few good jolts, "Jurassic World" gets by, barely, as a marauding-dinosaurs narrative designed for a more jaded audience than the one "Jurassic Park" conquered in 1993. Of course you know what you're getting in "Jurassic World." I wasn't expecting the world, but I wouldn't have minded sharper jokes and grander action scenes. — Michael Phillips

"Pitch Perfect 2" ★★

PG-13, 1:55, comedy. In the 2012 hit, which was equal parts PG-13 raunch and energetically paced underdog fantasy, screenwriter Kay Cannon (who wrote the sequel as well) let Anna Kendrick's wary, guarded Beca run the show and negotiate the narrative complications with a light, dry touch. This time, by design, Kendrick fades into the ensemble woodwork, and her character's main dilemma is how long she can keep her recording studio internship a secret from the all-female Barden Bellas a cappella group. It's a dumb conflict; delayed secrets tend not to work when stretched across half a movie or more, even if you have Keegan-Michael Key aboard to play the music producer who becomes Beca's mentor. — M.P.

"San Andreas" ★★½

PG-13, 1:47, action. The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars. The fault is the star of "San Andreas," a fairly entertaining weapon of mass destruction reminding us that life's blessings come to those who receive preferential billing. We may as well call it "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad Earthquake," though the tremors in "San Andreas" aren't so much mad as disappointed. So many Californians to wipe out in only 107 minutes of screen time! That's 51 minutes shorter than Roland Emmerich's schlocktastic "2012." — M.P.

"Spy" ★★

R, 2:00, comedy. Melissa McCarthy's latest reunites her with "Bridesmaids" director Paul Feig for their third collaboration. Coming off "St. Vincent," McCarthy exhibits a newfound subtlety in the best scenes in "Spy," which is a strange thing to say about a film with a full quotient of R-rated trash talk, along with a barrage of violence played more or less straight, to mixed results. I prefer my comedies a little less bone-crunchy. But the cast, led by McCarthy as a behind-the-scenes C.I.A. analyst who finally gets a taste of the James Bond action, drives this vehicle with supreme confidence. The laughs are there, small bits and large. Feig has made three viable commercial comedies in a row, a minor miracle in itself. — M.P.

Szylko, Stanley A.

Stanley Szylko, 88, of Park Ridge, IL passed away Saturday May 23, 2015.

Stan was born as Stanislaus Anthony Szylko to the late Jozef & Jozefa Szylko, on September 12, 1926 in Chicago. A first generation American, he was proud of both his Polish heritage as well as his American upbringing. He graduated from Washburn High School in Chicago in 1944 and received a degree from Acme Trade School as a Tool & Die machinist in 1945. He went on to make a lifelong career at Diemasters, Inc. based in Elmhurst IL, where he raised his children from 1967-1988. Skilled with his hands and his head, Stan finally retired in 2002, after several attempts and 55 years with the company.

Beginning in 1945, Stan served in the US Army as a member of Headquarters Troop 6th Constable Squad. An M-1 Rifle Sharpshooter, he was awarded the Army of Occupation Medal as well as WWII Victory Medal.

Stan led an active life and was always involved in clubs and organizations. His affiliation with both the YMCA and as a founding member of the Penguins social club spanned over 70 years of loyalty, service and friendships. Stan held those relationships dear and like family. He was also a member of the Immaculate Conception (Elmhurst) and St. Paul of the Cross (Park Ridge) Parishes; and remained very active with the Arts; Music; Sports and Casino visits with the Maine Township Streamers over the last 25 years while living in Park Ridge.

Stan was an avid traveler who was always interested in what adventure was around the corner. He traveled to nearly all US and Canadian states plus visited over 50 countries in his lifetime. His passion was for Mexico where he took countless extended trips along the Yucatan Peninsula including his favorite destination, Kalluum, whether with family, friends or as a solo traveler. He never met a stranger.

A humble, gentle and independent man his entire life, Stan's greatest love was for his family. In addition to his parents, he was preceded in death by his sister Frances Szylko (Meyer), and is survived by his three children - Monica Lussler of Scotts Valley, CA; Edward Szylko (Michelle Hansen) of San Francisco, CA; and Raymond Szylko (Michelle) of Mercer Island, WA as well as his beloved grandchildren Trevor, Shannon, Megan, Kaija, Mason, and Sabine. In addition, he held especially dear his nephews Robert, William and Kenneth whom he helped raise; as well as nieces, nephews, cousins, great and great-great nieces and nephews.

Services will be held Friday June 26th, Mass at St. Paul of the Cross Church, 320 S. Washington Street in Park Ridge at 10am with military burial at St Adalbert Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, the family gratefully accepts donations sent to the Elmhurst YMCA at 211 W. First Street - Elmhurst, IL 60126 - Attention Donations.

Cadillac, Lexus inject life into brands with new sport coupes

BY KIRK BELL
Tribune Newspapers

Cadillac has represented the pinnacle of American luxury for more than a century. Lexus got its start in 1989, but it has forged a reputation as Japan's finest luxury automaker. Despite their lofty standing, both brands are more known for somewhat stodgy luxury barges than for sport coupes. Now, however, Cadillac and Lexus are trying to change their images by building sport coupes meant to take on the big kid on the block, the BMW M4.

Cadillac's contender is the ATS-V, which benefits from General Motors' best engineering. It features a carbon-fiber hood, wider fenders to tuck in the 18-inch Michelin Pilot Super Sport tires and extra underbody bracing. A 3.6-liter twin-turbocharged V-6 engine delivers the grunt.

The RC F is the top performer in the Lexus lineup. It gets a high-revving 5.0-liter V-8 engine and adds an engine compartment brace and a rear partition brace to stiffen the structure.

We tested the Cadillac ATS-V and Lexus RC F on the street and the racetrack at beautiful Road America in Elkhart Lake, Wis., to see if America and Japan can build cars worthy of comparison to the BMW M4.

MICHAEL TERCHA/TRIBUNE NEWSPAPERS

while the Cadillac offers an eight-speed auto as well as a six-speed manual.

Given the power figures, the performance numbers should be about equal, but they're not. That's because the Cadillac weighs 300 pounds less than the Lexus. Cadillac quotes 0 to 60 mph times of 3.9 seconds with the manual and 4.1 with the automatic, while the Lexus makes that sprint in 4.4 seconds. Acceleration in both cars is exhilarating.

A true performance coupe should offer a manual transmission, so the Cadillac gets points for its smooth-shifting six-speed. While both automatic transmissions are quick to shift, neither is as responsive as the dual-clutch transmission offered in the BMW M4. Lap times are quicker with this new breed of transmission, and both companies would be wise to develop their own and use them in several products.

Scoring: The Caddy is faster and offers a manual.

Lexus sounds better. Advantage Cadillac.

Round 2: Dynamics

These cars have very different but rewarding personalities. The ATS-V is agile and tossable. It feels hunkered down, and the tires provide relentless grip. It is a very balanced car that turns in quickly and provides feedback as it approaches the limits of adhesion. The steering has some nice heft and offers gratifying road feel. The brakes, which are the same binders used on the last CTS-V, are relentless.

The RC F may be a bit overweight, but it wears that weight well, driving like a lighter car. The car turns in crisply and rotates willingly, no doubt aided by the torque vectoring system. It leans just enough in corners to provide feedback as it reaches the limits of adhesion. Though a bit light, the steering is delightfully quick. The brakes are also sturdy. They handled a day at Road America without warping or fading.

ROBERT DUFFER/TRIBUNE NEWSPAPERS

Performance coupes usually ride hard, but both cars are fairly forgiving. The Cadillac's Magnetic Ride Control suspension, which reads and adapts to road conditions quickly, is the likely reason for its smooth ride. The Lexus just offers excellent suspension tuning. Both cars need to be this good if they are going to challenge the BMW M4.

Scoring: Lighter weight equals quicker moves, so the Cadillac gets the nod.

Round 3: Interior

The ATS-V's interior features cut-and-sewn dashboard covering and soft-touch materials at all of the touch points. It also gets supportive sport seats and offers optional Recaro buckets with 16-way power adjustments. These are all welcome features, but the Caddy's interior falls down in some areas.

Most models come with the CUE (Cadillac User Experience) control system, which is run through an 8-inch center touch screen, voice commands and a pair of five-way controllers on the steering wheel. The screen accepts drag-and-drop and pinch-and-stretch gestures like an iPad, and the system is very advanced, but it's overly complicated, and the voice recognition is awful. We also don't like the swipe controls for the radio and climate system on the center stack. Buttons and knobs have worked for decades. There's no need to replace them.

The Lexus' interior is well-appointed. The front seats are exceptionally comfortable and supportive, but this cabin also has issues. The hard plastic center stack looks out of place and lacks design flair. When the navigation system is ordered, buyers get the Lexus Remote Touch infotainment interface. It features a touch surface on the center console with pinch-and-stretch capability. The touchpad controls a cursor on the 7-inch dashboard screen. Remote Touch requires some manual dexterity, but we got used to it in just a few hours.

Scoring: Easier controls give Lexus the nod.

The Verdict

The ATS-V loses only one round in this middle-weight fight, but it comes out on top in the areas most important to a sport coupe: power and dynamics. However, these cars are very evenly matched, right down to the price, which starts at around $62,000, and I'd be plenty happy to settle for the loser. They are worthy competitors to the M4, and that shows just how far these two manufacturers have come.

The 2015 Ford F-150 King Ranch Super Crew cab is the top-of-the-line trim.

King Ranch an urban cowboy

BY CASEY WILLIAMS
Tribune Newspapers

It requires ranch-sized ambition to take the best-selling truck on earth, cast aside long-held expectations and reinvent it. Discounting a century of steel bodies and the V-8 as holy grail, the 2015 Ford F-150 embraces neither. Toss in a neap of Texas style, and you have the F-150 King Ranch Super Crew.

Looking more urban than cowboy, the truck gleams with a huge chrome grille, LED headlamps and chrome exhaust tip. Around back, LED box lighting, deployable side steps, rear tailgate stairs, and bed extender are ready for business. Power running boards and 20-inch chrome alloys cause a scene wherever they go.

Sweet-smelling saddle leather will make you want to bunk inside. Embroidered dash coverings, genuine wood trim and silver accents add style. Heated, cooled and power-massaged front seats soothe away long days. Crank up the Sony audio system with Hank or Gaga as both seem appropriate. A full-length panoramic glass roof lets both rows enjoy sunshine.

Ford learned some hard lessons with its SYNC infotainment system. Early versions were confusing to operate, and voice commands went unheard. The latest version still has a cumbersome touch screen with quadrants for Phone, Navigation, Entertainment and Climate, but has classy aluminum knobs below for volume and tuning.

None of this makes the F-150 controversial, but body panels are fabricated from aluminum instead of steel to save up to 700 pounds. The truck still rides on a fully boxed steel frame, and thanks to decreased weight, claims 12,200 pounds maximum towing and 3,270 pounds payload capacity.

Most F-150s, including this one, go through the door with Ford's 3.5-liter EcoBoost V-6 that delivers 365 horsepower and 420 pound-feet of torque through a six-speed automatic transmission. That's 20 horsepower less than the available 5-liter V-8, but 33 pound-feet more torque for moving heavy loads and brisk acceleration. This 4x4 truck achieves 17/23 mpg city/highway, or about 2 mpg better each than the V-8. Competitors do better but not while matching Ford's horsepower and torque.

Shedding 700 pounds while employing turbocharged engines saves fuel but also changes the F-150's drive character. Ford trucks always seemed heavier and rougher than competitors, but this one feels relatively nimble (it's still a big pickup).

While it can work, the F-150 King Ranch is no work truck. It's for wealthy businesspeople and retirees who own RVs, classic cars or boats. No sensible person would get this pretty boy dirty.

The F-150 King Ranch is gussied up for weekend cowboys, but tough enough for real ones — provided they possess a vault. King Ranch editions start at $48,885 but came to $63,710 all-in.

Readers question need for timing belt replacement

BOB WEBER
Motormouth

Q: I have a 2005 Honda Odyssey with 45,000 miles. Most of the miles are at highway speeds. I was recently told at a Honda dealer that I need to change the timing belt because even though there are not a lot of miles on the car, the factory recommends that it be changed after seven years. Since this is a major expense, I am reluctant to spend the money if it may not be necessary, but the thought of the belt breaking and having to spend thousands of dollars to repair the engine is scary. I can understand why belts that have significant miles, or belts subjected to high heat from the engine will deteriorate, but I don't understand why a belt on a car kept in a garage is any different than a belt hanging on the wall in a parts department. Am I missing something here? Also, why don't passenger cars monitor the running hours? Wouldn't that be a better measure of engine wear and tear?

— G.L., Oak Park, Ill.

A: You are wise to question this "recommended" service. Whenever advisers suggest a service, especially when they claim that it is required, ask to see it in writing. If the factory suggests replacing the timing belt based on time, ask to see the document. If you are told it is an unwritten rule, ask to see where it is not written.

Unlike airplanes and lawn tractors, automobiles are not operated at a steady engine speed most of the time. Rather, engine speed, load, acceleration and deceleration, starting and stopping and restarting both hot and cold make maintenance based on hours of operation nearly impossible. That is why carmakers are installing smart maintenance reminders.

HONDA

Q: I have a 2008 Honda Civic with the standard gasoline engine. I keep reading that when a timing belt or chain breaks, it can destroy an engine. How? I can't get a straight answer from dealers or garages as to when I should replace these! I have heard everything from 60,000 to 100,000 miles. Given the dire consequences, I'd like to get a straight answer. Can you help?

— C.N., Chicago

A: Glad you asked.

There are two basic types of engines: interference engines and noninterference engines. Inside an interference engine, there is very little space between the valves and the tops of the pistons. If the timing chain or belt breaks, the valves stop moving in time with the pistons. When the pistons come up to the top of their travel, they crash into the valves, which bend or breaks them. In a noninterference engine, there is space between the valves and pistons, so if the chain or belt breaks, nothing happens other than the engine stops running. Follow the published maintenance schedule for belts. Chains seldom break, so they have no replacement schedule.

Q: I recently purchased a set of Goodyear Eagle Sport A/S (225-40-R18) tires from a major online retailer for my 2009 VW GTI. While conducting the purchase, a note popped up stating that, for proper loading of the tires on my vehicle, they should be inflated to 42 psi. However after receiving delivery of the tires, on the manufacturer's tire label under Tire Mounting Precautions it states, "After beads are fully sealed, adjust to vehicle manufacturer recommended inflation pressure," which is 38 psi. Which is correct and why?

— R.H., Easton, Pa.

A: When in doubt, follow the inflation pressures called for on the doorjamb sticker. The carmaker determines the best compromise for handling and comfort. The 4-pound difference is not significant, so you may experiment and see what you prefer.

Yamat's play in tough conditions impresses his future coach

BY MATT HARNISS
Pioneer Press

When the putt fell into the cup, Orion Yamat tilted his head to the right and shrugged his shoulders as he looked in his caddy's direction.

His only birdie came on his 36th and final hole of the Western Junior Amateur at Riverside Golf Club in North Riverside. Yamat's 79-77 for a 16-over 156 was a long way from the 7-over cut line.

But the Niles resident and recent Maine East graduate took away some positives from his first appearance at the Western Junior, one of the top junior tournaments in the country.

"It was great practice for college," said the 17-year-old Yamat, who plans to play at Loyola of Chicago. "There are going to be tournaments where you don't know the course and don't get many practice rounds, and you still have to shoot a good score."

Yamat's future college coach, Kyle Stefan, followed him for a few holes on June 17, and came away impressed with how the incoming freshman carried himself in the difficult conditions, which included a steady rain and soggy, sloppy fairways.

After the first two rounds, only three in the 156-player field were under par for the tournament.

"There is nothing more miserable than playing 36 holes in wind, cold, maybe snow, and that's what we do up here," Stefan said. "You have to have the internal fortitude to get through it. It was good to see him play in less-than-perfect conditions. It makes you a better player. No, 77 wasn't his best, but he was not checked out. That shows me what I can expect."

Yamat is one of three players in Stefan's second recruiting class at Loyola, and the only one from the Chicago area. There is one other area player on the 2015-16 roster, Niles resident Orion Yamat shot a 77 on the second day of the Western Junior Amateur and missed the cut.

He's a highly competitive guy who wants to succeed deeply. But he doesn't press himself or get nervous. There is no fear in his game.

Kyle Stefan, Loyola of Chicago's director of golf

Arlington Heights' Kenny Mleko, a sophomore from Hersey.

"I think Loyola is a great opportunity for me," Yamat said. "I like the coach, and I like the way he goes about things. He knows when to press you and when to back off. He doesn't hound you. He's very understanding."

Stefan said Yamat, who finished second in the 2014 Class 3A state tournament, should compete for a starting spot as a freshman. That's one reason why Yamat said the Ramblers are a good fit for him.

"A big thing is to get playing time," he said. "I didn't want to go to a school where I had to claw my way just to play. I want the chance to get into the lineup."

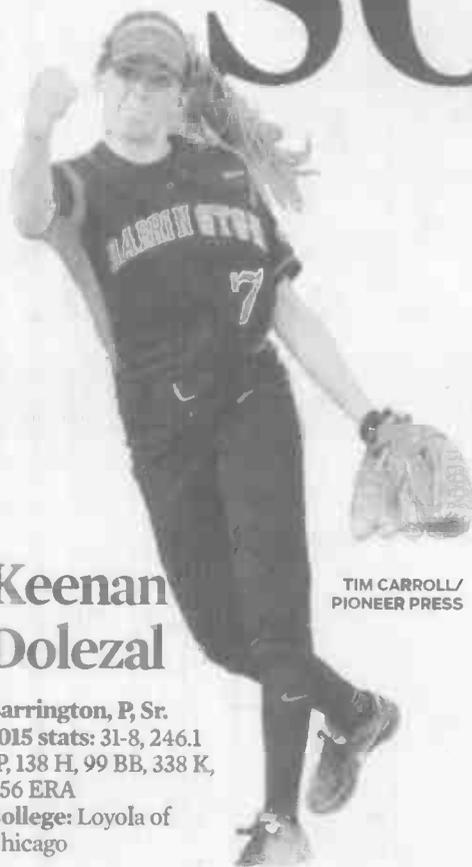

Stefan said Yamat's combination of talent and disposition will take him far in the game of golf.

"He's a highly competitive guy who wants to succeed deeply,"

Stefan said. "But he doesn't press himself or get nervous. There is no fear in his game. Right now, his game is a smidgen off, but he projects as a high-level player. I am encouraged by his game."

College: Northwestern

Nelson declared her college choice before her freshman season started and didn't disappoint. She led OPRF in batting average, doubles and triples all while moving from shortstop, her normal position, to second base because the Huskies had senior shortstop Taylor Arends.

"[Her position switch] was seamless," Huskies coach Mel Kolbusz said. "She was our starter from Day 1."

The 5-foot-10 cleanup hitter was the only freshman named to the Illinois Coaches Association's Class 4A all-state team. She made the second team.

Chardonay Harris

Oak Park-River Forest, DP-P, So.

2015 stats: (Pitching) 18-3, 118.2 IP, 20 BB, 176 K, 1.59 ERA; (Hitting) .494 BA, 12 R, 5 2B, 2 3B, 2 HR, 32 RBI
College: Auburn

Harris overcame two offseason concussions (one in a car accident and another playing basketball) to become one-half of the Huskies' dynamite pitching platoon with Emily Richardson. Harris enjoyed a breakout season, helping OPRF finish third in Class 4A after an arm injury limited her to eight innings in the circle last season.

"What was a little bit of a surprise was how her hitting was," OPRF coach Mel Kolbusz said. "We knew she could pitch."

Harris pitched a perfect game against Loyola on April 13.

ALL-AREA SECOND TEAM SOFTBALL

Jenny Behan

Carmel, 3B, Sr.

2015 stats: .532 BA, 63 R, 14 2B, 17 HR, 63 RBI

College: James Madison

Behan, who fell one home run short of equaling her school record in a season, had four grand slams as a senior and finished with 53 career homers. Behan was one of five players named all-East Suburban Catholic for a third consecutive time.

Caitlin Catino

Buffalo Grove, OF, Sr.

2015 stats: .539 BA, 13 2B, 2 3B, 2 HR

College: Wisconsin-Whitewater

The four-year varsity player and leadoff hitter led Mid-Suburban East champion Buffalo Grove in batting. She was named to the Pioneer Press All-Area Softball Second Team for the second season in a row.

Maria DeVito

Mundelein, 2B, Sr.

2015 stats: .486 BA, 15 2B, 6 HR, 42 RBI

College: Eastern Illinois (walk on)

The four-year varsity player followed last season's monster effort of a plus-.500 BA and 12 homers by hitting six homers and batting .486. DeVito once again led the Mustangs in batting and RBIs this spring.

Kendall Duwal

Leyden, 1B-OF-P, Jr.

2015 stats: .449 BA, 5 HR, 55 RBI; 12-8, 4.46 ERA

The three-year starter has played all over the field and should rank among the school's all-time greats when her career is over. In each of her final two games of the season, both against Maine West, Duwal belted a two-run home run.

Taylor Koenigs

Stevenson, SS, Sr.

2015 stats: .510 BA, 8 3B, 9 HR, 37 RBI

College: Auburn (not planning on playing softball)

The Patriots were a No. 10 seed in a Class 4A sectional, but reached a supersectional with the help of Koenigs, a three-year varsity infielder. Koenigs equalled her own school record for home runs in a season with nine.

Caitlyn Santiago

Oak Park-River Forest, 1B, Jr.

2015 stats: .394 BA, 39 R, 11 2B, 4 HR, 38 RBI

After Oak Park-River Forest won 17 games to begin the season, Santiago kept the momentum going in mid-May with three home runs in six games during an eight-game winning streak. She ranked second on the team in doubles.

Samantha Linde

Oak Park-River Forest, OF, Jr.

2015 stats: .417 BA, 44 R, 10 SB, 2 2B, 21 RBI

The Huskies' leadoff hitter was one of five starting juniors, which should give a boost to the West Suburban Silver champions' hope for returning to East Peoria next year after finishing third in Class 4A state this spring. Linde ranked second on the team in runs scored behind Maeve Nelson.

Rachel Macdonald

Barrington, C, Jr.

2015 stats: .451 BA, 36 R, 17 SB, 15 2B, 5 HR, 35 RBI

In her first varsity season, Macdonald was named to the National Fastpitch Coaches Association's All-North Region Second Team. The No. 3 batter led the Fillies in batting average, stolen bases and RBIs.

Emily Richardson

Oak Park-River Forest, P, Jr.

2015 stats: .392 BA, 11 R, 6 2B, 6 HR, 24 RBI; 15-1, 112.1 IP, 88 H, 30 BB, 100 K, 1.53 ERA

College: Vaparaiso

The winning pitcher in the Class 4A state third-place game ranked second in homers for the Huskies (33-4). When she wasn't pitching, she batted as the designated player.

Alex Koziol

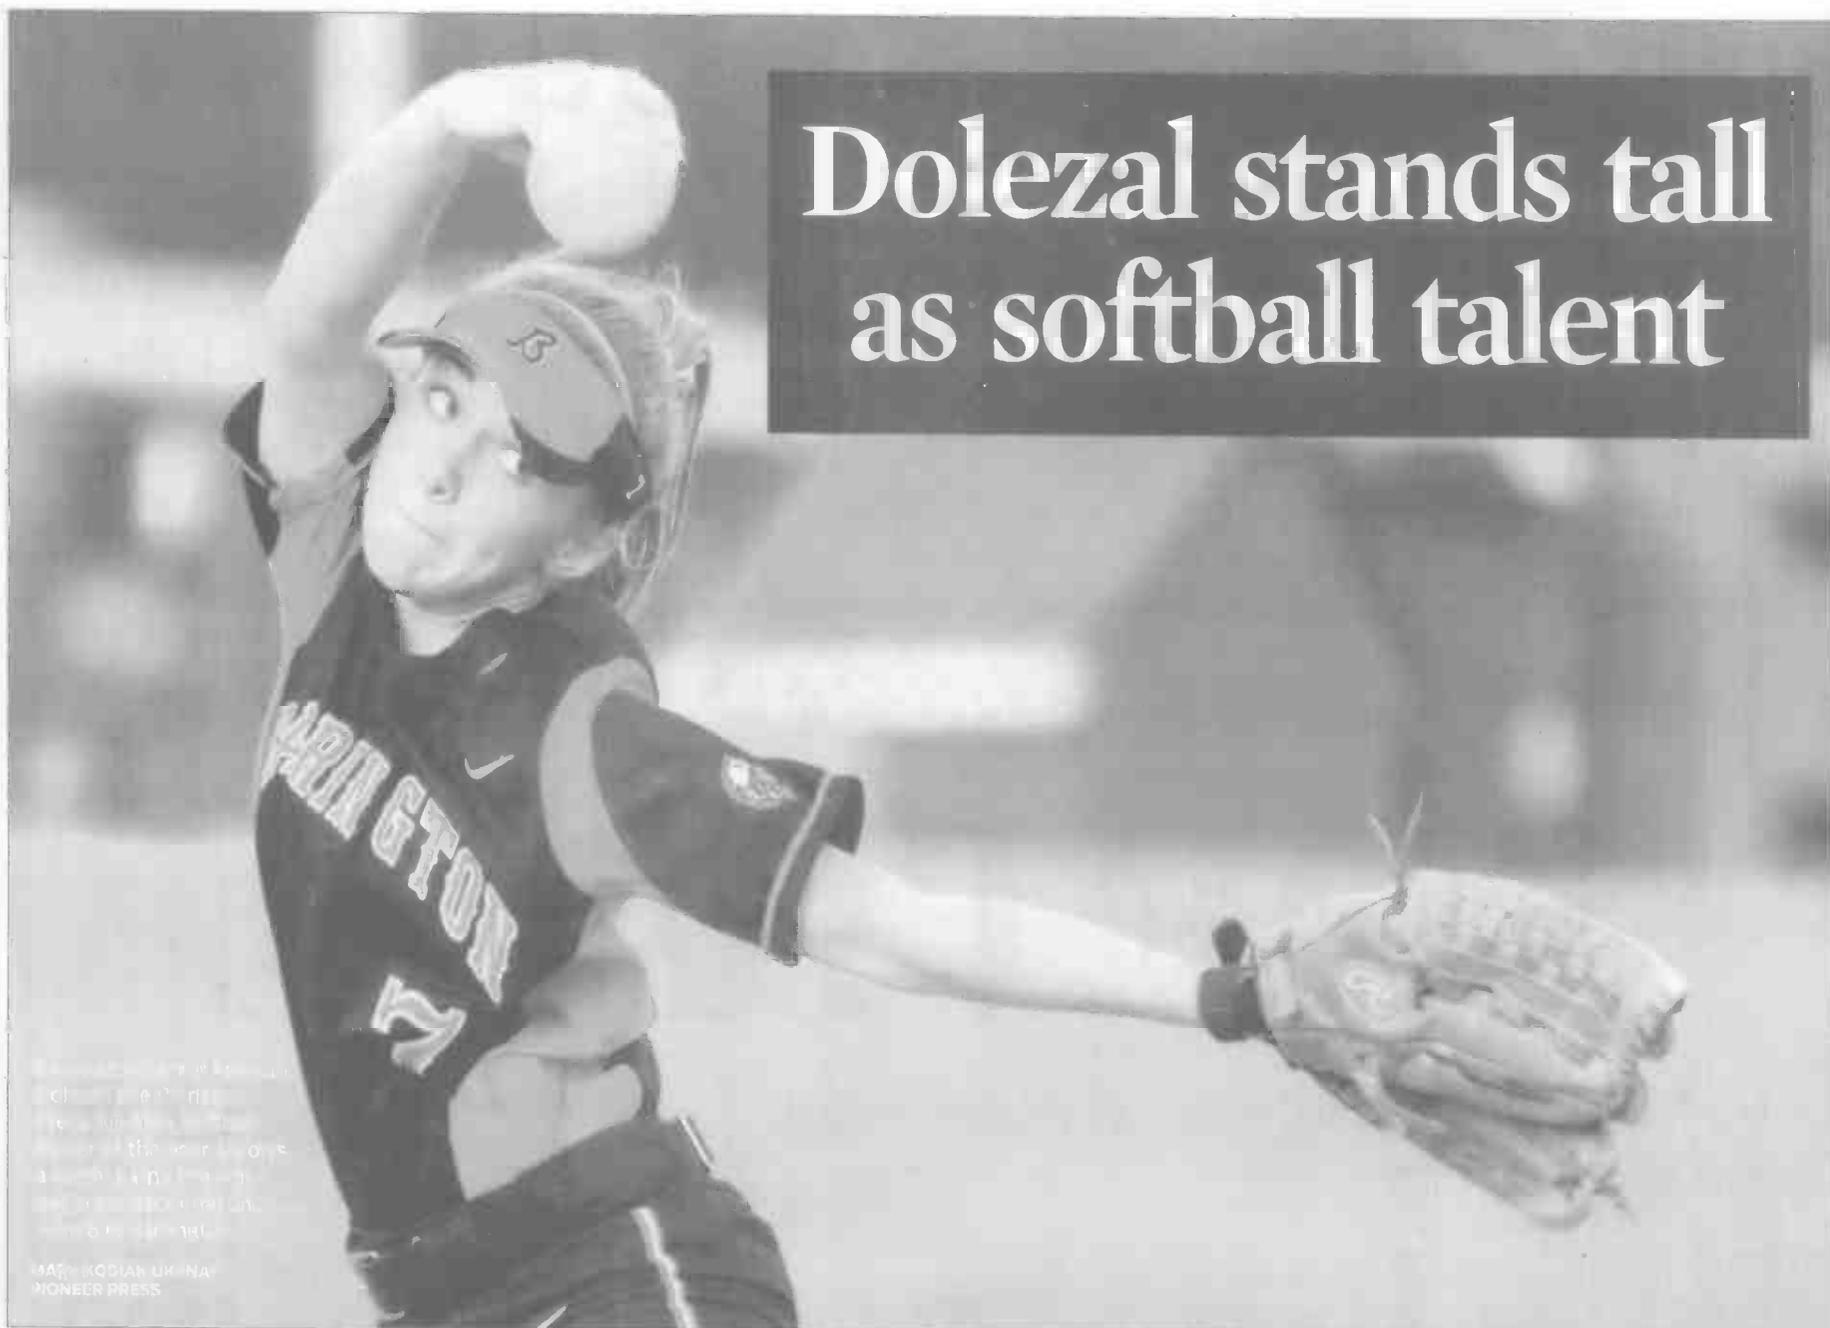

Trinity, OF, Jr.

2015 stats: .481 BA, 46 R, 29 SB, 6 2B, 3 3B, 14 RBI

The Blazers finished second in the Girls Catholic Athletic Conference Red with help from its speedy, slap-hitting leadoff batter. The center fielder ranked second on Trinity's team with 65 hits on the season.

Dolezal stands tall as softball talent

MADE IN KODIAK, ILLINOIS
PIONEER PRESS

BY GEORGE M. WILCOX
Pioneer Press

At 5-foot-5, Keenan Dolezal doesn't look like a prototypical ace pitcher.

Many elite high school softball pitchers dazzle opposing batters with their power, perhaps using a grunt or a couple of slaps of their glove off their front leg to add a dash of intimidation. Through her four-year career, Dolezal has stamped her own style at Barrington. In spite of her small stature, she was a powerful pitcher with command of her fastball and help from a changeup and rise ball.

Dolezal, one of three seniors on this year's team, helped Barrington earn its ninth state tournament berth and established her legacy as one of the best pitchers in school history.

"Keenan was a fierce competitor," Barrington coach Perry Peterson said. "She worked hard to develop the skills she had. For us, every time she would lead our team on the field, we knew when she pitched, we had a chance to win the game."

Dolezal pitched all but 12 innings this season and had 19 shutouts. Barrington didn't win the Mid-Suburban West or either of its two regular-season tournaments, but Dolezal heated up in the postseason as the Fillies allowed only six runs before the state tournament. The Fillies finished fourth in state.

Keenan Dolezal is the third member of her family to play softball. Casey Dolezal is eight years older than Keenan and pitched one season at St. Viator. Kiley Dolezal, who graduated in 2011, pitched three varsity seasons for the Fillies.

"I remember taking lessons with Kiley," Keenan Dolezal said. "I looked up to her from a pitching aspect. She's a hard worker and that helped me a lot."

Barrington varsity assistant coach Michael Freese started working with Keenan Dolezal when she was in fifth grade and, in his words, "a little tiny thing."

Keenan Dolezal began to show signs of becoming an elite pitcher in middle school, according to Freese. He said she learned how to place a snap on the ball.

"It was hard to overcome given her size and physique," Freese said. "She was 13 years old when I knew she could become something special. She started to develop a good velocity, good command, good control and you could see that work ethic."

Keenan Dolezal played in only five games as a freshman on the varsity, but finished 29-2 as a sophomore with an 0.82 ERA while leading Barrington's best team to a 36-2 record and third place in 2013. She pitched a perfect game that year against Fremd and threw another no-hitter against Fremd on May 9.

"She has developed into a fine pitcher, a great kid and a greater role model," Peterson said.

Keenan Dolezal became a three-time Class 4A all-state selection by the Illinois Coaches Association and was named to the all-North Region first team from 2013-15 by the National Fastpitch Coaches Association.

This season, she passed Abby Reed to become Barrington's all-time wins leader. Keenan Dolezal finished with a 90-21 career record. She also passed Claire Voris to become her school's season (338 in 2015) and career (856) strikeouts leader.

Her college softball career will take her to Loyola. Keenan Dolezal will attempt to battle returning pitchers Madison Hope and Ashley Rogers for playing time next season.

David Burnside

Glenbrook North, OF, Sr.
2015 stats: .444 BA, .586 OBP, 4 HR, 42 RBI
College: Rose-Hulman (Indiana)

Burnside was one of the toughest outs in the area this spring. In addition to his lofty on-base percentage, the Illinois Coaches Association's Class 4A all-state pick struck out only 12 times in 142 plate appearances.

NIC SUMMERS/
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Fitz Stadler

Glenbrook South, P, Sr.
2015 stats: 8-3, 1.24 ERA, 56.1 innings pitched, 97 K
College: Arizona State

At 6-foot-8, the right-hander was one of the most imposing pitchers around. He struck out nearly two batters per inning on his way to Illinois Coaches Association Class 4A all-state honors.

Anthony Delaurentis

Barrington, 2B, Sr.
2015 stats: .392 BA, .473 OBP, 7 HR, 30 RBI
College: Indiana (not planning on playing baseball)

Delaurentis went from Barrington's B team as a freshman to the Illinois Coaches Association's Class 4A all-state team as a senior. He played second base but was also a star on the mound, going 6-2 with a 1.83 ERA.

Ben Samborn

Glenbrook South, 1B, Sr.
2015 stats: .422 BA, .480 OBP, 3 HR, 26 RBI, 13 2B
College: Illinois (possible walk-on)

The kind of player a team wants in the batter's box in a big situation, Samborn struck out just three times in 123 plate appearances this spring. He had the game-winning hit in the Titans' 11-10, extra-inning victory over rival Glenbrook North on April 23.

Patrick Rumoro

Oak Park-River Forest, C, Sr.
2015 stats: .377 BA, 1 HR, 40 RBI, 10 2B
College: Louisville

Playing for the Huskies is tradition for Rumoro's extended family, and he could have been one of the best in his family to wear the uniform. The catcher followed his father, two cousins and two uncles onto the Oak Park-River Forest varsity and helped the team to a third-place finish in Class 4A this spring. He was chosen for the Illinois Coaches Association's Class 4A all-state team as a senior.

Ryan Kramer

Nazareth, OF, Sr.
2015 stats: .454 BA, 4 HR, 25 RBI, 11 2B
College: Carthage (Wisconsin)

The offensive catalyst for the Class 3A state runner-up Roadrunners, Kramer did his part in the title game by going 2-for-4 with two RBIs. The lead-off hitter was named to the Illinois Coaches Association's Class 3A all-state team.

Maxwell sparked the Wildcats' run to a Class 4A regional title and a sectional final, where they lost to Oak Park-River Forest in 11 innings.

Jake Vogt

Libertyville, 2B, Sr.
2015 stats: .441 BA, 21 SB, 10 2B
College: Luther (Iowa)

Vogt was a key cog on the Wildcats the last three years, helping Libertyville reach the Class 4A state championship game in 2013 and a sectional final in 2014.

Cooper Johnson

Carmel, C, Jr.
2015 stats: .382 BA, .479 OBP, 11
2B, 3 HR, 33 RBI
College: Mississippi

One of top-ranked juniors in the state, Johnson will play in the Under Armour All-American Game at Wrigley Field on Saturday, Aug. 15.

Matt Flach

Nazareth, OF, Sr.
2015 stats: .411 BA, 11 2B, 5 3B 3
HR, 27 RBI
College: Illinois (will try to walk on)

In two Class 3A state tournament games, Flach went 4-for-6 with two RBIs and one run scored as the team's No. 2 hitter. Nazareth finished second in state.

Mike Johnson

Hinsdale Central, 1B, Sr.
2015 stats: .379 BA, .495 OBP, 6
HR, 31 RBI
College: Army (plans to play football)

While he was a huge part of the Red Devils' attack this spring, Johnson was also a 6-foot-3, 280-pound offensive lineman with the Hinsdale Central football team.

Matt Wilson

Nazareth, OF-P, Sr.
2015 stats: (Hitting) .417 BA, 12
2B, 30 RBI; (Pitching) 7-1, 33.1 IP,
27 H, 19 BB, 32 K
College: Elmhurst

Wilson helped the Roadrunners to their best finish in program history. He suffered his first loss of the season in the Class 3A championship game when he came in to pitch relief against Highland.

Chris Atwood

Oak Park-River Forest, OF-P, Sr.
2015 stats: (Hitting) .379 BA, 8

7-2, 58.1 IP, 19 BB, 52 K, 2.04
ERA
College: Wisconsin-Oshkosh

The 6-foot-4 lead-off hitter scored 43 runs in 37 games. On the mound, he tied for the team lead with seven wins and had a staff-best ERA.

George Karkazis

Lake Forest, DH, Sr.
2015 stats: .430 BA, .541 OBP, 8
2B, 6 3B, 2 HR, 26 RBI
College: Miami (Ohio)

Before he was a two-year standout behind the plate, Karkazis got his first varsity start at second base as a sophomore in the playoffs.

Kevin Forde

Fenwick, P, Sr.
2015 stats: 9-2, 62.2 IP, 115 K,
2.12 ERA
College: St. Joseph's (Indiana)

After suffering the hard-luck, 2-1 loss to Grayslake Central in a 2014 Class 3A supersectional, he began this spring's Class 4A playoff run with a five-inning, complete-game no-hitter against Niles West.

Casey Dodge

Barrington, 3B, Sr.
2015 stats: .475 BA, .495 OBP,
.985 fielding percentage
College: Might walk on at Illinois or Michigan

Dodge was as solid offensively as he was at his corner infield spot, where he committed only one error.

Fitz Stadler stares down opposing batters

Player of the Year is imposing, just like one of his childhood idols

BY MATT HARNESS
Pioneer Press

When he was younger, one of Fitz Stadler's favorite baseball players to watch was Seattle Mariners and Arizona Diamondbacks ace Randy Johnson.

At 6-foot-10, Johnson's mere presence on the mound was almost enough to get some batters out. The hard-throwing, right-handed Stadler — a recent Glenbrook South graduate and the Pioneer Press All-Area Baseball Player of the Year — stands 6-8, weighs 220 pounds and was the most dominant pitcher in the area this spring. In 56.1 innings pitched, he allowed only 30 hits and struck out 97.

In a 15-1, five-inning win over Carmel on April 7, Stadler threw a no-hitter while striking out 11, including six in a row. A few starts later, Stadler struck out nine and allowed four hits in a 5-3 win over New Trier.

Earlier this month, Stadler was drafted in the 32nd round of the MLB Draft by the Chicago Cubs, but he intends to play college baseball at Arizona State. Before that happens, he took time to talk with Pioneer Press reporter Matt Harness.

Q: When and where did you get your start in baseball?

A: "I feel like as soon as I was born. My dad [Matt Stadler] was a swimmer, but he let us decide which sports we wanted to play. I started playing competitively when I was 7 years old. I played summer travel baseball for the Glenview Patriots until I was 9. During the spring, I played in a house league. From 10 to 13, I played for the Glenview Blaze. Then, I went back to the Glenview Patriots right before high school."

Q: Have you always been a pitcher? When did you focus full-time on pitching?

A: "I've pitched and played first base. I switched to just pitching last year. I miss playing in the field, but I still played first base in practices. Position players contribute every day, and I wish I could do that. That was tough."

Q: Your brother, Walker Stadler, just finished his baseball career at Indiana University, and your other brother, Sully Stadler, will be a senior player for the Hoosiers. How did they influence you growing up?

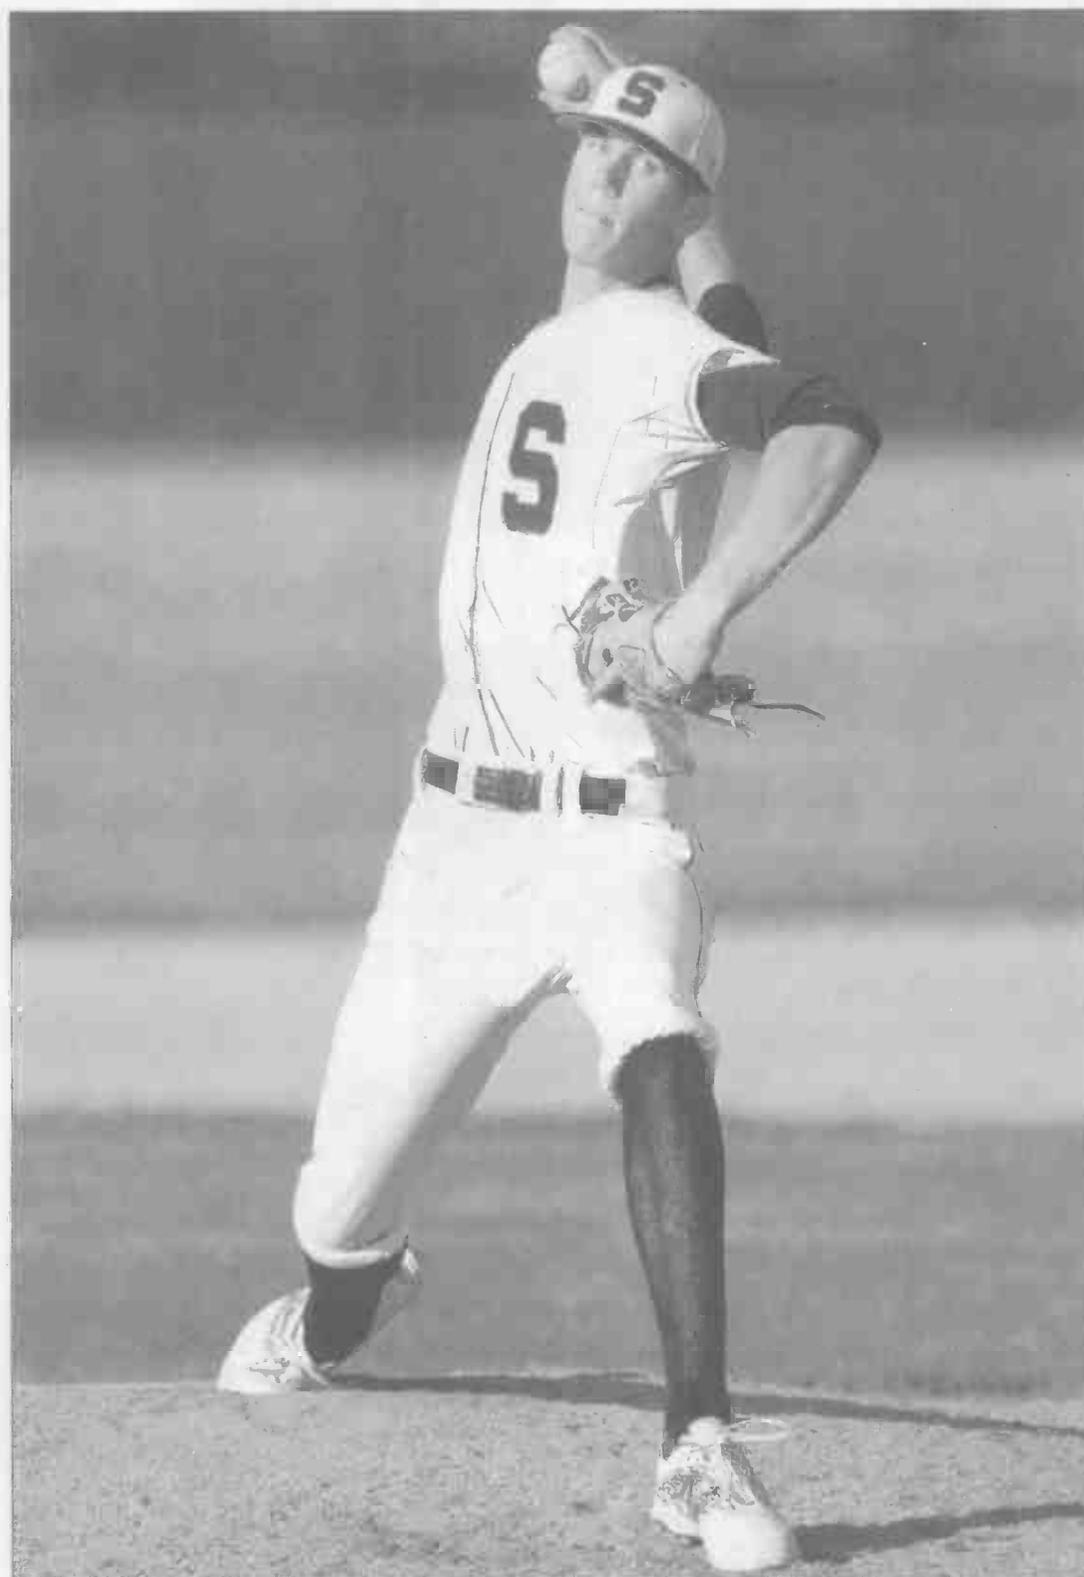

A: "It was mostly Walker. He was the mediator between me and Sully. We got into a few scraps, but we are all good now. We were young and would get into stupid fights during a basketball game. I could communicate more with Walker. He really paved the way for me, and I thank him very much for that."

Q: Who was the toughest batter you faced in high school?

A: "That's a hard one. I will say I went up against [Glenbrook South's Ben Samborn] a lot in practice. He's one of the best hitters around. We had a lot of fun competing with one another. Of course, we would talk trash here and there. [Glenbrook North's] David Burnside was another one. I've known him most of my life."

Q: You have a scholarship to play baseball at Arizona State, but you also were one of the state's top pitching prospects. You were selected by the Chicago Cubs as the 953rd pick in the 32nd round of Major League Baseball's first-year player draft. Tell me about that process.

A: "The draft is so complicated now. But I set a number, and I guess no one bit. I had attention in the first 10 rounds, but I felt I was being low-balled. The reason why I was picked at all was because it was a courtesy pick. They want to build a relationship with you."

NIC SUMMERS/PIONEER PRESS

Glenbrook South's Fitz Stadler throws a pitch during a sectional semifinal game between Glenbrook South and Mundelein on June 5, 2014.

Q: Who was your favorite player when you were younger?

A: "Ken Griffey Jr. I collected baseball cards, and I always had his in the front page. That's where the good guys went. I don't remember watching him [play for the Seattle Mariners], but I do remember him with the [Cincinnati Reds]."

Q: Now that you won't be eligible for the MLB Draft again until after your junior season in college, are you looking forward to playing for the Sun Devils?

A: "Very excited, and I am anxious to get out there. I leave on June 29, and I'm pumped to start a new chapter in my life. It will make me compete harder to reach that next tier."
