SHOUT OUT

Janely Herrera, local police officer

The Skokie Police Department in recent years has welcomed more young police officers to the force as older personnel have retired. Janely Herrera is in her second year as a Skokie police officer, commuting from Westchester every day for her job, she says.

Q: Where did you grow up?

A: I grew up in the city of Chicago in Rogers Park.

Q: Pets?

A: I don't have pets now. I used to have a Teacup Yorkie named Mocha after my favorite coffee.

Q: What book are you currently reading and what book would you like to read next?

A: I'm not reading a specific book right now. I'm just catching up on (work). There's a lot of books I'd like to read.

Q: First job?

A: My first job was with a cellphone company. I was a sales rep for U.S. Cellular. I like this better. We all have to start somewhere.

Q: As a kid, what did you want to be when you grew up?

A: I always wanted to be a police officer for multiple reasons. I grew up in the city and in that area, police are not deemed as a friend and they're seen as the enemy. So people were not comfortable coming to police. It was quite the opposite. I wanted to change that.

Q: Favorite charity?

A: My niece wears prescription sunglasses and a lot of time they go to Sunglass Hut and they have some kind of charity there where spare change is rounded up and goes to helping people in need. (Onesight). I think it's a great charity program.

A: Set no limits, set no barriers for yourself.

Q: Favorite local restaurant?

A: It's between Dengeos and Grecian Kitchen, those are the top two.

Q: What is an interesting factoid about yourself?

A: I do Krav Maga martial arts. It's a more realistic reality-based training that helps you on the streets. If somebody comes and attacks you from the front, you're more prepared. It's very popular — especially among law enforcement officers because you actually get to practice a lot of take-down techniques.

NU rower who died couldn't swim

That ability wasn't a team requirement, members told police

By JOHN KEILMAN
Chicago Tribune

A Northwestern University rower who drowned in April after being ejected from his racing boat told a teammate a few days before his death that he couldn't swim, according to an Illinois State Police report.

The report into Mohammed Ramzan's death, released to the Tribune under a Freedom of Information Act request, also quotes several team members as saying they didn't have to pass a swim test before being allowed on the water — even though they, like most rowers, didn't wear flotation devices.

That is contrary to safety guidelines published by USRowing, the sport's governing body, that call for participants to demonstrate their swimming ability. A Northwestern spokesman said the team has since instituted a "safety exam" for its members but would not say whether that includes a swim test.

Ramzan, a 19-year-old freshman, had rowed with the team only a few times before reporting for practice on the North Shore Channel the morning of April 10, the report says. He was on an eight-rower boat with other novices, their coach traveling nearby in a motorized launch.

The team was finishing its final training set when the blade of Ramzan's oar entered the water incorrectly, causing the handle to snap back on him. The force of the blow apparently knocked him out of the boat, the report says; investigators later found an abrasion on the right side of his face.

Some teammates said they saw him briefly bob at the surface before disappearing. The coach and another rower leaped into the cold, murky water but were unable to find him. Rescue divers found his body about 12 hours later at the bottom of the 10-foot-deep channel.

Getting struck by an oar is known as "catching a crab," and it's not an unusual occurrence in the sport. One club member told police that just one week before Ramzan's death, a "female rower was ejected from a rig, hit her head and suffered a concussion."

Still, several rowers said the club did not require swimming ability. A Northwestern coxswain who was on the water that morning said Ramzan had told her two or three days earlier that he couldn't swim. "(The coxswain) stated it seemed like an off-handed comment," the report says. "(She) stated she did not think much about it because it is so rare for someone to fall in the water."

Team members gave varying answers about what was supposed to happen if a rower fell into the water, with some saying the coach was supposed to respond, and others that there was no established protocol.

"(A rower) stated ... it was assumed people would assist the person," an investigator wrote.

Rowing is a student-managed sport at Northwestern, but university spokesman Alan Cabbage said the department of athletics and recreation reviewed the club's safety practices after Ramzan's death.

"Following the review, Northwestern Crew implemented a series of actions to further enhance the safety of participants, including additional training for team members and coaches, requiring members wishing to practice on water or compete at regattas to view safety videos and requiring members to pass a safety exam," he said.

He declined to comment further. A member of Ramzan's family did not respond to messages seeking comment.

The report says neither Ramzan nor his teammates wore life vests, though the coach's boat carried several. Some of the rowers told police that wearing flotation devices would restrict their mobility.

USRowing did not immediately comment, but the organization has previously said its swim test provision is only a recommendation.

Marc Messing, an EMT in Ithaca, N.Y., who publishes a blog on rowing safety, said it's time for the guideline to become an iron-clad rule.

He said clubs should have to declare that they follow safety rules — including the administration of swimming tests — before being allowed to compete in USRowing-sanctioned events. Without that, he said, what he believes is a blase approach toward safety will continue.

"The prevailing attitude has been that there hasn't been a (drowning) death in decades, the issue is overblown," he said. "That's what we hear over and over again ... without any deeper thought to the data that exist."

POLICE BLOTTER

The following items were taken from the Niles Police Department reports. An arrest does not constitute a finding of guilt. Only a court of law can make that determination.

block of Keystone Avenue, Chicago, who was charged with driving without a valid license. Another passenger, identified as Kelly J. Bussey, 41, of the 5400 block of North Christiana Avenue, Chicago, was charged with possession of methamphetamine, according to police. ## Police: Push for residents to 'say something' leads to arrest

Man suspected in multiple Morton Grove burglaries

BY BRIAN L. COX
Pioneer Press

Morton Grove police are crediting an alert resident with leading them to a man charged with breaking into numerous vehicles and garages in the suburb, authorities said Aug. 25.

Christopher Stachon-Groblowy, 23, of Niles, was charged Aug. 24 with multiple felonies including burglary, theft and possession of controlled substances, police said in a news release.

According to police, officers working the midnight shift were able to nab Stachon-Groblowy after a homeowner reportedly saw him acting suspiciously and entering a garage.

The homeowner confronted Stachon-Groblowy — who ran away, said police.

According to the release, officers responding to a 911 call searched the area and found Stachon-Groblowy "hiding behind Hynes School and in possession of numerous items that he could not account for."

He was arrested in the 9000 block of Belleforte Avenue, the release states.

Police identified numerous vehicles and garages that had allegedly been entered by Stachon-Groblowy and were also able to identify the owners of the recovered property, according to the release.

Morton Grove police praised the homeowner who noticed what was considered suspicious activity and then called 911. The actions, police said in the release, were in line with their call for residents to be engaged in crime prevention efforts:

Stachon-Groblowy

"See Something, Say Something."

As of Aug. 28, Stachon-Groblowy was being held in Cook County Jail. He is scheduled to appear in court again Sept. 7, according to information from the Cook County Sheriff's Office.

Police arrest man who allegedly shot into air while driving

BY JENNIFER JOHNSON
Pioneer Press

A 19-year-old man has been arrested for allegedly shooting a gun into the air multiple times in a residential neighborhood, Niles police announced in a news release.

Nico C. Campus, of the 10000 block of Linda Lane in unincorporated Maine Township near Des Plaines, was charged Aug. 23 with reckless discharge of a firearm and aggravated unlawful use of a weapon in connection with an incident reported the previous week, police said.

Bond was set at $50,000 for Campus during a hearing Aug. 24 at the Skokie courthouse.

According to the release, shortly before 9:30 p.m., Aug. 17, officers responded to the 7200 block of Greenleaf Avenue, where a man reported hearing three gunshots in the area.

The man provided police with surveillance video that authorities said showed the driver of a car discharging a handgun into the air as his passenger exited the vehicle on Greenleaf Avenue near Harlem Avenue and walked down the street.

As the car drove west on Greenleaf Avenue, the driver fired two more rounds from his gun, police said.

Using information gathered from the car's passenger and narrowing down a list of his "known associates," detectives identified Campus as a person of interest, said Niles police Cmdr. Robert Tornabene.

Police began conducting surveillance on Campus' home, where he was taken into custody, police said.

Campus was shooting into the air on the night of Aug. 17 and was not targeting anyone, Tornabene said.

"This is nothing the public was at risk for," he said. "This was a very isolated incident."

At the time of Campus' arrest, police had not located the gun that was believed to have been used, Tornabene said.

Campus did not have a Firearm Owners Identification card, he added.

During their investigation, detectives did not find anything to suggest Campus has a gang affiliation, Tornabene said.

Campus is scheduled to appear in court again Sep. 19, according to information on the Cook County Sheriff's website.

VOLO AUTO MUSEUM PHOTOS

Trump Cadillac limo finds home at Volo Auto Museum

Chicago Tribune

The Volo Auto Museum's latest acquisition is a 1988 Cadillac limousine, and its allure is not so much that the car has its own fax machine as who its owner was.

Donald Trump, nearly three decades from becoming president, planned to market the luxurious stretch limos with the Trump brand, but the deal fell through. One of the prototypes now has been acquired by the northwest suburban auto museum, which houses about 400 eclectic cars, many of which belonged to celebrities.

"We're not making a political statement one way or the other," museum director Brian Grams said in a news release.

The ride, with its golden

"Cadillac Trump Series" hood ornament, is equipped with a television, VCR (remember, it was the '80s), three telephones (one in the front and two in the back), a paper shredder, an electric bar — and the fax machine. It also boasts "gold-plated and rosewood interior embellishments" and a roof that was raised for added headroom, according to the release.

According to Grams and published reports, the future president made a deal with Cadillac to produce the Trump-branded, limited-edition limousines and was going to purchase the first 50 but never followed through with the order after purchasing the first two, one for his father.

The Volo museum has paperwork as well as brochures featuring Trump that were developed for marketing the never-produced line, according to the museum release.

Grams said one of the two prototypes sold at auction in England for $72,000, leading Grams to wonder what happened to the second car.

He said it was found in private ownership. It was parked indoors with just 21,000 miles on it. He bought it from the daughter of its now-deceased second owner, according to the release, which did not include the price of the sale.

He plans to feature it within a week in the museum's Cars of the Rich and Famous exhibit.

"It's definitely another historical find," Grams said. "We're sure visitors will be intrigued."

This 1988 Cadillac limousine is now owned by the Volo Auto Museum. Donald Trump, nearly three decades from becoming president, planned to market the luxurious stretch limos with the Trump brand, but the deal fell through.

Oakton starts year, with students paying more

Will pay $136.25 per semester hour, a 10-percent hike

BY GENEVIEVE BOOKWALTER
Pioneer Press

The fall semester started Aug. 21 at Oakton Community College — the first time in recent years with the state having a budget in place — and students will have to shell out more to take classes there.

Tuition is increasing again this year at the state-run, two-year college following the budget impasse that ended this past spring. But officials said state money for the 2017-18 school year has been received and stopgap measures should not be necessary to cover previously missed funding from Springfield.

Students will pay $136.25 per credit hour starting this fall semester, said Oakton College spokesman Paul Palian. That cost is up from the $123.25 per credit hour charged during the 2016-17 academic year.

The decision to increase tuition each of the next two years was made in March 2016 in the middle of what turned out to be a two-year state budget impasse. After a new state spending plan was passed in July, Palian said the only other change this year is to eliminate a child care lab on the Des Plaines campus that duplicated similar efforts in child research on the Skokie campus.

That cut was “the only funding-related thing we had happen” so far this year, Palian said.

Oakton Community College trustees previously approved a $119.7 million budget for the school’s fiscal year 2018, which was more than $1.3 million less than the $121 million for FY17, according to college financial information.

MIKE ISAACS/PIONEER PRESS

The fall semester started Aug. 21 at Oakton Community College, including at the Skokie campus, pictured. This was the first school year in more than two years that classes began with the state having a budget in place.

Cost savings trustees budgeted, according to the financial information, included not funding nearly two dozen vacant positions at the college, with an anticipated savings of $1 million.

The college also plans to keep this school year’s utility costs about the same as FY17, which could mean another $86,000 in savings.

While the state’s public elementary and high school districts continue to wait on money from Springfield, Oakton and other colleges report having already received some — if not all — of their state funds.

That’s good news for the Oakton Community College Educational Foundation, the college’s fundraising arm, which earlier this year approved spending more than $1.3 million to cover scholarships and grants for 2017-18.

The foundation chipped in at least the last two academic years when the state announced that Monetary Award Program funds would not be disbursed for thousands of low-income Illinois students attending state colleges and universities.

The foundation money approved included $500,000 in “endowed and restricted scholarships” and $375,000 to help cover about half of the MAP grants awarded to Oakton students in case the state halted that money again, according to a statement from the college released in May.

The money set aside for MAP grants this academic year was an increase over the $225,000 spent to cover the awards from the 2016-17 school year, which was during the budget impasse, according to the statement.

“It’s an honor for us to continue to support Oakton’s mission of student success,” Mary Knight, executive director of development, said in the May statement. “Impacting student persistence by awarding scholarships and covering MAP grant funding is one of the highest priorities of the Oakton Educational Foundation.”

Illinois got a budget in July after going 736 days without one.

Republican Gov. Bruce Rauner vetoed the Democrat-backed spending plan that included an income tax increase, but the Legislature voted successfully July 6 to override his veto.

SHAUN JOHNSON 1960-2017

Noted for coordinating Obama's 2014 visit to NU

BY GENEVIEVE BOOKWALTER
Pioneer Press

Northwestern University police Cmdr. Shaun Johnson, 57, died Aug. 9 after a battle with cancer, university police officials said.

A member of the Northwestern police force since 1989, Johnson, of Gurnee, rose from officer to sergeant, then became a lieutenant before being named commander of emergency preparedness, said Northwestern police Chief Bruce Lewis.

"Shaun's contributions had a significant impact on keeping Northwestern prepared for any type of natural, technological, terrorism or health crisis. Shaun worked closely with the campus community, as well as Evanston police and Evanston fire, to upgrade our emergency preparedness plans," Lewis said.

A high point of Johnson's career was when he served as the principal planner who coordinated police and other agencies as they prepared for former President Barack Obama's campus visit in 2014, Lewis said.

The day went so well, Lewis said, that Johnson was commended by members of Obama's Secret Service detail.

Johnson also stood out for his work developing an "extensive firearms training program, including simulated scenario training to ensure that officers can make critical decisions in stressful situations," among other efforts, Lewis said.

The Northwestern commander was recognized in the greater Evanston community as well.

Evanston police Cmdr. Joseph Dugan paid his regards to Johnson.

"His death is sad and untimely," Dugan said. "He served the Northwestern University and the Evanston community with dignity, and was a consummate professional. We had an excellent working relationship with Cmdr. Johnson. It was an honor and privilege to work with him, he attended our weekly deployment meetings, coordinated many emergency preparedness drills. ... He was a true representative of not only the Northwestern University Police Department, but also law enforcement as a whole."

Outside of work, Lewis recalled Johnson's work as an adviser to ROTC students at Northwestern. The commander prided himself as a Renaissance man, Lewis said, "and found fulfillment in photography, scuba diving and spending time with his family."

"Shaun will be deeply missed and forever remembered as a kind and generous friend to the entire Northwestern community," Lewis said.

Services are scheduled for Sept. 9 at Gages Lake Bible Church, 18788 W. Gages Lake Road in Gages Lake. A visitation will precede the service.

Local districts welcome students for start of 2017-18 school year

BY MIKE ISAACS

Several Niles Township elementary schools welcomed thousands of students for the first day of classes last week under clear skies and mild temperatures — as if the perfect back-to-school weather had been ordered up.

"This is the best part of my day," said Culver School Principal Peggie Maniscalco of Niles School District 71, waiting Aug. 23 for the first buses to arrive for the school's 7:55 a.m. start. "Truly, this is the best part of my day. I love it. It's a great way to start your day, see the kids, and I get lots of hugs."

As if on cue, minutes later children were filing off of buses and delivering high-fives and hugs to the principal, who said she has been with the district for 18 years.

Students were welcomed back Aug. 22 at Skokie-Fairview School District 72.

Morton Grove School District 70, Lincolnwood's East Prairie School District 73 and Lincolnwood School District 74, and Skokie/Morton Grove School District 69 all started the new school year Aug. 23.

Classes resumed Aug. 24 at Skokie School District 68.

Aug. 23 marked the first day for students at Skokie School District 73.5.

Some schools began their return with half or partial days, but not Culver.

Maniscalco said she is not a big believer in that.

"I'm of the belief that let's just get into it, get them used to it, and we can ease them into the routine inside the school," she said.

Maniscalco was not the only one waiting for the buses in Niles Wednesday morning. So, too, were Culver seventh graders Yanna Grammas and Sofia Ziatkovic, but they were ready to board them and head to Niles West High School for an honors algebra class.

Grammas said she looks forward to seeing people again on the first day of school but not to summer ending. Still, she said, starting school as a full day makes more sense to her because the day is "pretty easy," she said.

Many Niles Township districts held social events prior to the opening of school so that children are eased back into school life, educators said.

Typical of such events was a Popsicle Social held Aug. 21 at District 68's Highland School in Skokie. Families spread across the Highland playground where Popsicles were handed out. Some children met their teachers for the first time, others headed straight for the playground to continue their summer fun.

"It's much better than just showing up and not knowing anyone," said Raluca Brandusa, parent of second grader Luca Serac. "It reduces the anxiety of the kids. He loves this. It's a sense of community."

"This event has been going on for only three years," said Daniel Galvin, whose wife, Katie, was a volunteer, handing out the treats. "It's really nice because it gives children a chance to be at the school and see some of their friends and meet some of their teachers before the bell officially rings."

The Galvins said they especially appreciate easing kids into school this year since they have four of them — all of whom are attending Highland.

Summer 'play dates' find a following

By KYRA SENESE
Pioneer Press

The Lincolnwood Parks and Recreation Department turned several Thursdays into pop-up play dates with the community, hosting again this summer the program that last year garnered state recognition.

The Community Park Play Dates program ran June 22 through Aug. 10.

The program received an "Outstanding Program" award from the Illinois Park and Recreation Association last year, and organizers are actively planning ways to add to the event lineup next year.

"We're always trying to look for new and different ways to reach out to the community," said Lincolnwood Marketing and Community Outreach Coordinator Linda Vering.

The play dates were open to children of all ages and allowed them to do such activities as create pipe cleaner paintings and make sand art, as well as play games like Sharks and Minnows. There was also time allotted to allow the children to enjoy simply play with each other on the playground.

The play dates were held at different parks each time and were offered free of charge, organizers said.

Vering explained that though the program incurred costs, it was important to the organizers that the program be free, like the village's summer concert series and Halloween events.

"We wanted this to be (free) so we know people don't have to worry about even bringing a couple dollars with them," she said. "They can just come as they are and show up and have fun."

Vering said the idea to bring the play dates program to Lincolnwood was appealing because the village has 13 parks. Having the event at a different one each time offered a variety of spaces for children of all ages to enjoy the outdoors and allowed parents to mingle and visit different parts of town.

"We thought, 'How fun would it be to just go out and meet people right in their neighborhood park?' That encourages people who don't live in that neighborhood to visit a different area they're not familiar with and bring people together from different walks, religions, races and gather in the park," Vering said.

"To be outside, running around, playing, talking to each other and actually engaging is something you can't take for granted anymore," she added. "Any opportunity to do that is well worth doing."

$148M awarded to Vernon Hills woman in O'Hare bus shelter collapse

Dance student Tierney Darden paralyzed in 2015

BY STEPHEN SCHMADEKE AND MARY WISNIEWSKI
Chicago Tribune

A Cook County jury on Aug. 23 awarded $148 million to a suburban woman who was partially paralyzed by a collapsing O'Hare International Airport bus shelter during an August storm two years ago.

Tierney Darden, 26, of Vernon Hills, the woman injured by the falling shelter, held her left hand up to her face and cried as Judge Clare McWilliams read the jury's decision in a downtown Chicago Daley Center courtroom. The trial lasted seven days and the jury deliberated four hours.

"Tierney was truly a victim of wrongful conduct by the city at O'Hare, resulting in the shelter causing a devastating injury to her," her attorney, Patrick Salvi, told reporters outside the courtroom. "We're very, very grateful that the jury recognized the severity of her injury and the long road that she has ahead of her."

The $148 million verdict is the largest against the city in a personal injury case, according to a spokeswoman for the Salvi, Schostok & Pritchard law firm.

On the afternoon of Aug. 2, 2015, Darden, then a dance student, was standing with her mother and 19-year-old sister outside the airport on a lower-level street that accesses Terminal 2, according to the law firm.

The three women had just returned to Chicago from Minneapolis, where they were shopping for bridesmaid dresses for an upcoming wedding, Darden's lawyers said. A storm rolled through the area as the women were waiting to be picked up, and a pedestrian shelter came loose and fell onto Darden.

Darden's spinal cord was severed, and she was left paralyzed from the waist down, her lawyers said. Before the incident, Darden had lived independently in Chicago and was attending Truman College.

She now lives in Vernon Hills with her father, according to the law firm.

It was determined the shelter that injured Tierney had missing bolts, Darden's lawyers said. An investigation later found other shelters at O'Hare were poorly maintained, with missing bolts, corroded parts or broken brackets, her lawyers said.

The city of Chicago admitted liability for the conduct that caused Darden's injuries, her lawyers said. The trial was to determine damages only.

The city did not have an immediate comment on the verdict.

Area police to step up traffic enforcement over weekend

BY KYRA SENESE
Pioneer Press

As people enjoy barbecues, splash in public pools and partake in other activities over the holiday weekend that marks the unofficial end of summer, police in area towns have announced they will be on the watch for impaired and distracted drivers and other scofflaws.

As Labor Day approaches, the Lincolnwood and Morton Grove police say they will increase traffic enforcement plans throughout the remaining days of August and during the holiday weekend.

Officials at both police departments say they will each collaborate with the Illinois Department of Transportation to enforce proper seat belt use and keeping intoxicated individuals off the roadways.

"Our goal is to advance public awareness regarding both motorists and passengers wearing seat belts and to refrain from operating motor vehicles while impaired," Lincolnwood police Sgt. Justin Lauria said in a news release.

Plans include several concentrated patrols to be carried out throughout the heightened enforcement period.

Morton Grove police call their plan "The Labor Day 2017 Impaired Driving and Occupant Protection Mobilization," and stressed in a news release that there will be "aggressive" DUI enforcement.

Why I'm going public as a Taylor Swift fan

RANDY BLASER

I've always liked to joke that I'm a closet Taylor Swift fan, but after her recent victory in a trial about whether a former DJ groped her, I feel I must go public with my admiration of the pop star.

That she is an amazing young woman there is no doubt. She's combined what, in my opinion, are mostly average songs (some being very good) with an average voice and a highly curated look, and has made gobs of money.

Her young fans are devoted to her. They wait breathlessly for her new music. They try to deduce meaning from her songs that appear to me to have none beyond the latest breakup with her various boyfriends.

They hang on her every song and every performance. They connect with her and admire her.

And that's why I think what she has done is so important.

Here's a superstar that could easily stay away from controversy. She could easily stay away from the publicity. She could walk away from the incident and get on with her life. Swift was only 23 when the sex assault occurred.

But she didn't. And I like to think she didn't because she knows she is an example to so many young girls who admire her and want to be like her.

Through Swift's example, perhaps girls and young women will have more confidence and strength to press for charges when something like that happens to them. Maybe they'll have the courage to do what Swift has done, to hold their assailants accountable for their actions.

If you missed what happened in the wake of President Trump's latest controversy, Russia, Charlottesville, Va., and the eclipse, let me fill you in.

After giving a concert in Denver in June 2013, Swift met backstage for pictures including one with a local radio station's DJ. During the photo op, Swift claimed the DJ grabbed her on her rear end. Swift's security team soon accused the DJ of groping the star, and he was subsequently fired from his job.

The DJ then sued Swift for damages, claiming her wrongful accusation led to his firing and loss of income. Swift then countersued, which resulted in the trial earlier this month.

The jury found in favor of the pop star and awarded her $1.

During testimony, the DJ claimed he was trying to reach around Swift and maybe touched her rib. I've seen the photo that was taken of the group and the DJ's hand is nowhere near Swift's rib. As a matter of fact, his hand is placed where no self-respecting gentleman would ever put his hand when posing with a young woman.

During her testimony, Swift was a star witness, clear and confident about what happened, and how she was not responsible for the consequences that befell the DJ from his bad behavior.

After the trial, she said she would soon be making donations to organizations that help sexual assault victims defend themselves.

That's why I think what she's doing is great. And that's why I've gone public as a real fan.

I'm not going to start attending her concerts or breathlessly await her new albums.

But she's OK.

New distracted walking law is a step in the right direction

PAUL SASSONE

Is there a limit to sympathy?

Can (or should) we feel sympathy for everyone to whom something bad happens?

I find I run out of sympathy when it comes to people who injure themselves as a result of thoughtless, foolish or self-destructive behavior. You know, the daily news items about someone who is hurt while performing some dangerous stunt.

There is too much suffering of innocent people in the world for me to feel for the terminally stupid.

With an attitude like this you'd expect me to be overjoyed by a law passed in Honolulu. Dubbed the Distracted Walking Law, it becomes an offense on Oct. 25 to walk while texting. Other means of distracted walking — using laptops, digital cameras and video games — also are covered by the law. Fines for the first offense will be $15 to $35; second offense $35 to $75; third offense in one year $75 to $99.

The problem with this law is it probably won't work.

Laws are not observed because of police officers, lawyers or judges. Laws work because most people decide to obey them. Not that everyone gets together and decides to obey this or that law. There is some kind of osmotic subconscious process in which all of us decide this or that law is a Good Thing. This is why all — or most — drivers stop at a red light.

But there are laws that just won't work because people refuse to obey them. Prohibition is the most famous example of such a law. Americans refused to stop drinking. And the authorities couldn't — and sometimes just wouldn't — enforce the law.

In our own time, talking or texting on the phone while driving is another law few people observe and for which there is little enforcement.

I also believe speed limits have become laws that few observe any more.

So, I hold out little hope for Honolulu's Distracted Walking Law.

There are just too many distracted walkers out there. I see them every time I leave the house. You do, too. If these distracted walkers hurt themselves, well, they have no one to blame but themselves. And as far as I am concerned, they can feel sorry for themselves.

Despite all this, though, I applaud Honolulu's law.

We should always try to do what is right and hope for the best.

Honolulu's law isn't a cure, but it is a help.

And it's the right thing to do.

Paul Sassone is a freelance columnist.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

A new Honolulu law, set to take effect Oct. 25, makes texting, using a digital camera and even playing a video game while walking all offenses subject to fines.

Labor Day reminds us about importance of trade workers

PAT LENHOFF

I don't know about you, but for me this summer flew by. If asked how long ago Father's Day was, my personal atomic clock would probably say about four weeks.

Like it or not, almost all of summer has actually passed and we are now preparing to celebrate Labor Day while gearing up for school days, autumn's arrival and a return to routine.

In past columns, we've discussed the contemporary meaning of Labor Day and labor itself. I have written about questions like how relevant labor unions and organizations are in today's working world and even suggestions that labor unions might have become a detriment rather than benefit to members.

A recent article I saw in the Tribune spoke to the big picture of this issue, verbalizing a perspective I'd often contemplated and discussed here.

Our returning students, in high school especially, will be inundated with a college prep curriculum that has been the focus ever since my own kids were in high school more than 20 years ago. Gone or greatly diminished are the hands-on classes like shop and mechanics, which offered glimpses into alternate career choices to students whose skill set was more suited to those types of jobs.

If your student didn't aspire to gain entry into the best college possible, something was wrong. A college degree was the ultimate, and expected, finish to the academic passage.

Now, according to this

ARMANDO L. SANCHEZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

article, people with skills in areas like carpentry, plumbing and electrical are becoming increasingly hard to find.

Add in the retirement of one generation of skilled workers, accompanied by the reduced influx of young trade professionals to replace them, and you've got a troubling problem developing. Somewhere along the way, a majority of kids were convinced that college was the only acceptable way. We now see the repercussions of that: a reduced field of skilled experts.

The article went on to call upon labor unions, which have often been called functionally obsolete by some, to increase their visibility to those young students. I agree wholeheartedly. What I think needs to go hand-in-hand with that is a general shift in public attitude to value more highly those skilled specialty careers.

If schools initiate that effort and reintroduce course offerings of some of those trades, not only would it expose kids to more career options, but it would validate the concept that all careers, not just college-related white-collar careers, are vital to society.

My household has survived many a remodeling and renovation project, and each time we get into the thick of one I am reminded of how amazing the technicalities involved in carpentry, plumbing and electrical work can be. I also remember that even though I am the uber-preparer, there are innumerable important details I miss that could seriously harm the project.

The skills of those workers will always be necessary. We need to both value and encourage careers in those fields just as much as a college degree.

On eating rat pie and statues of Bobby Lee

SCOTT REEDER

Whose freedom do you think they were dying for?

No one wants to believe their ancestors died and sacrificed for something as reprehensible as the right to own another human being. But they did.

Grandma, on the other hand, didn't see things that way. She was proud of our ancestor's service to the Confederacy and pointed out that he was just a teenager when he wore the gray uniform and that life was so rough that he was reduced to eating "rat pie."

No one wants to believe their ancestors died and sacrificed for something as reprehensible as the right to own another human being. But they did.

Well, I don't doubt that John Beckerdite was a young man caught up in a maelstrom of violence far bigger than himself. But that can be said of most any soldier in most any war.

With the violence in Charlottesville, Va., it seems the whole nation once again is contemplating the Civil War. And, yes, just like when I was a kid, it's about a monument.

Only now, the monument isn't about an individual soldier's grave. It's about large public memorials to generals and other leaders.

In Charlottesville, Nazis, Klansmen and other white supremacists were hot under the collar because that city is going to remove a statue of Robert E. Lee. By the time the day was through, an innocent young woman was dead and 19 other people were injured.

I can't help but wonder why more than 150 years after the War Between the States we are still arguing about it.

So, I called up Civil War historian Edward H. Bonekemper III, who wrote, "The Myth of the Lost Cause: Why the South Fought the Civil War and Why the North Won."

His answer was straightforward, "This country has a race problem. You don't see us this divided over the causes of the Revolutionary War or World War II. But the causes of the Civil War are all about slavery. And because this country has a race problem, it really hasn't come to terms with why the Civil War was fought, yet."

It's hard to argue with that logic.

After all, if it wasn't about race, why would neo-Nazis, Ku Klux Klan members and other white supremacists care about a statue of General Lee?

When Social Security won't cut it, ladies become 'Old Ringers'

BY MYRNA PETLICKI
Pioneer Press

Money is short for four women of a certain age in "Old Ringers." They use their gift of gab to make ends meet by opening a phone sex service in the Chicago premiere of Joe Simonelli's comedy at James Downing Theatre in Edison Park.

Director Rhys Read was attracted to this project because, "It's really funny and it's got some very meaty roles for older women. It's a warm show, too."

The "ring" leader Diane, who devised the scheme, is played by Mary Ellen Sanchez of Edison Park. "Diane grew up in the Bronx, she's had some hard times, like a lot of women, and she's overcome a lot of them, trying to be strong and independent, and raising a daughter by herself," Sanchez said.

Diane is struggling financially because her Social Security has been cut. "She's 65 years old and kinda feeling her age," Sanchez said. "On the other hand, she's still having a relationship with a guy and sex is an important part of life and she can still enjoy that part of life."

Diane was inspired to create that phone sex service after answering a wrong number and discovering the caller was willing to pay $50 for a sexy five-minute conversation. The next step was convincing the other three women to join her in the enterprise. Diane's persuasive powers work on the trio of fellow seniors, played by Christine Podgorski of Park Ridge (Verna), Julie Mitre (Kathy Ann) and Arlene Arnone Bibbs (Rose).

Brittany Rodda plays Diane's daughter Amanda, a 30-something virgin who is a born-again Christian. "She's very polite, very righteous," Rodda said. "She's entitled a little bit to believe in what she only believes in and tries to force that onto others."

Obviously, she would not welcome a phone sex service in her home. On the other hand, "There's a side of her that wants to break through," Rodda said. "She wants to find someone who shares the same beliefs, shares the same ideals, and that she can fully love."

She thinks, mistakenly, that a detective named Tony (Mark Myers) may meet those requirements.

"He's someone who used to be a ladies' man but it seems like he wasn't very assertive, so he became a police officer to kind of toughen up," Myers said. "He's at a point in his life where he wants to leave those ladies' man days behind him and may be find someone to settle down with. That's when he meets Amanda."

This role is a comfortable fit for Myers, who said, "I've been a police officer or a soldier in almost every single thing I've done."

Diane's live-in boyfriend is played by Tom Krettler. "Harry's a happy-go-lucky guy," the actor said. "I feel that Diane and I are two souls that found each other. We're friends, we're lovers. I enjoy the dialogue we have."

His relationship isn't quite as warm with Diane's daughter. "She's a religious person and she kind of looks at me as someone who debauched her mother," Krettler said.

Considering Diane's budding enterprise, it's obvious she is no innocent.

Retired teacher still pursues culinary arts

By Judy Buchenot
Naperville Sun

While working as a culinary arts teacher at Geneva High School, Naperville resident Kathy Jankovic took pride in being up to date on cooking trends.

Before retiring a few years ago, she taught all of the foods classes at the high school. She found that many students had an interest in cooking as a career due to the many culinary themed shows on television. "Food Network was my best friend," she said.

Jankovic ran several programs to help students explore cooking careers. "Culinary Corner was like a fast food business. We made pizza, sandwiches, cookies and other things to sell," she said.

The other program, Restaurant 304, was a class where students created a menu and took orders from faculty, students and others in the community. The meals could be carry-out or eaten in a makeshift restaurant at the school.

This class also did catering for local residents and community organizations, like the Geneva History Museum's annual fundraiser. Jankovic coached students through cooking competitions, and several students won awards at the state level.

Jankovic won her own recognition in 2010 when she was named the Illinois Family and Consumer Sciences Teacher of the Year.

Many of Jankovic's students have become culinary professionals and she enjoys hearing from them. "I have a former student who is a pastry chef in Colorado and she takes a ski lift to work every day because she works on top of a mountain."

Jankovic truly practices what she teaches and loves spending time in her kitchen. She takes advantage of plentiful summer produce by canning tomatoes and making salsa and pie filling.

"I give the pie filling away as Christmas gifts," she said. This year's batch of filling is strawberry rhubarb made with rhubarb that Jankovic grows in her yard.

One secret she has learned for making canned pie filling is to use a product called Clear Jel, a modified food starch that can withstand the high temperature needed to process the jars. "There are two varieties — an instant and one that is cooked. For canning, you need the one that is cooked," she said.

Jankovic used to be able to find the product at area stores but now can only find it online at sites including Amazon. "It really works better than any other thickener. I use it for blueberry filling, apple filling and now strawberry rhubarb."

Canning tomatoes is another one of her summer tasks. "Canning isn't hard," said

JUDY BUCHENOT/NAPERVILLE SUN

Kathy Jankovic checks on the progress of garden tomatoes in anticipation of making her favorite marinara sauce.

Kathy's Culinary Cue

Never put tomatoes in the refrigerator unless you have sliced them. Just keep them on the counter until ready to use. If the tomato no longer has a stem, store it stem side down and it will stay fresh longer.

Jankovic, who teaches several canning classes for community groups. "It is just time-consuming."

She has a neighbor with a prolific green thumb who supplies her with a bumper crop of her two favorite varieties, Roma and San Marzano. "They are both plum tomatoes which are meatier. Slicing tomatoes are juicier and can be used for sauce but aren't as good."

Jankovic begins her canning by peeling the tomatoes. "I get water to a boil and then on the blossom end of the tomato, not the stem end, I cut a small X. Then the tomatoes go into the hot water for about 30 to 60 seconds. Then I put them in ice water. The skins then just slide off."

She cores the tomatoes and they are ready to be packed into jars. She prefers to can them whole but said they can also be cut up. "Tomato varieties grown today are less acidic so you need to add 1 tablespoon of lemon juice per pint. It has to be bottled lemon juice too because the acidity is controlled in bottled lemon juice."

Jankovic recently read about someone who dries the tomato skins to make into tomato powder for cooking.

"I am going to look into that more," she said.

When processing the jars, she said a rolling boil means that the bubbles don't break and can't be stopped by stirring. "You don't start timing until the rolling boil is there," Jankovic said.

After processing the tomatoes in a water bath canner, she allows the jars to sit on the counter for 24 hours. "You can store the jars with or without the rings, but I take the rings off because they sometimes can rust."

She uses the tomatoes to make a variety of things, including her favorite Salsa di Pomodoro, a rich marinara sauce.

"It is so nice on a cold day in December to be able to take out a jar of these garden tomatoes and make something good to eat," Jankovic said.

She shares her recipe for strawberry rhubarb filling for canning as well as her marinara sauce recipe. The marinara sauce can be canned if desired.

3. In another bowl, mix together the strawberries and rhubarb. Pour sugar, water and Clear Jel mixture over all and fold together gently.
4. Pour mixture into a clean quart jar, being sure to leave ½ inches head space. Process for 30 minutes at a full rolling boil. Cool, clean jars and store until ready to use. Fills one 9 inch pie. *Purchase online or at specialty stores.

In her quest to find out what makes people happy (and write a book on the matter), comedian Paula Poundstone discovered that the digital era surely complicates things.

Human interaction is what brings long-lasting happiness, she concludes in her book "The Totally Unscientific Study of the Search For Human Happiness," and yet a Pew Research Center study showed that 89 percent of Americans used a cellphone during their most recent social gathering. Digital devices, it seems, are everywhere you look.

"I was in New York City for a couple days and couldn't get over how many people are walking around with headsets," Poundstone says. "These people have chosen to live in a city packed with people, then they go through the trouble of avoiding people."

For Poundstone, the pervasiveness of modern-day electronics has affected her personally. She talks in her book about her 19-year-old son's digital addiction.

"Thomas just wouldn't do anything other than play on his computer and phone. I'd lock digital devices up in my safe, but he'd outsmart me," she says. An avid gamer, he reached the point in which she couldn't even get him out of bed in the morning to go to school. "Little did I know he'd been up all night playing video games on a laptop that he'd been able to take home from his private school."

Is the digital era dooming younger generations, surrounded by devices practically from birth, to addiction?

Poundstone sought outside help. Thomas was sent to digital detox at Outback Therapeutic Expeditions, a wilderness therapy program for adolescents, then to a therapeutic high school, where no electronics are permitted and students live outdoors in tents.

Greg Burnham is clinical director at Outback, where teens come for eight to 10 weeks to live outdoors in a remote area of Utah in an electronics addiction treatment program called Unplugged.

"There's a clear change that happens in the brain when you're addicted to video games, which is what we mainly deal with," Burnham says. How much is too much? "If a kid's gaming or using social media more than six hours a day, I'd say they've crossed the line into something unhealthy."

Poundstone places the blame for this unhealthy behavior squarely on the shoulders of the gaming and social media corporations, which she sees as the modern-day equivalent of the tobacco industry. "They set out to make this addictive. The likes, the pace with which numbers come up on the screen makes it all more exciting and creates that reward."

For Peter Bradley, a licensed counselor at the Illinois Institute for Addiction Recovery, the similarities to gambling are obvious.

"Excessive amount of time doing the behavior, continuing despite negative consequences, there are even withdrawal symptoms when they discontinue use," Bradley says. "Kids will even say,

"Plenty of parents say their kids are addicted. I'd say most just have some bad habits."

— Devorah Heitner, author similar to gambling addicts, that they could actually make a living doing this. Sure, there's money to be made, but very few people will be successful at this. The goal of the problem gambler is to be successful. That's exactly what the goal is for the gamer."

Bradley shares the following advice with students in his Introduction to Addictions class at The Chicago School of Professional Psychology: "From the treatment standpoint, be aware that you're asking them to give up their peer group and social connections. Their online persona is likely completely different from the one in the real world, where they may not be the best athlete or most popular kid. To deny them that, you really have to tread carefully. What are you going to replace it with?"

Despite growing parental fears of how technology is taking over kids' lives, mental health and child development experts debate whether electronics overuse should be labeled an addiction.

"I'm very cautious about the word 'addiction.' My concern is what that word does to parents when it's in the headlines," says Chip Donohue, director of technology in the Early Childhood Center at Erikson Institute, a Chicago graduate school that focuses on child development. "Parents are given two messages today. One says you're a lousy parent if you let your kids have too much screen time. The other says if you don't get your kids started on this, they're going to be behind when they get to school."

A recent study by the center found that 85 percent of parents allow their children under age 6 to use technology in the home.

"We have to understand that this is the environment that young people are growing up in," Donohue says. "I'd rather focus my energy on how technology can be used effectively instead of putting negative labels on it."

Evanston-based media historian Devorah Heitner, author of "Screenwise: Helping Kids Thrive (And Survive) in Their Digital World," also sees the benefits of technology. "These kids are going to be designing the solutions to some of the world's biggest problems," she says.

Yet Heitner often hears parents' complaints at her workshops about raising kids in the digital age. "Plenty of parents say their kids are addicted. I'd say most just have some bad habits. It's no surprise that kids would rather text friends or play video games than do homework."

She encourages parents to focus on mentoring rather than monitoring their kids' electronics use, discussing the emotional hazards of social media and modeling good electronics habits to their children. In some extreme cases, though, families may need professional help, Heitner says.

"Every once in a while, I'll get a parent who tells me that if they try to take away their kid's device, (the child) might get violent," she says.

At this point, electronics addiction isn't listed as an official diagnosis in the American Psychiatric Association's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, which means it can be hard to get insurance coverage for treatment.

Regardless of the diagnostic label, Burnham hopes people will take the issue seriously.

"All I know is this behavior of electronics addiction is causing some people pain and destroying their lives," he says. "The long-term affects of electronics is yet to be seen. I think we need to be talking about it more, and parents need to be taught more skills on how to manage it early on."

MY PET WORLD

How to handle approaching dogs on a walk

By Cathy M. Rosenthal
Tribune Content Agency

Q: I have a 16-pound Havashu. We do not have a fenced yard, so she is walked several times a day. There are quite a few large dogs that we encounter on our walks through the neighborhood. Some are being walked and are leashed, and some are allowed loose. Sometimes, the people with the leashed dogs want our dogs to meet. If they are really large, I am reluctant because of the size difference. The loose dogs charge at us. I am afraid of large dogs (having been cornered by a pack as a child), so my fear transfers to my dog. What is the best course of action? Fortunately, at every encounter, the owner was nearby and came to our rescue, but I am afraid that one day we will meet a dog without its owner. Can you please advise me on what to do? — June P., Patchogue, N.Y.

A: I understand your fears. My dog and I were once cornered by two dogs without their owner. My dog fought them off trying to protect me and was injured. After that, we could not walk around the block without him feeling anxious about every passing dog.

Even if you haven't been cornered by a dog, it can be stressful to see a large, unleashed dog approaching you. Your dog will feel your tension through the leash, so whatever you can do to ease your fears, like deep breathing, can be helpful to you both.

There are only a handful of things you can do. You carry an umbrella, which when opened can serve as a barrier between you and the approaching dog. You can shake a can of coins, toss the can onto the street (never at the dog), or use a Pet Corrector, which emits compressed air, to startle a dog and hopefully stop them from coming any closer.

JOE RAEDLE/GETTY

When you come across people and pets who want to meet you and your dogs during your walk, it's OK to say, "No thanks." You are allowed to set boundaries for you and your dogs.

Another technique is to put your leashed dog behind you in a sit position, and stand in front of him, letting your dog know "you got this." Then, lean toward the approaching dog, yell "enough" as loudly as you can, and point outward over the dog indicating you want the dog to go away. Surprisingly, it works well in getting curious dogs (not aggressive dogs) to step back.

As for the people and pets who want to meet you, it's OK to say, "No thanks." You are allowed to set boundaries for you and your dog. Let me know how some of these strategies work for you.

Q: I have five inside cats, and feed three stray cats in my yard, which has woods behind it. I have been feeding these cats for five months. There have been others in the past that I have trapped, had neutered/spayed and rehomed.

The problem is, my family and I are moving to another town, and I am worried about these cats. I do not want to leave them, but I can't bring them with me as we are moving to a condo community. One cat appears feral, but the other two are cats that have been left on our block. One lets me pet him and has a tipped ear. I cannot touch the other two, even though one rolls on the ground and shows me his or her belly. I would appreciate any suggestions. — Kathy M., Sayville, N.Y.

A: How kind of you to take care of these community cats. I am glad to hear you get them fixed and find homes for the ones who are friendly. You are certainly doing your part to help animals.

There are two things I would do. First, it's always best to leave feral cats where they are, so call the local feral cat group and let them know you are moving to see if they have any volunteers in your area that can help feed these cats. Second, ask around your neighborhood to see if there is someone who might be willing to feed these cats after you move.

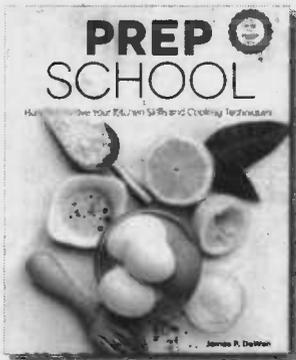

If you can't find anyone to take care of them, then these cats will have to find another food source, which may make them a nuisance in neighborhood trash cans. But if a neighbor agrees to feed them, then these cats will hardly be noticed in the neighborhood. Use this argument as your "selling point" for convincing someone to help.

Sometimes, the people moving into a new home are willing to take over this care too, if you ask them.

Job posting scam? Here's what to do

I am worried that I am a victim of a scam. I answered an ad for a quality manager on Indeed.com, which turned out to be a reshipping job where you work from your own home reshipping packages. I applied and was given several fast replies and requests for signatures to get me started working. After giving them all of my information on a W-4 form and signing a contract, I talked to someone at the company and didn't feel good about it. Something did not seem right, so I Googled them and got a lot of info regarding reshipping scams. I'm going to send them a letter stating that I'm no longer interested in employment with their company. What do I do about them having all of my personal information?

Priscilla, Chicago

I first contacted Indeed.com to ask what its policies and penalties are with regard to identifying scam job postings at its site. Company spokesperson Tara Lambropoulos sent this reply:

"Indeed has a team dedicated to the Search Quality effort that employs a variety of techniques to review job advertisements to determine their suitability. With millions of jobs appearing on Indeed every day, it is possible that a job may be posted which is improper in some way. Indeed reserves the right to remove any postings that do not meet our standards and we encourage job seekers to report any suspect job advertisements to us, or if they feel it necessary, to make a report to the police."

For additional advice, I turned to Alison Doyle, job search expert at TheBalance.com. Her biggest piece of advice was this: "The most important thing for job seekers to remember is that if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Carefully check out jobs and employers before you apply, if you have any doubt the position is legitimate. An easy way to do that is to search Google with the company name and the word 'scam.' If there are reports of scams, they should show up in the search results."

In response to Priscilla's question what

CATHY CUNNINGHAM
Help Squad

to do next, Doyle offered the following advice:

■ File a report with the Internet Crime Complaint Center (www.ic3.gov). IC3 is a joint effort between the FBI, National White Collar Crime Center and Bureau of Justice Assistance that accepts online internet crime complaints. In addition to your name and contact information, and the name and contact information of the suspected fraudulent company, you will have to provide a detailed description of how, why and when you think you were defrauded.

■ File a report with the Federal Trade Commission (www.ftccomplaintassistant.gov). The FTC collects complaints about companies, business practices and identity theft. In fact, specific to Priscilla's concerns, there is an alert box at the top of the FTC Complaint Assistant page that states, "Concerned about how a company is handling your personal information? Click here to report privacy concerns. (Use the Identity Theft category to report identity theft.)"

■ Report the company to the Better Business Bureau (www.bbb.org). You can search the BBB site for complaints.

■ Report a fraudulent website to Google (bit.ly/2xgPz0U).

Doyle offered these proactive pointers:

■ Do not pay money — for anything. Legitimate companies don't charge for software, work-at-home directories, advice on getting hired or anything else related to a job.

■ Be wary if a company contacts you out of the blue. It would be highly unusual to be offered an actual job without first conducting one or more interviews with a company representative(s).

■ Look for poorly written emails. Real companies hire pros who can write.

■ Never deposit a check then return or transfer money to another account under the pretext a check was written in excess of the amount you were owed. Such checks are almost always fake.

BOOKS

History books shed light on the past that is not past. Kelly J. Baker's "Gospel According to the Klan: The KKK's Appeal to Protestant America, 1915-1930" examines the "second incarnation" of the Klan, a time when the Robert E. Lee statue the white supremacists used as a pretext for protest was erected.

MARK WILSON/GETTY

History always remains with us

We can't change past, but our perception of it can and should change

By John Warner
Chicago Tribune

"You can't rewrite history" is perhaps the cliché I loathe the most.

When it comes to the way we intersect with history, I prefer Faulkner's stake: "The past is not dead. It's not even past."

No, you can't change what's already happened, but our assessment of events requires constant revision. The record of history is more of a process than a product, a quest to arrive at a more thorough understanding.

As we learn more about the natural world, we expect scientific knowledge to progress. So should history.

Because as Faulkner's observation shows, our history remains with us always, something brought home by the white supremacists marching in Charlottesville, Va., and chanting Nazi slogans.

Like many others, I was shaken by these events. These were not the impotent neo-Nazis marching in Skokie when I was a teenager and later lampooned by The Blues Brothers as ineffectual idiots. These were hundreds, perhaps thousands of young men apparently attracted to an evil ideology. This shouldn't be happening, and yet it is.

Thankfully, we have history books that shed light on the past that is not past.

Kelly J. Baker's "Gospel According to the Klan: The KKK's Appeal to Protestant America, 1915-1930" examines the "second incarnation" of the Klan, a period during which the Robert E. Lee statue the white supremacists used as a pretext for protest was erected.

Baker makes use of primary sources generated by the Klan itself that demonstrate a concerted effort to mainstream white nationalism as a kind of "Protestant value" and then extend its appeal beyond its white Christian base. It is a culture that remains obviously at work in today's society, as recent events make clear.

Kevin M. Kruse, professor of history at Princeton, has become an increasingly prominent expert on the effects of the Civil War on 20th-century history. Much of his work explores how the war and subsequent reconciliation did little to address the original sin of slavery.

Kruse's "White Flight: Atlanta and the Making of Modern Conservatism" takes a close look at Atlanta in the civil rights era, in some ways held up as a model of the times. But Kruse argues that "white flight" allowed for resegregation, which has been expressed through mainstream conservative causes, such as school vouchers and tax cuts. Pair this book with Richard Rothstein's "The Color of Law: A Forgotten History of How Our Government Segregated America" to see how what can look like economic political philosophies from the outside are inextricably entangled with issues of race.

And if you're wondering how an unabashed hedonist, congenital liar and multitime bankrupt television personality could've become president, I recommend Kruse's "One Nation Under God: How Corporate America Invented Christian America." Following FDR's New Deal, corporations and religious leaders joined forces in the quest for more power and cultural influence, leading to, in Kruse's argument, the religious right, which has been one of President Donald Trump's strongest sources of support.

Because history is constantly being revised, I don't suggest these books are infallible. I find them all interesting and persuasive, but others might find them provocative, even offensive.

But history should provoke, not just inform, by challenging our perceptions. Engaging with argument does not require agreement, merely open-mindedness.

John Warner is the author of "Tough Day for the Army."

3 a crowd for married couple and his sister

Marriage isn't easy. Just ask a married person. Even the happiest of couples have their issues. But can you imagine trying to maintain a healthy marriage with your sister-in-law living in the next room? That's the situation of this reader:

JACKIE PILOSSOPH
Love Essentially

Jackie, I've been with my husband for seven years, since the age of 20. I moved in with him three years ago while he and his sister lived together. I always expressed that I did not want to stay in the apartment with his sister for long, and hoped to move out together. I'm now 27 and we are still here. I'm fed up with this lifestyle. I want my own space and our own home. His sister often cooks and I feel obligated to be respectful. I don't bring friends over and I usually go out by myself. I have fallen out of love with my husband as I feel this has interfered with our intimacy. My husband is kind and he loves me, but he is antisocial. Lately I have pushed him away so much that he is angry, but I am as well. He wants a child, but there's no room for one. He just doesn't seem to understand that I want to experience life independently and free of family and in-laws! Any advice?

My gut reaction is that I feel sad for all of these roommates. Let's start with the sister. She sounds like she is in a comfort zone, and possibly socially dependent on her brother and sister-in-law. As for the couple, they seem like they have issues that go way beyond their living situation.

The husband is content with things as they are and likes staying in most of the time to enjoy his sister's home-cooked meals. He is feeling hurt that his wife is shutting him out, and is most likely angry and frustrated because she won't just accept living in his safety zone. I detect he might fear moving. Maybe it's fear of change or fear of the financials involved, or maybe he feels an obligation to his sister to stay. He also might be afraid that his wife is going to leave him, which could be the reason he wants a baby. As for the wife, she is feeling frustrated, unfulfilled in the marriage, and resentful for her husband's unwillingness to consider her unhappiness and make compromises.

The way I see it, this couple has two choices: make some changes or break up. This decision needs to start with some serious conversations that include brutal honesty — each one being completely transparent about what they really want.

There is a difference between bickering, harboring resentment, whining and making snide comments, and having a constructive discussion which includes listening to the other person. For example, the husband needs to be forthcoming about what is holding him back from moving out, and his wife needs to express her need to be more social as a couple. They might be wise to have these conversations in front of a therapist, who can help them communicate in a more productive way.

I will say that although I believe family to be of the utmost importance in life, and that we should take care of our loved ones and spend time with them, I also believe in boundaries, especially when it comes to marriage. A married couple need their own space, their own home.

Does that mean they should put the sister out on the street? Absolutely not, and the husband needs to make his marriage a top priority, and his sister should understand that. The three need to come up with some options for the sister. If she is incapable of being independent, they need to find a suitable plan for her.

As for the couple, if they do decide to try to make things work, and their living arrangement changes, it doesn't mean their issues are suddenly going to vanish. There are a lot of things that need repaired in this marriage. Here are some:

1. The wife's resentment will only fade if she expresses it to her husband.
2. The husband needs to apologize for his unwillingness to consider his wife's feelings for several years.
3. The wife must apologize for pushing her husband away and acknowledge that it was hurtful.
4. The couple must address that the husband is antisocial, and instead of the wife going out alone, they need to compromise on the number of nights they go out during the week.
5. This couple should not have a baby until both feel their relationship is on solid ground, and that they are happy together.

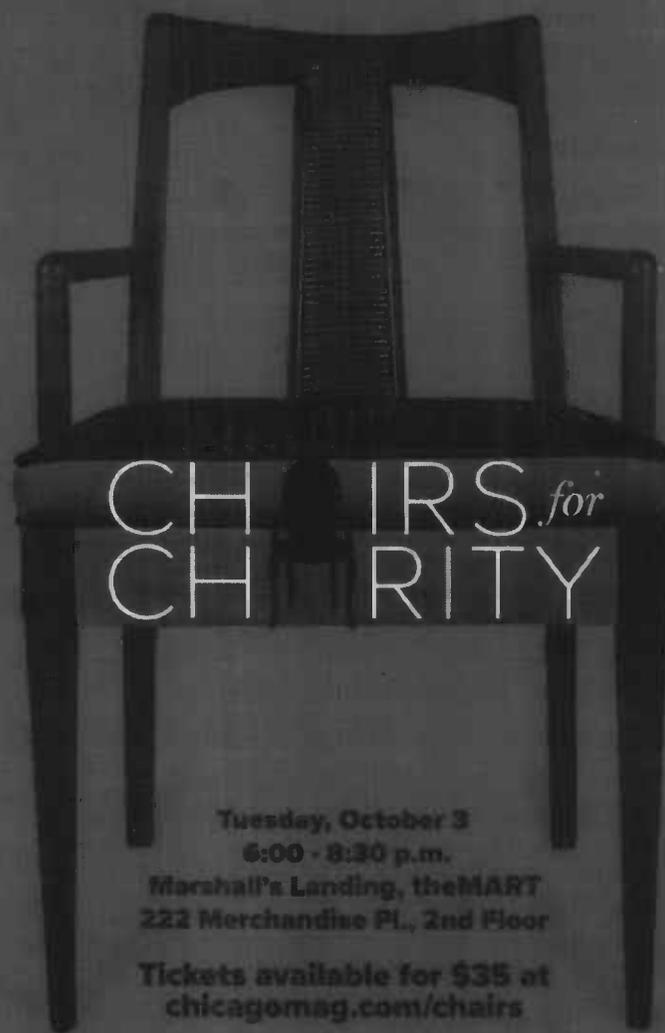

I also want to address this reader's comment that she has fallen out of love with her husband. Sometimes long-term resentment overshadows love, making it impossible to know if love is still there. This couple might well still have love, but sadly, it's hard to find it in their overcrowded apartment.

ASK THE DOCTORS

Parents not sure whether to let son play football

By Dr. Eve Glazier and Dr. Elizabeth Ko
Ask The Doctors

Dear Doctor: Our older sons both played football in high school, but that was before all the publicity about concussions. Our youngest son is now old enough to try out for the team. Is it really that dangerous?

Dear Reader: Sports offer kids a lot of benefits. There's the physical exercise, the social aspect of being part of a group with a common goal, the lessons about teamwork, leadership and work ethic, and how to win — and lose — with grace.

The tradeoff, of course, is the risk of injury.

In a competitive atmosphere, you're going full tilt, throwing yourself into the moment with everything you have. Even in a game as seemingly genteel as badminton, you can sprain an ankle, strain a muscle, break a bone or, if you run into another player or object, even sustain a concussion.

That said, football is in a category of its own. Collisions aren't accidental; they're an integral part of the game. Specialized equipment like helmets and braces and pads do offer a measure of protection. But, as you realize, there are variables at play that can have grave and lasting consequences.

We checked with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and it turns out that 2.6 million children and young people under the age of 20 seek treatment in the ER each year for sports injuries. In football, knees and ankles are the most frequent sites of the injuries. A common sports-related injury we see in our practices is a tear to the ACL, the anterior cruciate ligament. That's one of two ligaments that help to stabilize the knee joint. This happens when the lower leg is firmly planted and momentum of some kind sends the body moving in an opposing direction.

Additional injuries sustained by football players include bruises, sprains and strains, broken bones, bruised or damaged internal organs, back injuries, spinal cord injuries and, of course, concussion.

Concussion may not be the most common football injury, but it can be among the most serious. That's because instead of just a bump on the head, a concussion is actually a mild form of traumatic brain injury. In a concussion, the blow to the head is severe enough to cause the brain to literally move back and forth within the skull. This results in physical and chemical changes to the brain tissue that can leave lasting damage.

Some school football programs have successfully limited the amount of head impact among their players by instituting specific safety rules for both practice and play. Advances in protective helmets have also proved helpful. However, as we all know, in an actual game situation, young athletes don't hold back. Football is a contact sport. No matter the precautions taken, the risk of injury — including concussion — still exists.

We recommend that you check with the school and the coach and learn what protections are in place. Bring your family doctor into the discussion. The truth is, football offers both risk and reward. With adequate information, you'll know which decision is right for your family.

PEOPLE'S PHARMACY PRESCRIPTIONS AND HOME REMEDIES

Will citrus bergamot help lower cholesterol level?

By Joe Graedon and Teresa Graedon
King Features Syndicate

Q: I have had success taking red yeast rice to lower my cholesterol. However, it's not quite as effective now as in the beginning. My nutritionist suggested trying citrus bergamot. Is there research to back this up?

A: We were surprised to learn that Citrus bergamia, the bergamot orange, acts on the same enzyme as red yeast rice and statins to lower cholesterol (Fitoterapia, April 2011). Scientists have conducted a handful of studies to determine whether this fruit or its extract would be effective for treating high cholesterol. One study of 80 individuals found that a bergamot extract (Bergavit R) lowered cholesterol significantly during the six-month study (Frontiers in Pharmacology, Jan. 6, 2016). This trial was not placebo-controlled, however. And some other studies have not confirmed the lipid-lowering benefits of bergamot.

Some people complain that drinking Earl Grey tea can trigger muscle cramps. Since bergamot provides the distinctive flavoring for this tea, you should be alert for this complication.

Q: Seven of my fingernails have become concave. The nails have always been quite thin. Is there a cure for this? Are there any special foods or vitamins that might help?

A: You are describing what may be "koilonychia." One way to test for this condition is to put a drop or two of water on the affected nail. If the water does not run off immediately, you could indeed have this condition.

Concave or spoon-shaped nails may indicate iron deficiency. Other causes include lupus, Raynaud's disease or diabetes. You should ask your doctor to test for anemia or other potential contributors. Correcting the underlying problem should improve your nails.

If you are deficient in iron, you probably will need an iron supplement. Foods high in this mineral include clams, mussels, oysters, sardines, liver, red meat, beans and spinach.

Q: My brother took lisinopril for nearly three years to lower his blood pressure. It did make him cough, but that didn't bother him too much.

One morning, he woke up with his tongue so swollen that he couldn't keep it inside his mouth. He went to the emergency room, and the doctor rushed him into the ER and gave him epinephrine. He said if he had been five minutes later, he might not have lived.

I've never had that kind of reaction, luckily. When I took Vasotec, though, it caused an awful cough.

A: Your brother was smart to get to the emergency department in time. He experienced an-gioedema, a rare but life-threatening reaction to ACE inhibitor blood pressure medicines like lisinopril.

Vasotec (enalapril) also is an ACE inhibitor. All such drugs may cause uncontrollable coughing in susceptible people.

Q: A friend of mine has been bothered with bed-wetting for quite some time. He recently changed his over-the-counter pain reliever from Tylenol to Aleve, and the bed-wetting has stopped.

Is this a coincidence or a fluke, or is there a chemical reason you know of? If it's real, it could be a boon to the elderly.

A: Naproxen (Aleve) can reduce the amount of urine a person produces overnight (Canadian Urological Association Journal, December 2008). This might help explain why your friend's bed-wetting problem disappeared.

We have heard from other readers that taking ibuprofen in the evening cuts down on the number of bathroom visits needed. One study showed that celecoxib, a nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drug like naproxen and ibuprofen, halved the number of times men with enlarged prostates needed to get up to urinate during the night (Urology, October 2008).

Regular use of NSAIDs to control nighttime urination might put a strain on the kidneys, however (Nephron, April 2017). Your friend should ask his doctor to monitor his kidney function.

Evanston, IL 60201

The purpose of this project is to reconstruct the Central Street Bridge over the North Shore Channel. Originally constructed in 1908, the existing structure is approaching the end of its service life and requires complete replacement. The proposed structure is being planned to accommodate all roadway users and will consider the wide variety of adjacent land uses.

The meeting will include a brief presentation on the status of the project and the proposals under consideration will be presented to the public. The representatives from the City and the consultant will be available during the open house to discuss the project. Representatives will answer individual questions and record comments offered by those in attendance. Written questions or comments may also be emailed to the individuals listed below. The presentation will address topics such as the need for the project, the preferred alternative, right-of-way acquisition and the tentative construction schedule. Exhibits depicting the Proposed Improvements will be displayed for viewing during the entire time.

The City is seeking public comments regarding the effects that the proposed replacement of the Central Street Bridge will have on the Canal Shores Golf Course. Canal Shores is a not-for-profit public recreational facility. As such, it is subject to protection under Section 4(f) of the US Department of Transportation Act of 1966. For the Central Street project, the City intends to seek a Section 4(f) "de minimis" finding from the Federal Highway Administration based on a determination that the project will not adversely affect the features, attributes, or activities that qualify Canal Shores Golf Course for protection under Section 4(f).

Effects of the Central Street bridge replacement project on the Canal Shores Golf Course include the permanent acquisition of approximately sixteen (16) feet of right-of-way both north and south of the bridge in order to widen the sidewalk over the North Shore Channel to bring (10) feet wide. There will be a temporary impact to the practice greens located south of Central Street. In addition, the Golf Cart path between the 12th hole and 13th hole will be temporarily rerouted to the west to provide a construction staging area. Mitigation will include the installation of a temporary traffic signal at Bryant Avenue to facilitate pedestrian and Golf Cart crossing through the construction zone. Impacted trees will be replaced on a three to one (3:1) basis. All disturbed areas will be restored to their former condition or better.

An exhibit depicting the impacts associated with the effects of the Central Street Bridge project will be available on the City website. Written comments may be mailed to the City of Evanston or submitted electronically to snagar@cityofevanston.org. Comments must be received by September 30, 2017 to be considered as a part of the public record. All correspondence regarding this project should be sent to:

WEEK 1 FOOTBALL: MAINE SOUTH 62, GLENBARD WEST 34

MIKE MANTUCCA/PIONEER PRESS

Maine South's Bobby Inserra caught three passes and threw a 47-yard option pass for a touchdown against Glenbard West on Saturday in Glen Ellyn.

A DREAM COME TRUE

With his dad on the sidelines, Hawks' Inserra makes most of first varsity game

By MIKE CLARK
Pioneer Press

Bobby Inserra and his coach both admit it.

The junior is treated differently than other Maine South football players.

But there's a good reason for that.

Inserra's dad, Dave, is the Hawks coach and one of the most successful-football coaches in Illinois with a 176-26 record and four state titles in 16-plus seasons.

Handling the coach-parent dynamic can be tricky, but both Inserras say it's been good so far.

"He treats me like a player, doesn't treat me like his son on the field," Bobby Inserra said after Saturday's 62-34 romp past Glenbard West in Glen Ellyn. "If anything, he's a little harder on me, making sure I'm doing all my stuff."

"He makes me proud," Dave Inserra said of his son. "We have a great relationship. I can look at him in the car after practice or after a game and say, 'Coach's kid or player?'"

"If (he says), 'Player,' I'm going to give him the ins and outs (of football). If it's 'Coach's kid,' were just having fun."

Both Inserras had plenty of fun in Saturday's season-opener as the Hawks had the biggest scoring output by a Glenbard West opponent since at least 1995.

Bobby Inserra — who's listed as a wide receiver/cornerback/quarterback/punter on the roster — did a little bit of everything in his varsity debut.

On defense, he helped hold down one of the state's high-flying offenses early as Maine South opened a 28-point lead midway through the second quarter.

He also opened some eyes on offense, catching three passes for 51 yards and throwing a 47-yard option pass to senior Cam Stacy for a touchdown.

"We went over it a bunch in practice," Bobby Inserra said. "We knew they were an aggressive defense. We knew they would come up and hit our run game."

That allowed Stacy to get free behind the Hilltoppers' secondary, and the result was the touchdown that put the Hawks up 42-14 with 5:03 left before halftime.

"That was something we've been working on for a few weeks," said Maine South senior quarterback John O'Sullivan, who accounted for three touchdowns of his own. "It was something we kept in our back pocket that coach knew he might use. It was the perfect situation."

That also describes where Bobby Inserra finds himself.

"My whole life I've just wanted to be on varsity," he said. "I've idolized (Maine South) players like Matt Alviti, Nick Leongas. The 2008, 2009, 2010 (state championship teams), every year I'd be in the stands watching those awesome players and then I'd come on the field and celebrate with my dad and the team."

The Hawks did plenty of celebrating on Saturday after a win that suggests another deep playoff run is well within the realm of possibility.

"It's been my dream my whole life," Bobby Inserra said of playing for his father. "Now I get to do it."

O'Sullivan perfect in Maine South debut

BY MIKE CLARK
Pioneer Press

John O'Sullivan's timing was perfect Saturday, both before and after the Maine South football team's season-opener at Glenbard West.

O'Sullivan, a senior quarterback in his first season as a starter, was a perfect 13-of-13 passing for 168 yards and one touchdown as the Hawks rolled to a 62-34 victory.

Told of his completion percentage afterward, O'Sullivan's deadpan reply was: "I need to throw the ball more."

If he continues to show such accuracy, that could happen as Maine South tries to keep opposing defenses from keying too heavily on senior running back Fotis Kokosioulis.

The Northern Illinois recruit had a big day himself, running 19 times for 167 yards and four touchdowns.

Throw in O'Sullivan's two rushing touchdowns and a halfback option pass for a score by junior Bobby Inserra, and Maine South had the biggest scoring output by an opponent in Hilltoppers coach Chad Hetlet's 10-plus seasons.

Did O'Sullivan expect something like this in a matchup of perennial powers?

"No," he said. "But we do expect to come out and win and score a lot of points."

Maine South coach Dave Inserra liked O'Sullivan's ability to keep plays alive.

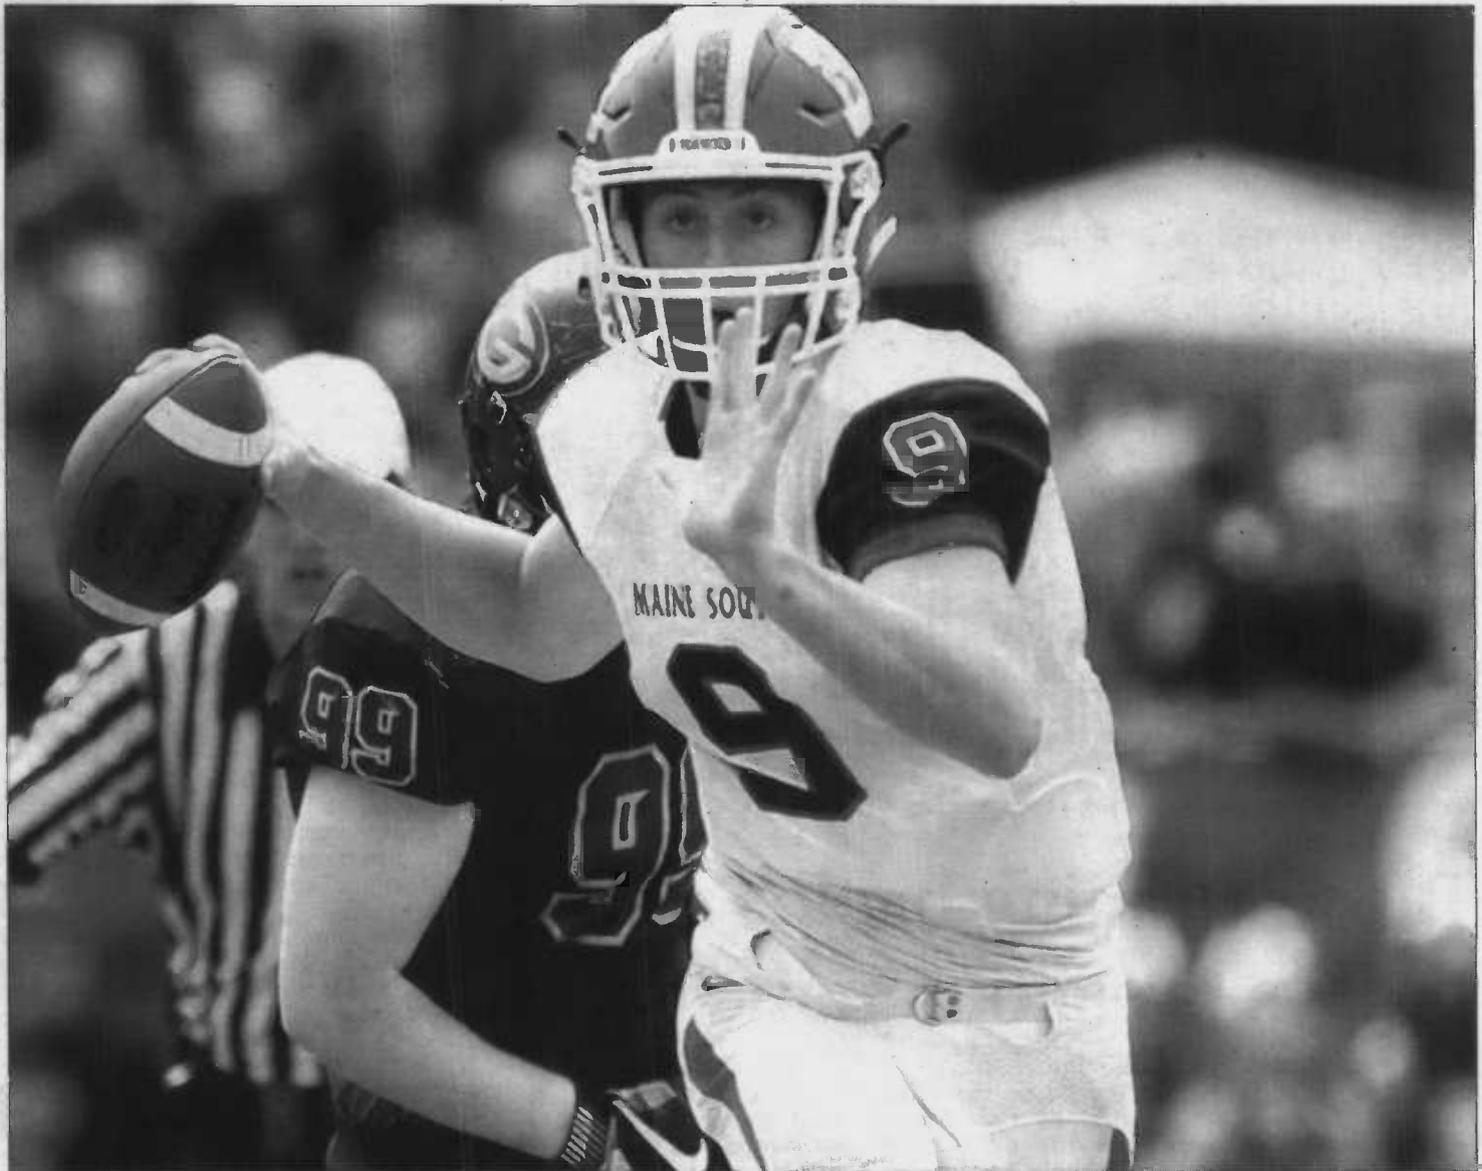

"(He'd get) out of the pocket, scrambling, maybe run it," Inserra said. "He found the open receiver for some big first downs."

"The game shifts right there, if we're punting early in the first quarter and even in the middle of the second quarter."

Maine South scored on its first five possessions of the game and even had a defensive TD when senior Rory Hayes ran an interception back 88 yards.

Kokosioulis had a 1-yard touchdown run and O'Sullivan hit senior Cam Stacy (7 catches, 106 yards) with a 15-yard touchdown pass for a 14-0 Hawks lead.

Glenbard West got within 14-6 on Dre Thomas' 10-yard touchdown run with 1:32 left in the first quarter, but Maine South put the game out of reach with four touchdowns in a stretch of 5:57 in the second quarter.

Kokosioulis had a 52-yard scoring dash down the right sideline, O'Sullivan scored from 2 yards out two plays after an interception by senior Jack Leach, Hayes had his pick-six and Bobby Inserra hit Stacy in stride for a 47-yard score.

That made it 42-14 and Maine South coasted home, getting two more rushing touchdowns from Kokosioulis and another from O'Sullivan after halftime.

"It was impressive," Dave Inserra said of the offensive output. "Great execution by our young offensive line."

WEEK 1 FOOTBALL: BUFFALO GROVE 40, NILES WEST 7

NIC SUMMERS/PIONEER PRESS

Buffalo Grove's Tom Trieb runs through a big hole against Niles West on Friday in Buffalo Grove.

Bison running back Trieb enjoys breakout game

BY HUNTER TICKEL
Pioneer Press

After the way he played against Niles West, Tom Trieb isn't likely to remain a secret much longer.

A former offensive lineman, the 6-foot-2, 215-pound Trieb is still learning how to play running back. But the junior showcased his potential in the 40-7 season-opening victory over the Wolves on Friday in Buffalo Grove.

Trieb amassed 118 all-purpose yards, averaged 8.2 yards per carry and scored two touchdowns.

"People don't know him yet, but they are going to know him," Buffalo Grove coach Jeff Vlk said. "He is a great kid and a hardworking kid. He is a well-kept secret now, but I don't think he will be in a few weeks."

The Bison return three starters on the offensive line, and Trieb credited the line for his success.

"Last year we weren't able to run the ball, this year the offensive line is opening up holes," Trieb said. "I just found them, and we dominated them on that."

Trieb also plays on the defensive line. Last year as a sophomore, he started every game and recorded 69 tackles, one sack, two tackles for loss and two interceptions, according to his Twitter bio.

With eight starters back on offense and seven returning on defense from last year's team, which went 3-6 in Vlk's first year at the helm, the bar has been raised.

"I think everyone knows the expectation," Vlk said. "After that first year, especially when you were an assistant coach before, there were guys that looked at you as the assistant coach in charge. Now, the expectation has been set for the coaching staff and for the kids. Everything is easier in Year 2, because we have already been through it."

The cohesion within the team also has improved since last year.

"We are a lot closer," junior quarterback Connor Adams said. "We have better chemistry. We are thinking what each other are thinking."

Wolves struggle at the start

BY HUNTER TICKEL
Pioneer Press

The Jesse Pierce era at Niles West got off to a rocky start.

The Wolves had four turnovers and suffered a 40-7 loss at Buffalo Grove in their season-opening game on Friday. Niles West trailed 27-0 at the half and had only one first down to that point.

"I think our kids played pretty hard, they were excited to get out there and play against another group," Pierce said. "I think (our coaching staff) needs to do some more work to get (the players) prepped. We were a little lacking in some areas."

The silver lining for the first-year head coach was the stark contrast in the Wolves' performance in the second half. On its first drive after the break, Niles West had three first downs. Plus, the Niles West defense allowed just seven points in the second half.

"I thought we saw better execution in all phases of the game (in the second half)," Pierce said. "I thought all night long we looked pretty good in special teams, which I was happy to see. Defensively, we fought hard in a lot of different positions."

BIG TEN FOOTBALL NOTEBOOK

Locals help Northwestern rise to prominence

BY BOB NARANG
Pioneer Press

Northwestern football is on the rise.

The Wildcats are gunning for a return to their glory days, when running back Darnell Autry and linebacker Pat Fitzgerald led the 1995 team to a Big Ten title and a Rose Bowl appearance.

Fitzgerald, now the winningest coach in program history, has built a solid foundation at his alma mater based on his ability to convince elite Chicago area players to play for the Wildcats.

One of the pieces of that foundation was former Maine South quarterback Matt Alviti, a four-star recruit who shocked many programs when he chose Northwestern in the spring of 2012.

Northwestern's other top recruit at quarterback that season was Mitchell Trubisky, who went on to play at North Carolina and was the Chicago Bears' first-round draft pick this spring.

Alviti, now a redshirt senior, has completed just four passes for 14 yards in 10 career games. But as he enters the final months of his football career, he takes pride in playing a small role in helping transform Northwestern into a top destination for local recruits.

"I have been here forever it seems. Five years," Alviti said. "You take it for granted as a young guy, and now I'm at a point where I only have five or six months left in a game I've played my whole life.

"I think the seeds of what they were trying to build for awhile kind of really started with my class and the kids from the Chicago area and the class below me, with Justin (Jackson) and others. A lot of three- and four-star recruits from the area is huge, having local guys who know the program, been around the program and helping, hopefully, bring Northwestern to the top of the Big Ten."

Former Stevenson wide receiver Cameron Green and Libertyville quarterback Riley Lees are both seeking to become vital contributors this season for the Wildcats. Lees, a red-shirt freshman wide receiver, is expected to play regularly.

"I'm trying to figure out what my role on the team is and do whatever I can to help the team," Lees said. "It's exciting. It was tough to go from playing all the time to not playing at all last year, but it helped me learn, take time to learn the skills at wide receiver and get comfortable with the team."

Green, a redshirt sophomore superback and Buffalo Grove native, caught four passes for 31 yards in 13 games last season.

"I'm just trying to do whatever I can to help the team," Green said. "My body style has changed, as I've become a stronger and faster football player.

"It's been unreal (at Northwestern). We're trying to build an unreal program, and everybody has responded to it. Everybody is buying into the program. I'm blessed and excited to be part of the program."

OPRF grad Cobbs on the rise at Indiana

Former Oak Park-River Forest wide receiver Simmie Cobbs had little trouble adjusting to playing college football at the highest level. Cobbs played in all 12 games as a freshman at Indiana, then caught 60 passes for 1,035 yards and four touchdowns as a sophomore.

Cobbs, a redshirt junior after missing almost all of 2016 with an injury, credited numerous teammates for helping speed up his transition from high school to college.

"I watched the older guys like Shane Wynn and Nick Stoner, and the preparation they brought every day," Cobbs said of his former Hoosier teammates. "I knew they were striving for greatness, and I knew at a young age I needed to take that next step and learn how to prepare. I put in a lot of film work and crafted my game."

An All-Big Ten Honorable Mention selection in 2015, Cobbs suffered a season-ending ankle injury in a win against Ball State in the second game of last season. He sat out the opener against Florida International due to a suspension.

"For the first couple of weeks, it was definitely a downer," Cobbs said of his injury. "After you go through that process of getting the surgery and healing, you start believing more. That play actually was good for me. ... Due to the injury I got bigger, faster, stronger, and I learned a lot about the game that I knew about but I wasn't 100 percent sure about. As a player, you want to be physically strong but just as strong mentally."

The 6-foot-4, 220-pound Cobbs said his goals are to be a key contributor this season and return to his old, productive form.

His Week 1 availability was undetermined at press time: Cobbs was arrested on misdemeanor charges of refusal to identify and resisting law enforcement last month at a concert in Indiana. Last week, Indiana coach Tom Allen said he had not decided if Cobbs would play in the season-opener against Ohio State, though he had been a full participant in practice.

"Camp went great," Cobbs said. "Due to the injury, I had a lot of extra weight on me. Through the whole process of camp, I lost 11 pounds of fat and then gained five percent muscle. That reshaped my entire body."

MAC FOOTBALL NOTEBOOK

Fenwick's Ryan Smith boosts Miami (Ohio)

BY BOB NARANG

Pioneer Press

Ryan Smith has little reason to complain.

More than three years ago, the former Fenwick star committed to Miami (Ohio), a struggling Mid-American Conference program that didn't seem to be headed anywhere. From 2011-14, the RedHawks won only 10 games, and they went 0-12 during the 2013 season.

But under the direction of Chuck Martin, the RedHawks have won nine games over the last two seasons, including six wins last season before a narrow loss to Mississippi State in the St. Petersburg Bowl.

Smith, a 6-foot-4, 265-pound tight end, caught 31 passes for 356 yards and five touchdowns last season. He had seven receptions for 72 yards and a touchdown in the bowl game.

With the RedHawks returning eight starters on offense and eight on defense, Smith said he's excited about the next few months, team-wise and personally.

"Miami football is up," Smith said. "I think this season could be a really big season for Miami football. I'm trying to stay levelheaded and humble about it, but I know I also have a big opportunity ahead of me. I'm taking it one step at a time."

"After talking to a couple of agents (about playing professionally). It's really exciting, but I have to keep a level head in that aspect. It really comes down to how good of a senior season I will have."

One of 19 players on Miami's roster from the Chicago area, Smith credits his grandfather, former Fenwick star and 1953 Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Lattner, for molding him into a devout family man. Lattner passed away in February 2016 at age 83.

Smith isn't the only Lattner grandson playing in the MAC: Fellow Fenwick alumnus Robert Spillane is a standout linebacker for Western Michigan.

"Without him, I don't think I would be the man I am today," Smith said of Lattner. "Growing up, I didn't understand the Heisman Trophy in elementary school. Papa John pulled me in the right direction and was there every step of the way. He was a big family man. Family means everything with me. He was there at every sporting event as we got older. It means a lot to me he put so much time in with his family."

Milas ready for senior season at Ball State

Former Rolling Meadows quarterback Jack Milas gleamed with pride over his place in a special fraternity.

Not that anybody has noticed.

Miami football coach Chuck Martin (center) has 19 players from the Chicago area on his team, including many from the north and west suburbs.

noted that nobody mentions the unique connection he has with current New England Patriots backup quarterback Jimmy Garoppolo, a 2010 Rolling Meadows graduate.

Both played quarterback exceedingly well for the Mustangs. In recent years, coach Matt Mishler has fine-tuned the offense to fit his signal-caller each season. Garoppolo played for coach Doug Mill-saps.

"I never get it," Milas said when asked if people at Ball State connect him with Garoppolo. "It's kind of weird because I thought I would. Mishler has done a really good job of getting everybody ready. He keeps winning, changing his offense every year to mold it to the (quarterback)."

As Milas enters the final stage of his up-and-down college football career, he's embracing the role of being a leader as a senior. He started six games as a redshirt freshman, three as a sophomore and played primarily as a backup last season. He enters this season as a backup and is on track to graduate with a degree in business administration.

"It's weird to think about hitting the real road, graduating in December," he said. "It's surreal, all coming to an end, one heck of a ride. I'm taking it day by day because you never know when it's going to end."

"Coming here was probably the best decision of my life. I love it here, so many good people and life lessons that I've learned."
