Niles North varsity season reinstated following brief suspension. Page 4

CHRIS SWEDA/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The Niles North football team waits to enter the Prospect High School field in Mount Prospect for a game this season. After a suspension brought on by an alleged hazing incident, School District 219 officials said on Oct. 2 that the football team may resume its season immediately. The incident in question was investigated by school officials and police, and it was determined that no criminal conduct took place.

SHOUT OUT

Debra Rains, cantor and former lawyer

Debra Rains, a Skokie resident for nearly 30 years, is a former litigator. The retired lawyer and mother of two recently walked her dog along Skokie's relatively new bike and walking path that extends from the Dempster Street Skokie Swift station south into Lincolnwood.

Q: Where did you grow up?

A: Iowa and Wisconsin. I came here to work in Chicago. We came to Skokie when I married my husband.

Q: Pets?

A: Our first dog was JD. Just Dog. We lost him a couple years ago. He was 13. We had to put him down. The hardest thing anyone ever has to do is get rid of a pet. This one is OD — Other Dog. I really, really, really wish Skokie had more parks for dogs.

Q: What book are you currently reading and what book would you like to read next?

A: I'm currently reading "Hidden Figures," which is quite interesting, and bears no resemblance to the movie. I don't know about my next book. I read a lot of mysteries, so maybe one of those.

Q: First job?

A: My first job ever was typing labels for my mother's workplace for their marketing department.

Q: As a kid, what did you want to be when you grew up?

A: A singer. I have a good voice. I've performed in the (Chicago Bar Association's) Bar Show. I'm the musical director. I'm also a cantor at St. Martha's Church in Morton Grove.

Q: What is an interesting factoid about yourself?

A: Our daughter just got married. Everyone came up and said that she and her husband had touched them — that they were the kindest, most generous people they had ever known. ... If you teach your kids to be nice, there's hope in the world.

Q: A movie you'd recommend?

A: "Hidden Figures." Honestly, it was a fascinating movie for anyone from my generation who was interested in the space race.

Q: Favorite local restaurant?

A: Libertad, but they could use a bigger space.

Debra Rains

D219 officials reinstate football at Niles North

Investigation of alleged hazing determined no criminal conduct took place

By MIKE ISAACS
Pioneer Press

Niles Township High School District 219 officials announced Oct. 2 that the Niles North varsity football team has been immediately reinstated following a brief suspension last week due to an alleged hazing incident.

District 219 officials said program operations were suspended Sept. 25 after reports of a hazing incident on the team, which they said was under criminal investigation. But in reinstating the program, officials said the incident was thoroughly investigated by school officials and police and it was determined no criminal conduct took place.

"This last week has been a difficult one for our school community," Niles North Principal James Edwards said in a District 219 news release on Oct. 2. "As soon as our school became aware of the allegations, we were determined to act in the most proactive and thorough manner possible, and we are glad that we are able to reinstate the program today."

Officials did not release details of what the incident involved. But they said they worked in collaboration with Skokie police to ensure "a timely and thorough investigation."

The district will take "appropriate action to address the conduct determined to have taken place," according to the release.

Edwards said he was proud of the school community and the student football players who "displayed a sense of maturity and responsibility during the investigation process."

But some students who learned about the suspen-

MIKE ISAACS/PIONEER PRESS

At Niles North High School in Skokie, officials recently lifted the suspension of the varsity football team's season after an investigation by the district and Skokie police determined that no criminal activity took place during an alleged hazing incident.

sion last week said they thought the district had over-reacted and feared at the time that the suspension would last longer.

Senior Wajahat Khan said if the season were to be canceled, it would hurt many of the team's players.

"I've heard that people are blowing this out of proportion," Khan said. Some senior players are drawing interest from college coaches, "and it sucks for them," he said.

Many who knew players on the team also said they were surprised that any serious hazing incident had occurred.

"It was a little surprising to hear about this because we have good kids at Niles North," said Elline Eliasoff, the mother of a Niles North student. "I'd be surprised if it's discovered that these kids did anything that awful.

I have my fingers crossed, and I'm optimistic."

Senior Mohammed Amiwala also said he was surprised by the allegations.

"I know some of (the players) personally, and they just don't seem like the type to do this," he said. "They're not your stereotypical football players who are mean or jocks."

Andrew Francis, a 2017 Niles North graduate and quarterback on last season's team, said he didn't believe it when he heard the team was shutting down. He said that Mike Garoppolo and former head coach Mark Egofske "both made it clear that hazing wasn't allowed."

"I don't think any hazing is going on," said Francis, who now plays cornerback for the University of Wisconsin at Platteville. He trained at Niles North over the summer.

"Those guys were a really close group," Francis said, "and for one of them to be hazing or hurt another guy, I don't believe it."

Skokie police Sgt. John Moersfelder had said last week police would interview student athletes and coaching staff over the next few days as part of the investigation. The announcement of the team's reinstatement came after those interviews took place, officials said.

The school district's policy on hazing, outlined in Niles North's student handbook, states that punishment can range from a conference with school administrators to a 10-day suspension, recommended expulsion or referral to police.

Halting a season for disciplinary problems is rare. A spokesman for the Illinois

High School Association said he and the staff were unable to recall a similar situation.

The incident marked the second hazing-related story involving a Chicago-area football team within a week. Prosecutors in DuPage County brought felony charges against five Wheaton College football players after a former team member said he was a victim of hazing. The five were suspended by the school from future games and practices.

Niles North's varsity team has a 2-3 record this season and had four regular season games remaining on its fall schedule. The school's homecoming game is scheduled for Oct. 13 against crosstown rival Niles West.

Mike Garoppolo, brother of New England Patriots' backup quarterback Jimmy Garoppolo, is in his second season as Niles North's head coach.

"I want to commend Principal Edwards and his team at Niles North for immediately taking action and for carrying out the investigation so thoroughly and fairly," said District 219 Superintendent Steven Isoye. "The message we want everyone to take away from this is to reinforce how critical it is that each member of our school community treats every other with the respect and dignity that we all deserve."

Evanston sues Skokie over water stalemate

Municipalities have had dealings on water for 73 years

Staff Report

Officials with the city of Evanston have filed a lawsuit against the neighboring village of Skokie over an impasse in negotiating new wholesale water rates, according to the complaint filed Sept. 26 in Cook County Circuit Court.

Skokie has been buying its water from Evanston for 73 years, according to the lawsuit, but the two municipalities have not been able to reach an agreement over a new contract despite negotiating for months.

"Evanston and Skokie are unable to mutually agree on a reasonable rate to pay Evanston for water," the lawsuit reads. "Unfortunately, Evanston now has no choice but to seek a declaratory judgment."

Evanston officials said in a news release — issued after filing the lawsuit electronically Sept. 26 — that the city sold water wholesale to Skokie at "reasonable rates."

"As compared to other communities ... the rate charged by Evanston to Skokie is in many cases much less than that paid by other water customers in comparable communities," according to the release.

Skokie officials did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

Evanston wants Skokie to pay $2.06 per 1,000 gallons of the Lake Michigan water it treats and supplies to Skokie, according to the lawsuit.

But Skokie wants to pay "somewhere in the vicinity of 70 cents per 1,000 gallons" which Evanston states in the lawsuit is "far below a fair and reasonable rate."

The two towns previously had long-term agreements for Evanston to supply the water. The latest contract, which started in 1997 and went for 20 years, expired Dec. 31, 2016, the lawsuit states.

"Beginning in 2012, knowing that the water contract would expire at the end of 2016, Evanston met with Skokie numerous times and provided hundreds of pages of information in order to negotiate a mutually agreeable new water supply contract," Evanston's suit reads.

Evanston officials state in the lawsuit that upon the expiration, the towns agreed that Skokie would pay an interim rate of $1.0797 per 1,000 gallons.

"Evanston cannot sit back and let the inequitably low rate exist for an indeterminate amount of time."

—From lawsuit filed by Evanston against Skokie over impasse on water rates

Skokie officials previously said that the rate was a 2 percent increase over what the village had been paying.

The agreement on the interim rate expired Sept. 30.

There has been no rate contract since then. And Skokie also refused to extend the interim agreement while negotiations continue, according to the lawsuit.

"Also, under Illinois law, Evanston cannot terminate water supply service to Skokie unless ... Skokie first secures alternative water supply from another source," the lawsuit reads. "Evanston cannot sit back and let the inequitably low rate exist for an indeterminate amount of time."

The Evanston City Council approved a new water rate ordinance — $2.06 per 1,000 gallons effective Oct. 1 — a day before the lawsuit was filed.

At that rate, Skokie would have lower rates than most nearby towns, based on information provided in the suit.

Only Glenview ($1.78 per 1,000 gallons), which gets its water from Wilmette; Northfield ($1.69 per 1,000 gallons), which gets its water from Winnetka, and Morton Grove-Niles, which just signed an agreement to get their water from Evanston, show lower rates, according to the lawsuit.

In addition to Skokie, Evanston supplies water to Arlington Heights, Palatine, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Des Plaines, the lawsuit states. Niles and Morton Grove are scheduled to become Evanston customers at the end of 2018, at a rate of 78 cents per 1,000 gallons. Lincolnwood is also expected to become an Evanston water customer within the next two years.

Skokie "bears a heavy burden to prove by clear and convincing evidence that Evanston's water rate ordinance is invalid," the suit states. "This is a burden Skokie has not and cannot meet."

Evanston in the next years will have to replace an older reservoir at a cost of $20 million, city officials said. "This necessary capital expansion and improvement fully justifies the rate payable by Skokie, as the rate captures fair and prorate shares of costs allocated amongst all wholesale water customers," the lawsuit states. "Skokie wants to underpay, and unfairly shift those infrastructure costs to others."

Evanston volleyball joins nationwide protest

Team members encourage dialogue by kneeling during national anthem

BY GENEVIEVE BOOKWALTER AND LEE V. GAINES
Pioneer Press

The decision of an Evanston High School girls volleyball team to “take a knee” during the national anthem before their game this week sparked conversation on the topic in both Evanston and in nearby New Trier High School, with members of both schools’ varsity football teams following suit on Sept. 28.

A senior on the volleyball team said the decision was made without the knowledge of parents or coaches and was done to bring attention to “those who face injustice in America.”

More than a dozen members of the Evanston football team, the Evanston cheerleaders and marching band, as well as one New Trier football player, also chose to kneel during the anthem before their game Thursday. The kneeling protests were brought to prominence months ago by then-San Francisco 49ers quarterback Colin Kaepernick, who was trying to raise awareness of social injustice and racism. The “take a knee” movement shot to the forefront of national debate recently, after President Donald Trump criticized NFL players participating in the protest, using a curse word to refer to them and saying they should be fired.

Administrators and coaches at New Trier began talking to students about the possibility of anthem protests after seeing the photo of the Evanston girls volleyball game, which was held Tuesday, said Nicole Dizon, director of communications for New Trier High School.

“That helped us start the conversation with all our teams and coaches about the ongoing actions during anthems, particularly at sporting events,” Dizon said. “Our athletic director talked to all our fall sports coaches and the coaches talked to the teams. The main theme is this is an individual decision and we respect anyone’s individual decision on this action and we should also respect one another, our teammates and the other teams and what they decide to do.”

Dizon said she asked the New Trier athletic director whether he had heard from parents on the issue, and she said he hasn’t. She also said she wasn’t aware of any parents contacting the school about the topic. This is also the first time she’s heard of a New Trier player kneeling during the anthem before a sporting event, she said.

Dizon said the school has committed to not disciplining students who choose to participate in a protest during the anthem.

“Our position is clear and that’s that students are free to express themselves guided by their own conviction, that could be standing or kneeling and any respectful form of participation or non-participation,” she said.

Dizon added that the football team had talked about the matter with their coach in advance of the game.

“I know for our football team, they discussed the issue with their coach because this was happening in the NFL, and some teammates talked about why they were on one side or the other of the issue, but they all talked about how they support each other and act as a team. If a teammate wants to take a knee, they will be respected and supported and if they stand, it will be the same,” she said.

The senior on the Evanston girls volleyball team said there was no disrespect to the flag or the military intended in the protest.

“We live in a very diverse community, and a high school that values all students,” she wrote in an email, saying her statement was on behalf of the entire team. “We view taking a knee as respect towards the flag because we acknowledge that we do love our country, but it needs work and before we can love it completely, it needs to love every single person equally, regardless of race, class, sexual orientation.”

Evanston High School representatives on Sept. 30 referred questions to an open letter Superintendent Eric Witherspoon wrote to students, staff and families. Witherspoon read a statement of support before last Thursday’s varsity football game.

“Students of Evanston Township High School have the right of free expression and association and the privacy of one’s own thoughts and opinions. If a student chooses to remain seated or kneel during the national anthem, our existing practice allows students to express their First Amendment right to free speech so long as it does not significantly disrupt the learning environment,” Witherspoon wrote.

Evanston Mayor Steve Hagerty said he backed the students’ constitutional right to free speech, and hopes Evanston and U.S. residents will focus on the reasons some feel taking a knee is necessary.

“I fully support anyone who chooses to protest with civility,” Hagerty said. “That said, I believe our city and the country should focus less on athletes kneeling and more on the reasons for their protest.”

Lincolnwood trustee: ‘Why bother’ with sanctuary law?

Proposal tabled as state legislation does same thing

BY GENEVIEVE BOOKWALTER
Pioneer Press

Lincolnwood trustees recently voted to table a proposed ordinance that would have established the village, officially, as a “welcoming” one after learning that the governor signed statewide legislation.

Lincolnwood would have joined Evanston, Morton Grove and Skokie as municipalities with welcoming city ordinances. Trustees agreed to table the proposal at a Sept. 5 Committee of the Whole meeting.

Gov. Bruce Rauner on Aug. 28 signed the Illinois Trust Act, which would prevent law enforcement from detaining someone for federal authorities based solely on immigration status absent a criminal warrant.

Local towns also adopted similar legislation.

In Evanston, welcoming city rules prohibit police from holding undocumented immigrants for immigration authorities after a stop. Exceptions include those convicted for serious crimes or already sought via an arrest warrant.

“Some of this becomes a moot point,” said Lincolnwood Trustee Ronald Cope, with what “the governor signed into law Aug. 28, basically making all of our communities welcoming communities.”

Lincolnwood police

Chief Robert LaMantia said the state ordinance “codifies what we already have been doing.”

Lincolnwood law enforcement “respects all races, minorities, religious backgrounds, ethnic backgrounds,” he said.

“Everyone is welcome. All will be treated with respect” in Lincolnwood, LaMantia said.

In addition, Cope said, tabling the welcoming ordinance in Lincolnwood would mean that while the village is complying with the state statute, it could not be singled out for disqualification from federal funds, as President Donald Trump has threatened to do.

“Why bother risking that when we have a state statute?” Cope said.

Mayor Barry Bass said although Lincolnwood might not pass its own ordinance, he wants everyone to feel safe in the village and know that law enforcement is not looking to discriminate against or, for some, deport them.

“Educate the general public to know if there’s an undocumented immigrant, they have certain rights. They should not be fearful of dialing 911,” he said.

Resident Raymon Grossman said the village still should do its part in reassuring residents that all are welcome in Lincolnwood.

Not passing the ordinance “would be a crime of omission,” Grossman said. “We must stand up.”

Chief: Niles Police Dept. steps up crime prevention

Outreach efforts for officers to appear 'more approachable'

BY MIKE ISAACS
Pioneer Press

Niles police Chief Luis Tigera recently unveiled a revamped crime prevention plan that he said provides greater outreach to the community in a variety of ways.

"Upon reviewing our police community, strategies, and discussing our priorities with senior command staff, changes were made," he said at an Aug. 22 Niles Village Board meeting. He said the plan provides "a more consistent community relations focus."

Shortly after announcing the plan, the Niles Police Department reinstated its "Coffee With a Cop" program in a much more organized than when it was tried years ago, officials said.

"What we want to do is get out, talk to people, get to hear what issues they might have in the village and the community, what concerns they have, and just to make us a little bit more approachable," Niles police Cmdr. Robert Torabene said.

Coffee With a Cop is only one piece of the chief's new crime prevention plan. The police have scheduled over 20 outreach events over the next three months — starting in August, Tigera said.

The plan also calls for re-establishing a school resource officer program in all Niles schools, expanding community policing and a neighborhood watch program, focusing on traffic safety around schools and scrutinizing certain neighborhoods and intersections, placing more emphasis on preventing business crime; expanding family-oriented community relations, taking measures to increase senior awareness about common crimes and expanding use of the police's Auxiliary Services Unit, according to information Tigera provided.

VILLAGE OF NILES

The police chief said some of these measures have already been implemented, others are being rolled out.

Torabene heads up the department's new crime prevention bureau under the plan and directly reports to the chief. A sergeant oversees "numerous community policing crime prevention programs," according to the chief.

"The purpose of the change is to redirect our personnel to various hot spots in the community, provide traffic parking control, bike patrol and schedule crime prevention education programs — in essence getting back to the basics within our community," Tigera said.

Another part of the community policing plan calls for dividing the village into "sub-beats" with each patrol officer taking "ownership" over a certain area.

A traffic safety unit will pay special attention to distracted driving and target key areas that have proven to have more safety issues or multiple complaints, Tigera said. In the first three weeks of August, he said, Niles police issued $9,000 in tickets because of truck safety and other violations.

Police are also making a greater effort to address break-ins that have been happening with unlocked vehicles in Niles and many nearby communities.

"Our residents are leaving their vehicles unlocked, people are walking down the street and just opening up the car," the police chief said.

Tigera said Niles is working with other agencies and considering a task force to try to address the issue. Another new effort is working with local businesses to better prepare them against crime, he said.

Tigera said a team has been trained to make seniors better aware of how to detect common scams against the elderly.

Niles resident Norbert Johnson, who helped create the Niles Crime Stoppers, said he was one of the originators and distributors of a petition signed by Niles residents in support of the Niles Police Department.

The Niles Crime Stoppers collected more than 1,000 signatures to support police, he said.

"This (is) to let the Niles Police Department know that they have the public support and that (we) appreciate their outstanding service to the community," he said.

POLICE REPORT

The following items were taken from the Niles Police Department reports. An arrest does not constitute a finding of guilt. Only a court of law can make that determination.

THEFT

■ Thomas Nowakowski, 25, of the 1400 block of Henry Street, Des Plaines, and Kyra Santiago, 24, of the first block of Timber Terrace, Cary, were each charged with theft on Sept. 22. According to police, the pair were accused of stealing purses on Aug. 26 at a retailer in the 8500 block of West Golf Road. Police said they were also charged with a similar crime in Mount Prospect. Nowakowski and Santiago were each scheduled to appear in court Sept. 22.

■ Patricia Korbel, 58, of the 9500 block of Terrace Place, unincorporated Maine Township, was charged with retail theft on Sept. 22 after police said she stole three greeting cards from a retailer in the 8500 block of West Golf Road. Korbel is scheduled to appear in court Oct. 10.

PROPERTY DAMAGE

■ Angela Wojcik, 34, of the 500 block of Columbia Avenue, Des Plaines, was charged with criminal damage to a vehicle, criminal trespass to property and possession of marijuana on Sept. 16.

POSSESSION

■ Charles L. Shaw, 28, of the 500 block of Cherry Lane, Glenview, was charged with possession of drug paraphernalia and driving on a revoked license following a traffic stop in the 6800 block of Milwaukee Avenue on Sept. 17. Shaw was scheduled to appear in court Oct. 2.

■ Mikhail Pasetes, 31, of the 9300 block of Home Court, Des Plaines, was charged with possession of a controlled substance, driving on a suspended license, obstruction and driving with expired registration on Sept. 20. Police said Pasetes gave a false name during a traffic stop, and a bottle containing a controlled substance was found inside his car. Pasetes is scheduled to appear in court Oct. 10.

■ Nestor Perez, 25, of the 8200 block of Milwaukee Avenue, Niles, was charged with driving under the influence, possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia Sept. 17. According to police, Perez was found slumped behind the wheel of a car parked in the 6700 block of West Touhy Avenue.

■ Michael Bradica, 26, of the 400 block of Raven Road, Shorewood, was charged with driving under the influence, failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident and driving without insurance on Sept. 21 after police said he was involved in a crash in the 7200 block of West Oakton Street. Bradica is scheduled to appear in court Oct. 12.

■ Gantumur Tsegmed, 49, of the 4100 block of Williamsburg Court, Glenview, was charged with driving under the influence, driving without a valid license, driving without insurance and improper parking on Sept. 22. According to police, Tsegmed appeared to be "passed out" behind the wheel of his car, which was parked in the 8400 block of West Carol Street. Tsegmed is scheduled to appear in court Oct. 10.

WARRANT

■ Marek Socha, 56, of the 100 block of West Irving Park Road, Schiller Park, was taken into custody on a warrant for disorderly conduct on Sept. 19. Socha is scheduled to appear in court Oct. 10.

■ Elliott King, 45, of Minneapolis, Minn., was taken into custody Sept. 19 after a traffic stop revealed he had a warrant out of Skokie for theft. King is scheduled to appear in court Nov. 3.

FLEEING

■ The driver of a car that matched the description of a vehicle involved in a Glenview commercial burglary reportedly refused to stop for police Sept. 19. Police said Morton Grove officers also attempted to pursue the car.

BURGLARY TO VEHICLE

■ A man told police that a backpack containing a 9mm handgun was stolen from his car while it was parked in the 5700 block of Touhy Avenue Sept. 22. A side window was reportedly smashed out to gain entry.

THEFT

■ Fifteen "parking bumpers" were reported stolen Sept. 18 from a private parking lot in the 9200 block of North Milwaukee Avenue.

■ Three drill kits were reported stolen from a retailer in the 900 block of Civic Center Drive on Sept. 22.

DISTURBANCE

■ Police were called to a store in the 5600 block of West Touhy Avenue for a report of an employee who allegedly threatened co-workers after he was fired on Sept. 21. The man was given a no-trespass warning, police said.

BURGLARY

■ An attempt was made to pry a security plate off the locking mechanism of the rear doors of a business in the 9600 block of Milwaukee Avenue between Sept. 1 and 18.

School funding formula impact explained

Panel looks at how state affects school finances

BY LEE V. GAINES
Pioneer Press

At a school finance panel last week, school business officials for Park Ridge-Niles District 64 and Maine Township High School District 207 provided initial estimates on what the districts expect to receive in state funding going forward following passage of a new school funding formula in Springfield.

The panel was hosted Sept. 28 at Lincoln Middle School by the League of Women Voters of Park Ridge. Panelists included District 64's chief school business official, Luann Kolstad; District 207's assistant superintendent for finance, Mary Kalou; and associate professor emeritus at Roosevelt University Thomas Kersten. In addition to discussing the impact of the state's new school funding formula, panelists also explained how property taxes are calculated and assessed, using individual tax bills as examples.

Following the local election in April, Rebecca Little, a member of the League of Women Voters of Park Ridge, said there appeared to be confusion in the community about property taxes and how the district imposed tax levies. She said the group also wanted to demystify what impact the new funding formula would have on Park Ridge schools.

The league put together the panel to educate residents on both issues, Little said.

At the core of the new school funding law is a desire to provide an adequate education to all Illinois students regardless of where they live, Kalou said. She said she worked with those responsible for crafting the new formula and

LEE V. GAINES/PIONEER PRESS

Luann Kolstad, the chief school business official for Park Ridge-Niles District 64, speaks during a presentation about property taxes and the impact the state's new school funding formula will have on the district at Lincoln Middle School on Sept. 28. Panelists also discussed how property taxes are calculated and assessed.

"we sat in a room and talked about the purpose of the formula, and really it was to take those school districts that are being underfunded and to try to raise them up, and that's a goal we could support"

Kersten said schools in Illinois rely heavily on property tax dollars to support school operations and facilities. The system provides a couple of advantages, he said, including that the locally generated property taxes cannot be taken from the district through legislative action in Springfield, and that taxes on district property are used to support the community's own school districts, he said.

"The problem is there's these huge inequities, and other places cannot provide an adequate education because they don't have the property taxes," Kersten said.

The majority of the state's most underfunded districts are located south of Interstate 80, Kolstad said. "Many of these districts are in severe trouble," she said.

The state's Board of Education is in the process of calculating each district's adequacy level, according to a presentation from the school officials. Preliminary estimates indicate District 207 is funded at 134 percent of its adequacy level and District 64 stands at 140 percent of adequacy. The adequacy level for each district is based on the cost of "27 essential elements," how much the district is able to contribute locally in property tax dollars and in personal property replacement taxes, which are taxes on corporations, partnerships, trusts and public utilities that are collected by the state and paid to local governments.

The high adequacy levels are attributed to relatively high assessed values for properties in the districts, their staffing levels and academic and activity opportunities for students, according to the presentation. Both Districts 64 and 207 are considered "tier four" districts per the new funding model, which means they are among the most well-funded school districts in the state.

"We've always beaten the state average, and always expected a level of performance from students that is far superior than what the state would say the average is," Kalou said. "We've been fortunate we have property values in this area that can support a high level of education."

Initial estimates indicate District 207 will receive just under $5.6 million in base funding from the state moving forward, while District 64 anticipates about $3.3 million. The state did not take into account the elementary and middle school district's English language learner population when it made its initial estimate, Kolstad said, and that's something the district intends to follow up on.

"The state is beginning to pay the base funding due to the district, which we will receive in 22 equal payments this year," Kolstad said. "We're owed about $800,000 from last year."

Kalou said the state's general assembly appropriated funding for the model only through the current fiscal year. If the legislature is unable to appropriate sufficient funding in the future, districts in tier four — including Districts 64 and 207 — will see a reduction in their state aid.

Beyond the base funding amount due to the districts per the new formula, Kalou said the districts will not receive any new state money until underfunded school districts across Illinois are brought up to adequacy levels.

The funding bill also includes "mandate reliefs," which allow districts to reduce physical education classes from five to three days per week and contract with third-party driver education services, in addition to new reporting requirements for school districts.

A "last-minute" addition to the funding formula bill also means that voters in districts with schools with funding levels above 110 percent of adequacy can petition for a referendum to reduce the tax rate for education purposes by up to 10 percent. The petition requires 10 percent of a district's voters to sign on and a referendum can be considered only in odd-numbered years in consolidated elections held in spring. District officials said the soonest such a referendum could be held would be April 2019.

Kalou said the formula used to determine adequacy levels does not take into account expanded early childhood offerings; 1:1 instructional technology programs; class sizes less than 25 students for grades four through 12; language immersion and dual-language programs; high-cost, low-incidence special education; capital maintenance; transportation; new construction; and existing bonds, among other elements, according to the presentation from school officials.

Kalou said she was under the impression the adequacy model would be used only to increase state aid for underfunded districts.

"And I knew there were flaws (in the model). If I knew this was how adequacy targets would be used, there would have been a lot more discussion in what should be in that adequacy formula and how they are maintained," she said.

Cubs fans eye playoffs with cautious optimism

'Post-World Series hangover' lingers across North Shore

By DANIEL I. DORFMAN
Pioneer Press

Nearly a year after the Chicago Cubs' World Series win, some Cubs fans on the North Shore are looking ahead to the postseason with optimism.

But there's perhaps more relief than giddiness among fans following a slow start to the 2017 season.

"There is always going to be a post-World Series hangover," Winnetka's Robert Harvey said. "Last year was a magical season. It will never happen again. Everything fell into place.

"This year, lots of guys got hurt, players didn't play as well as they have in previous years. Luckily, the division wasn't very good," he said.

Northbrook's Mark Pierce wasn't certain a repeat of last year would be on its way during some of 2017's more lukewarm moments.

"I feel excited and a little surprised because of the first half of the season," Pierce said. "It looked like it was going to be just another season, but now there is hope."

The Cubs' division-clinching victory in St. Louis on Sept. 27 was met with a ho-hum reception from some fans.

"You have to pinch yourself a little bit because it was such a pathetic track record for a long time," said Winnetka's Ford Bartholow, a Cubs fan since childhood who said he loves what Joe Maddon and his players have delivered. "Obviously you see what happened with a change in culture and a terrific manager."

"You get used to it like the Bulls (in the '90s)," echoed Glencoe's Gerry Wise. "You just expect them to win."

The Cubs will face the Washington Nationals in the first round of the playoffs starting Oct. 6.

"It will be a tough series," predicted his son, Paul Wise, who grew up in Glencoe and now lives in Chicago. "(Bryce) Harper will be back (following an injury) and Washington's pitching is really good. The Cubs have some of the best batters in baseball and they have some of the best pitchers in baseball, so it will be a pretty even matchup."

The Nationals have gone 0-3 in postseason series since the franchise relocated to the nation's capital in 2005. That was not lost on some Cubs fans.

"The Nationals don't have a good postseason track record, but last year the Cubs didn't have a good track record either, so we'll see," Bartholow said.

Other fans pointed to Nationals manager Dusty Baker's lack of postseason prowess, given a mere three playoff series victories in more than two decades as manager. Baker was manager of the Cubs from 2003 to 2006.

"I'm very happy to go up against Dusty Baker because, in my personal opinion, I believe he is the worst postseason manager in baseball," said Highland Park's Dick Saffro.

Wilmette's Mike Akin was optimistic about what lies ahead for the Cubs, noting the recent return of players like Willson Contreras and Addison Russell.

"As a Cubs fan, you had years of expecting disappointment, and that tempts you. But I have confidence that things will work out," Akin said. "Guys are coming back who are going to contribute a lot. I don't expect them to be in the World Series every year, but they have made the playoffs three years in a row.

"What more can you want?"

Volunteers celebrate democracy

Help sign up people on Voter Registration Day

BY KATHY ROUTLIFFE
Pioneer Press

The stream of parents walking their youngsters to hockey practice at the Wilmette Park District's Centennial Ice Arena Sept. 26 moved swiftly, but Eleanor Lipinski and Ann Roberts were still able to ask each adult the same question: Were they registered to vote?

The answer they got in almost every case was "yes." Sometimes the passerby would say he or she wasn't from Wilmette. That didn't matter, Lipinski and Roberts said: They could register anyone in Illinois to vote.

The two women, both members of the League of Women Voters of Wilmette, were at the arena as part of this year's National Voter Registration Day. They were ready to help people register, and they were armed with information for anyone simply wanting to know more about the process.

"Most people have been registered, so that's encouraging," Lipinski said.

"But we do get questions," Roberts added. "Some people want to know if they have to re-register, and we're able to tell them they don't, unless they've changed addresses."

Other league members staffed similar tables at eight other locations, including the Wilmette Public Library, Village Hall, the Park District's Mallinckrodt Center, Mather Retirement Community, New Trier High School's Winnetka campus and Niles North and Niles West high schools in Skokie.

"National Voters Day has been going on since 2012," said Allyson Haut, one of the Wilmette league's co-presidents. "Over 3,500 groups have taken part, but for the past five years, the league has been one of the largest groups on the ground."

According to the National Voter Registration website, the day is "a national holiday celebrating our democracy ... Every year, millions of Americans find themselves unable to vote because they miss a registration deadline, don't update their registration or aren't sure how to register. National Voter Registration Day wants to make sure everyone has the opportunity to vote."

According to the website, more than 750,000 people registered to vote in last year's campaign.

Trish Nealon, who co-chairs voter services for the Wilmette chapter, said plans for the 2017 event began in July.

Ann Roberts, left, and Eleanor Lipinski, both volunteers with the League of Women Voters of Wilmette, talk during a break in their National Voter Registration Day duties at the Centennial Ice Arena in Wilmette Sept. 26. The Wilmette League chapter was one of many groups taking part in the nationwide registration effort.

By the end of the day, League volunteers registered 52 people and helped 17 others check their registration or change addresses, she said. They also made contact with and handed out basic voter information to 318 people, she said.

Although Voter Registration Day is over, people can still register in several different ways, Nealon said.

Illinois is one of 10 states with automatic registration, which allows eligible voters to become registered automatically when they apply for a driver's license or state identification at the offices of the Illinois Secretary of State.

Governor Bruce Rauner signed the automatic voting legislation into law in August.

For more information on registering to vote, citizens can visit the League of Women Voters of Wilmette website, at www.lwwwilmette.org/, the National Voter Registration Day site at nationalvoterregistrationday.org/, Cook County Clerk David Orr's office at www.cookcountyclerk.com or the Illinois online voter registration application site at <https://ova.elections.il.gov/>.

Students hurt, school bus driver ticketed after crash

BY JENNIFER JOHNSON
Pioneer Press

Two elementary school students were treated for minor injuries after the school bus they were on Sept. 25 in Niles was struck by another vehicle then hit three other cars, Niles police said in a news release.

The school bus driver, a 74-year-old Chicago man, has been ticketed following the multi-vehicle accident.

An investigation determined that the school bus driver failed to yield to oncoming traffic while turning left, said Niles police Cmdr. Robert Tornabene.

Two students on the bus, ages 6 and 8, and the 37-year-old driver of another car were treated for minor injuries by paramedics and taken to Advocate Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge following the crash, which occurred shortly before 9 a.m., Niles police said.

According to police, the bus, which was providing service for East Maine School District 63, was driving south on Milwaukee Avenue, approaching Main Street, when it entered the left turn lane. As the bus began turning left to head east on Main Street, it was struck by a car that was traveling north on Milwaukee Avenue, police said.

The impact caused the bus to strike three cars on Main Street that were stopped for a red light, said Tornabene.

The bus driver was not injured, police said.

East Maine School District 63 spokeswoman Janet Spector Bishop said the bus was en route to Nelson Elementary School in Niles at the time of the accident and the only passengers were the two students and a school employee.

Bishop said in a statement that all three passengers "were conscious and speaking with first responders, all were transported via ambulance to the hospital, where the students' parents met them. One student and the employee were treated for minor injuries and all three passengers were released later in the day."

The bus is owned by Alltown Bus Service, police and the school district said.

"Naturally, we are relieved and grateful that no serious injuries occurred," Bishop said. "At this time, we are working closely with Alltown and with the Niles Police Department to investigate the incident and assess next steps."

Harwood Heights renews pact for major crime assistance

Staff Report

Harwood Heights trustees renewed the village's continued participation in a network that provides assistance in the event of major crime.

Board members approved the resolution, one of the items on their consent agenda. Under the proposal, the village joins other communities in a Major Case Assistance Team agreement.

The agreement is made "in recognition of the fact that local law enforcement capabilities are enhanced by having access to regionalized facilities, programs and the assistance of other departments," read the introduction to the agreement.

"The purpose of entering into such an intergovernmental agreement is to gain access to mutual aid when required," the agreement added.

After the meeting, Harwood Heights police Chief Frank Biagi said he hopes there's aren't any incidents that require the department to make use of the task force, but he's glad the pact is in place nonetheless.

It's "a tremendous asset," he said. He said the village would call for the Major Case Assistance Team, only in selective cases.

When used, though, "what we have is basically a slew of great detectives, who are experienced, from all these other towns who would come here and assist. Every department basically puts one member in, one of their detectives in this task force. They're trained by the task force; it's ongoing training. They have forensics, they have surveillance units who will follow and look for people, and if there's a major event in your city they will also come out to assist you.

"Fortunately for us, we haven't had to use it," he added. "We don't want to use it — but it's there, and it's at our disposal."

Glenview police seek public's help in credit card fraud investigation

By ALEXANDRA KUKULKA
Pioneer Press

The Glenview Police Department is asking for the public's help in identifying two people caught on surveillance cameras as part of an identity theft and fraud investigation.

The pair is known to frequent Trader Joe's in several Chicago area towns and attempt to steal credit cards from shoppers, according to a Glenview Police Department Facebook post. The individuals stole from a shopper at a Trader Joe's in Glenview on Aug. 28, said Glenview police spokesman Sgt. Jim Foley.

They have been seen at retail stores in six towns, including Glenview, police said. A similar incident was reported in Naperville, Foley said.

According to police, one person will distract a shopper while the other person attempts to steal the shopper's credit cards. They immediately use the stolen credit cards at different stores in the area, like Best Buy and Target, police said.

Police released surveillance photos of the pair, which show a woman with brown hair wearing a tan sun hat and a man wearing a black shirt and black hat in one photo and a button down shirt in another photo. Police said the man reportedly speaks with a European accent.

Foley reminded residents to be aware of their surroundings while shopping.

"(Residents) should keep a close eye on their purses," Foley said. "I wouldn't leave them in the cart because you do get distracted easily at a store."

Anyone who can identify the pair should contact the Glenview Police Department tip line at 847-901-6055 or gpdtipline@glenview.il.us.

OPINION

Too many of us tweet instead of talking

RANDY BLASER

We need to talk.

As a nation, as individuals, as members of political parties, as people with different beliefs, as people with different opinions, as people with grievances and concerns, and as people who need to understand.

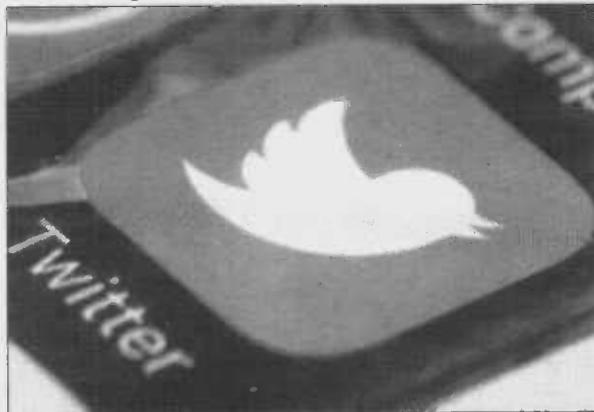

But we're not doing that.

Instead, we are tweeting. Instead, we are posting on Facebook.

Instead, we're Snapchatting up a storm.

But there is little talking, little real communication.

Instead, the nation is having a nervous breakdown while bumping along from issue to issue like pinballs, never really understanding where the tweeting and chatting and posting is taking us or what is the point of it all.

So we go from condemning the Confederate flag and calling those who fought for the South traitors with just a minimal understanding of the Civil War, to tearing down statues of the South's heroes with little distinction about one commander or some other or some founding father.

Is a Catholic judge an orthodox Catholic or just a Catholic? Can an orthodox Catholic even be a judge?

President Donald Trump is a hater, some say. OK, then what do you say about him?

Football players who take a knee during the National Anthem to protest the racism that still exists in this country and those who do so in solidarity with the protestors are true patriots, some say. Others call them mealy-mouthed cowards.

If you don't bake a cake you're anti-gay. If you don't support Black Lives Matter you're a racist.

Therein is the problem. Instead of engaging in conversation or dialogue, we are labeling each other. He's a racist, a sexist, a bigot, a misogynist, a homophobe, etc., etc., etc.

And when you label a person, you shut down all chance for dialogue, all chance for discussion, all chance for change. Who wants to talk to a racist, et al.?

I prefer not to label people. No one is all one thing. No one is irredeemable.

Don't get me wrong. I don't want to ignore racism, or sexism or misogyny or all the other bad things that no one really wants. But I don't want to paint with a broad brush, either.

Instead of labeling people, I want to identify what they say or do as being the issue and the problem. Not them.

People may say something that is racist or sexist or homophobic. And when they do, we should be able to say, "Hey, what you said is racist. Here's why?" Then I can engage and dialogue and maybe change minds.

But I can't if I shout, "You're a racist!" That's the nuclear bomb of discussion. The war is over.

The same thing applies with people's actions. If somebody doesn't want to make a cake because they think it goes against their religion in a certain instance, that person has to be respected and acknowledge that their thinking has taken them as far as it can. Then explain why it is homophobic, if that's what you think it is. Maybe they'll see that point of view.

What we all need to realize right now is that when you start labeling people and identifying them as a problem, you are wading into very dangerous waters. It is human nature that when you identify a problem, you have to find a solution.

The most recent group to label and identify another group as "a problem" came up with an idea to solve that problem they called "the final solution."

I think you can see how dangerous it can become to label people.

In his great speech proposing the Civil Rights Act in the summer of 1963, President John F. Kennedy said it will take more than changing the law to resolve America's racial issue. It will take change in the home of every American.

Have our hearts become too hardened to change?

Humans on the ground could learn a thing or two from geese in flight

PAUL SASSONE

What is that noise?

I glanced around in search of who was blaring a radio that loud.

But, as I stood in the back yard on my way to the garage I realized it wasn't a radio. It wasn't music. It wasn't even talking.

It was honking.

Look, up in the sky.

It's a bird.

It's a plane.

No, it's a bird. I was right the first time.

High above me in V formation were a couple dozen geese gracefully going somewhere and honking up a storm.

I was entranced. Why do they fly in a V and how do they know to do it?

Later I looked it up. Geese fly in a V because that formation allows them to glide more often which conserves energy. The V shape is aerodynamic and reduces air resistance.

This enables geese to fly longer distances. A flock of geese can fly 70 percent farther by flying in V formation than by flying in isolation. There is an equation for this but I don't know how to type it.

Another benefit of the V formation is that each bird has an unobstructed field of vision, which make it easier for the geese to keep track of one another and communicate (hence the honking) while in flight.

OK, but how do geese know to fly in V formation? Which Christopher Columbus goose discovered the benefits of the flying V and explained them to all the other geese and taught them how to do it?

That is one of history's mysteries.

I didn't know any of that as I watched the geese gracefully fly through the sky. But, these geese made me think.

Somehow, geese had discovered they could go farther, expend less energy and better look out for each other if they worked together. They cooperate and they all benefit.

Could we humans learn something from geese?

Could we make more progress and better look out for one another if we cooperated more?

Nah!

Don't be a silly goose.

Banned Books Week seeks to douse flames of culture war

CHARLES SELLE

Among Waukegan's favorite sons and daughters, for me it's a toss-up between Jack Benny and Ray Bradbury. Except for this week.

Others may include Otto Graham or Jerome Whitehead or Jerry Orbach as their favorites, but none of them penned the classic novel "Fahrenheit 451." Bradbury did.

During Banned Books Week, which ran Sept. 24-30, the late author — who even has a park named for him in a quiet city neighborhood off Washington Street — gets my vote for Waukegan's favorite son on the strength of the 1953 book that paints a dim picture of a future America.

With some of our national government figures doing good imitations of "doublespeak" — war is peace; peace is war — from George Orwell's "1984," it's a good time to remember that in certain countries across the globe and communities across the nation, books are banned, like they are in "Fahrenheit 451."

Banned Books Week is an annual event that celebrates reading and the freedom to read. Librarians, bookstores (those that are left), book publishers, teachers and, of course, journalists, are big supporters of Banned Books Week. Especially this year.

The coalition of groups that sponsor Banned Books Week is highlighting this year the importance of the First Amendment, which guarantees our right to read. That guarantee even includes reading so-called unpopular or "dangerous" books, some of which are found in your local libraries.

I've always opined that when the real revolution comes along, journalists, librarians and nuns will be lined up shoulder-to-shoulder in front of the firing squads, rounded up for railing against a new regime's crackdown on the First Amendment and its collecting of books to be burned.

Which is what "Fahrenheit 451" is all about. The book used to be required reading in high school English classes. I hope it still is.

If you are unfamiliar with the book, its title stems from the temperature at which paper burns. In Bradbury's America of the future, books are banned, and his fictional firemen don't go into homes to save people. Instead, they go into their houses to confiscate their books and then burn them.

"Fahrenheit 451" is Bradbury's cautionary tale about government gone awry and citizens ignoring reading and being dependent on what was "new media" back in the 1950s — television. It resonates further with today's "new media."

Today, we don't have books banned willy-nilly, but, increasingly, books are challenged to be banned for content and language.

Unlike days past, when books were yanked from library shelves because of controversial political ideas, the current list of the 10 books sought to be banned mainly from school libraries have a lot to do with LGBT themes, or language that is sexually explicit, according to the Chicago-based American Library Association. One of the books, a children's tome, was written by Bill Cosby and challenged because of the criminal sexual allegations lodged against the once-loved entertainer.

The ALA has been compiling its "banned book" list since 2000, and looking back, Harry Potter books have made the list, along with some perennials, such as "The Catcher in the Rye," "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," "Of Mice and Men," "The Color Purple" and others. Lots of them.

Not on the list is "Fahrenheit 451." But with the current fiery culture and diminished value of reading being fanned from Washington, D.C., it may only be a matter of time.

A look at locals in the arts

BY MYRNA PETLICKI
Pioneer Press

Here's a look at the latest news about suburban authors, actors, artists, musicians and more.

New view: A dozen distinguished local artists spent a year of workshops, study and critiques as part of the second Chicago cohort of Spertus Institute's Midwest Jewish Artists Lab. Each created an artwork around the theme of boundaries. "Outside Inside: Exploring Boundaries and Otherness," an exhibition of those works, will be displayed at the institute's Ground Level Arts Lab Gallery through Jan. 7. Suburban participants are Stewart Cherlin of Park Ridge, Suzanne Horwitz of Highland Park, and Julie Cowan, Dorit Jordan Dotan and Charlotte Hart, all of Evanston.

SPERTUS INSTITUTE

Several suburban artists, including Julie Cowan of Evanston (work pictured) spent a year of workshops, study and critiques as part of the second Chicago cohort of Spertus Institute's Midwest Jewish Artists Lab.

Violent past: Morton Grove native Victor Bayona is doing violence design for — and also appearing in — Akvavit Theatre's "Ghosts & Zombies," through Oct. 29 at Strawdog Theatre. It's a rare onstage role for Bayona who has created violence moments for productions across the Chicago area with R&D Choreography. For tickets, go to chicagonordic.org.

AKVAVIT THEATRE

Morton Grove native Victor Bayona is doing violence design for — and also appearing in — Akvavit Theatre's "Ghosts & Zombies," through Oct. 29 at Strawdog Theatre.

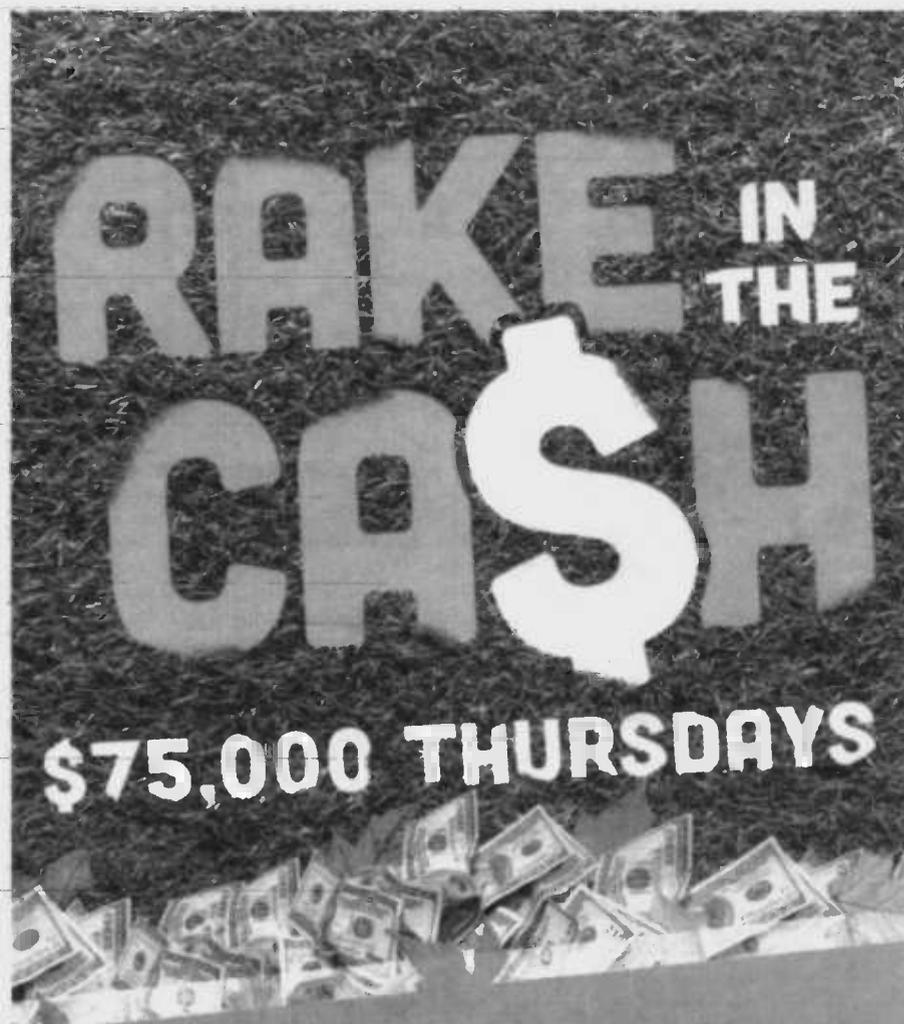

Who could have predicted?: A blind date goes awry in Gina Gionfriddo's "Becky Shaw," through Nov. 12 at Windy City Playhouse. The cast includes Oak Park resident Michael Pogue, who has performed with many of the top theater companies in the Chicago area, including Court, American Blues, Steppenwolf, Remy Bumppo, Teatro Vista, Oak Park Festival, Eclipse and Redtwist. For tickets, go to windycityplayhouse.com.

Chance to dance: Evanston elementary school student Paula Hlava is launching her professional performing career in a big way. She plays Ballet Girl in the cast of Porchlight Music Theatre's production of "Billy Elliot the Musical," Oct. 6–Nov. 19, at the Ruth Page Center for the Arts. Oak Park elementary school student Alejandro Medina plays Tall Boy. Grownup suburbanite Sean Fortunato of Evanston plays Dad. The musical tells the story of a young boy growing up in a mining town who prefers ballet slippers to boxing gloves. For tickets, go to porchlightmusictheatre.org.

One of the first: Recent North Central College graduate Becca Sheehan, a Hinsdale native, is cast in Other Theatre's world premiere production of "The Making of a Modern Folk Hero," through Oct. 29 at Chicago Dramatists. It tells what happens when a washed-up actor is hired by a congressman to play a superhero for a publicity stunt. Sheehan has worked with Northern Sky Theater, Explore Theater and Chicago Shakespeare Theater. For tickets, go to theothertheatrecompany.com.

MOMMY ON A SHOESTRING

Let's play

Tips for including more time for fun

BETH ENGELMAN
Mommy on a Shoestring

It's time to turn off the video games, silence the cell phones and throw away the rulebooks. October is here and it's time to play.

"Open-ended, freestyle play is the very best vehicle for our kids to learn about the world," says Meredith Sinclair, play advocate, author and blogger at www.MeredithPlays.com. "It helps children develop social, emotional, and physical skills and grow as independent little humans."

For many, giving kids more time to play is appealing but not always easy, especially given most parents' tendency — intentional or not — to over-schedule our kids' lives. Sinclair understands this dilemma. Her book, "Well Played: The Ultimate Guide to Awakening Your Family's Playful Spirit," is a parent's go-to resource for finding simple ways to incorporate more fun into your family's life. I recently spoke with Sinclair, as well as other "play experts," to find out how we can create more opportunities to just play.

Schedule time for spontaneity

It may seem counterintuitive, but Sinclair recommends scheduling time for spontaneity. "Just as we plan of every other extra-curricular activity, intentionally leave gaps in your family's schedule for free, open-ended, spontaneous fun. If we leave no space for play, it's impossible to expect it to show up."

Create a space for play

"If you build it, they will come," says Sinclair, who advocates designating a space in your home where your kids can create and explore playfully. "Keep a stash of recycled materials, cardboard boxes, colored tape, aluminum foil, pipe cleaners and other open-ended supplies in a kid-accessible spot. Then encourage your kids to direct their own playful creations."

Find outlets that encourage open-ended play

"With research centering on the importance of play in a child's life and healthy development, we believe every day can be a day of play," says Elizabeth McChesney, director of children's services at the Harold Washington Library. To celebrate the power of play, McChesney, along with her colleagues at the Harold Washington Library, are hosting their third annual Day of Play from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Oct. 7. This year's theme is "Play with Your Place: Playing at Home and Everywhere," and will feature household items transformed into play. Activities include the Global Cardboard Challenge, www.cardboardchallenge.com, where roughly 2,000 boxes are "dumped" in the middle of the Winter Garden and children are invited to build, transform and discover. There is also a fort area, puppet-making station and live music. For more information, visit bit.ly/2hqD7rK.

Let play evolve

As a mom of a sixth-grader, I know the days of open-ended, imaginative play opportunities are few and far between. When my son was younger, my house was filled with recycled junk robots, cardboard airports and shoebox "pets."

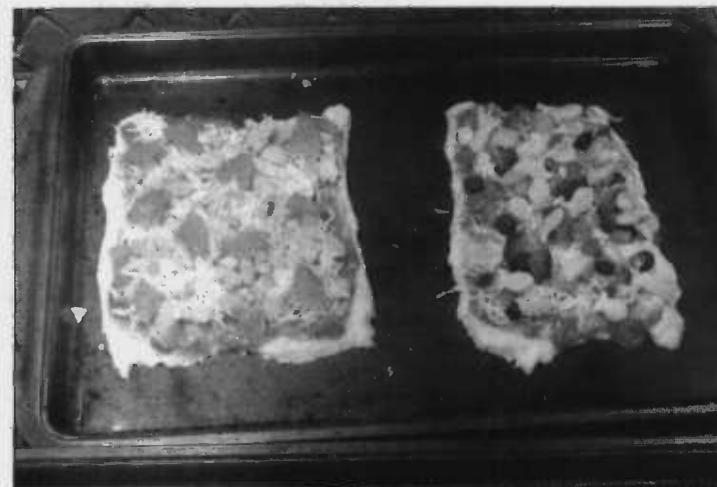

Take heart, open-ended fun doesn't need to end after elementary school; it just needs to grow with your kids. One of the best ways to get your older kids to engage is through food, which is exactly what Glenview mom Katie Bauer did with her four kids ages 6 through 16. "I wanted to do something fun and creative, that all four kids could enjoy together." Bauer set up a pizza-making challenge where each child had to create a pizza using randomly selected ingredients. To make the challenge even more "fun," each contestant had to eat at least one piece of his or her pizza. Although the pizzas might not be the most delicious meal the kids ever ate — pizza topped with Goldfish crackers and M&M's might not be for everyone — the fun of the activity and the memories it made will last a lifetime.

Glenview resident Katie Bauer involves her four kids, ages 6 to 16, in a joint activity with a pizza-making challenge that includes some interesting toppings such as M&M's, Cheerios and broccoli.

Meditation for the antsy

Can't sit still? There are ways to achieve state of relaxation without closing your eyes in a quiet room

By Claire Altschuler
Chicago Tribune

I want to meditate. I really do. Everyone from celebrities to fitness instructors to neurosurgeons tell us it's the answer to all that ails us. Having trouble at work? Meditate. Struggling with health issues? Meditate. Want to find your purpose in life? You guessed it: Meditate.

Although growing evidence supports these claims, many of us find it difficult to sit still. The idea of sitting in a quiet room, closing our eyes and chanting a mantra just makes us more anxious. We know that as soon as we get settled, the dog will bark, the phone will ring or the baby will start to cry.

"I think most everybody has trouble with meditation at first," says Peg Baim, clinical director of training at the Benson-Henry Institute for Mind Body Medicine at Massachusetts General Hospital. "People often say, 'I can't meditate because I can't sit still or my mind never stops.'"

The good news is there are types of meditation that don't require being still. "There are other ways to break the train of everyday thought" than sitting cross-legged in a quiet room, says Dr. Herbert Benson, director emeritus of the Benson-Henry Institute.

Effective meditation, he says, requires only two things: repetition of a word, a sound or a movement, and the ability to turn off everyday thoughts. When those are combined, the body naturally triggers the relaxation response, a powerful antidote to everyday stress.

Yoga, running, bicycling and walking are just some of the activities Benson recommends. Each involves rhythmic, repetitive movements that can be connected to a word or phrase — a mantra — such as "left-right" linked to foot-falls, or "in-out" linked to breathing. When the meditator focuses on the mantra and how the body feels, thoughts drift away, providing relief from stress and the physiological damage it can cause.

Chronic stress has serious negative consequences for our health, say experts. According to Benson, "60 to 90 percent of physician visits" involve stress-related illnesses. That's because we react to stress as if we are in actual physical danger.

In the classic "fight or flight" response, our bodies prepare us to either confront or run away from an aggressor by increasing heart rate, elevating blood pressure and secreting hormones such as adrenaline and cortisol. In the case of real danger, these changes help us respond more quickly. Once the threat is eliminated, the body returns to normal.

But when ongoing work or personal issues are the source of stress, our bodies remain in an agitated state for extended periods of time, causing harm. Experts believe that chronic stress leads to physiological changes that exacerbate or give rise to many common maladies, including anxiety, depression, high blood pressure, digestive issues, insomnia and tension headaches.

Chronic stress has even been shown to cause changes in our DNA. While activating the relaxation response won't cure all diseases, meditation can ameliorate them, says Benson.

Barri Leiner Grant, an author and interiors stylist from Chicago, was introduced to meditation as part of her regular yoga class. She enjoyed it so much she started going on retreats, where she learned to meditate for longer periods of time. She also used an app called Headspace, which helped make meditating a daily habit.

Leiner Grant says meditation has helped her relax and feel more grounded. She also credits it with making her a better listener and a more patient parent.

Others have seen these changes too. "People started to notice almost immediately, Leiner Grant says. "They'd say things like, 'You have such a nice energy,' or 'you're so calm.'"

Different types of meditation work for different people, says Dr. Melinda Ring, executive director of Northwestern Medicine's Osler Center for Integrative Medicine. Whether one sits still or moves, she says, almost any activity will work as long as the practitioner has the "intention of being present, being aware and developing that mind-body connection."

Yoga, tai chi and qi gong are especially well-suited for those who want to pursue active meditation. All three practices use movement to draw attention to the body and the breath, concentrating the mind on the present and activating what Baim calls the "adaptive network," which "spares the brain from returning to the stress network" we usually inhabit. In addition to helping us relax, these practices increase flexibility and strength, boost circulation and improve overall health.

At Chill, a meditation center in Chicago, yoga is used to facilitate seated meditation. In one class, students prepare for meditation by first performing a series of yoga poses that stretch the legs and strengthen the body's core muscles. This helps participants focus and makes it easier to sit comfortably for longer periods of time.

"Being uncomfortable is the biggest hindrance to having a good meditation practice," says Claire Mark, instructor and co-founder of Chill. Yoga is used "to support the meditation."

Margo Mallar, a fundraising specialist from Barre, Mass., says she appreciates how easily she can incorporate active meditation into her day. "I can be mindfully walking (while) going from the parking lot to the grocery store," or while walking up stairs or commuting to work, she says. When Mallar walks, she focuses her mind by counting her steps or saying a series of thank-yous in different languages. "It's like a rosary of sorts," she says. "It draws my attention into my body" and away from everyday thoughts.

At the Insight Meditation Society in Barre, Mass., seated meditation is alternated with walking. While both forms provide calmness and clarity, sitting emphasizes tranquility and walking emphasizes energy, says Sharon Salzberg, author and co-founder of the Society. Together, she says, they provide "a really good balance."

Whether sitting or walking, "meditation is really about attention training," Salzberg says. It is like strengthening a muscle "to let go gently of a distraction and then returning our attention to the original object," which may be a mantra, the breath or awareness of the body's movements. "We're always letting go and coming back. That's really the transformational aspect of meditation."

When a cat won't poop in the litter box anymore

By Cathy M. Rosenthal
Tribune Content Agency

Q: Our 6-year-old housecat stopped pooping in the litter box, but she still urinates in it. We find poop all over the house, but never urine. She doesn't have a favorite place to evacuate; it's on rugs, hardwood floors — she isn't hiding it. We find it out in the open and it trails off. It seems like she continues to evacuate while she walks away. We've been to our vet and there is nothing physically wrong.

Nothing in the house has changed; no one new and no renovations. It's the same litter box, same room and same litter. Her litter box is in a room we spend a lot of time in and she often is in there with us. Her food is in another room. We do have another cat, her sister. We've had both since they were kittens and have never had any problems until recently. They get along great, playing and grooming each other.

So far, we have tried a new litter box, removed the top from the litter box and did bloodwork at the vet. We're out of ideas. Can you help us?

— Steve N., Massapequa, NY

A: Cats don't generally poop while they're walking. I am not a veterinarian, but it sounds a little like fecal incontinence. Your veterinarian probably ruled that out, but if you are not sure if he or she did, please discuss this with your veterinarian.

If she's healthy and squatting to poop, then we need to dig a little deeper to figure out why she suddenly won't use the litter box. I know you went through a list of things that could cause that to happen, but let me offer a few more possibilities.

Cats are extremely sensitive to scents. Were any new scents sprayed into the air or a new air freshener located or plugged near the litter box? Did you use ammonia or citrus-smelling cleaners to clean the litter box? These scents are off-putting to cats.

Sometimes, if a cat is startled near the litter box or experienced an especially difficult bowel movement (something you wouldn't know happened), he or she will associate the litter box with that experience and will poop someplace else. My suggestion is to add a second litter box to your home, perhaps in a more private space. Use a fine grain, unscented litter, and fill two to three inches high. If she starts to use this box, then you know she might have had a bad experience at the other box. Let me know if this suggestion helps her.

Q: Do you have any information on area shelters where you can adopt pets? Originally, I was looking for a sheltie dog, but I am expanding my preference, and just looking for other shelters where I can adopt.

— Char F., Franklin Park, IL

A: You can search several animal shelters and rescue groups all at one time on Petfinder.com. Enter your ZIP code and the type of dog you want based on size, age, and even whether they are housetrained or not. You can indicate how far you are willing to travel to adopt a dog. Once you provide the search criteria, scroll through the online gallery of pets available for adoption. It might be an easier way to find your next canine companion.

Q: I have an 11-year-old Maltese. He'll be 12 in February. For the last two years, we've noticed that whenever people come over, he gets extremely anxious and whines throughout their entire visit. He humps his toys. He licks his privates. I've read that as dogs get older they become more anxious. I've tried an anxiety shirt. It doesn't work. — Monica K., Deer Park, NY

A: Some dogs do get more anxious as they get older, which is why there are so many "behavioral health products" on the market now. Some of these products are available as daily supplements through veterinarians; some are available in treat form over the counter and online.

Many of these products contain "theanine," an amino acid that has been shown to impact mood and reduce anxiety in dogs. Try an over-the-counter product, and if it doesn't reduce your dog's anxiety, talk to your veterinarian about one of the daily behavioral health products they carry.

VAN can help protect online purchases

Dear Help Squad,

I read your Aug. 31 column, "Free trial turns into expensive monthly membership" and I just wanted to add one more to-do regarding consumer protection for internet credit card purchases. Ben could have used a credit card feature called a virtual account number or VAN. My Mastercard provider offers this option, which is meant for online purchases where you do not wish to give your actual credit card number for fear of hacking or unscrupulous use by the seller.

I can generate a VAN in seconds simply by going to my account online. It is only valid for a specific seller and can be set with a dollar limit and expiration of up to 12 months. It can also be used for recurring charges. If Ben wanted to make a purchase of $4.96 from 4K Health, he could have set his VAN limit to $5, generated the 16-digit number and used that at check-out. If 4K tried to charge more than that before shipping the second bottle, they would have been out of luck. Perhaps 4K would have contacted Ben, but at least he would have been in control of the situation.

I have also set up text alerts with my credit card company that provide my daily balance and monitor whether any purchases were made over a dollar limit that I pre-set. This helps in preventing identity fraud as well.

Dennis (retired consumer finance executive), Naperville

I really appreciated Dennis writing in with this useful information, and as a result of his email, I contacted Citi, Visa and CreditCards.com for their online purchasing protection advice.

Citi Global Cards spokesperson Jennifer Bombardier confirmed the process Dennis outlined telling me all of Citi's branded consumer credit cards (except Costco) offer VANs. She also clarified that VANs are not available on debit cards.

"All purchases made with a temporary VAN appear on a cardmember's monthly statement, and will include the virtual account number that was used for each transaction," Bombardier said. "In addition to virtual account numbers, Citi also offers a range of push notifications for transactions ranging from 'card not present' (online) charges, to overseas charges, to any charges in excess of customers' pre-set limits."

CATHY CUNNINGHAM

When I asked CreditCards.com senior industry analyst Matt Schulz which card issuers offer virtual account numbers, he pointed to Citi and also to Bank of America.

Shulz pointed out that credit cards often offer other perks that protect consumers.

"Many come with extended warranties for bought items, purchase protections for broken or lost goods and even guaranteed returns, in which a card issuer might accept a return on an item that would be too old to return to a retailer."

Specific to the topic of deceptive free trial marketing, Visa spokesperson Sandra Chu told me, "Visa monitors its payment network to identify merchants with excessive levels of cardholder disputes, which may indicate the use of deceptive marketing practices. In fact, merchants who use deceptive marketing practices have up to 20 times as many consumer disputes as the average e-commerce merchant. Visa requires the merchant and its bank to take corrective action to reduce excessive consumer disputes, or risk termination of Visa acceptance privileges."

Visa, in conjunction with the FTC and Better Business Bureau, provides the following cautions regarding free trials:

- Take time to read and understand all terms and conditions.
- Pay attention to any pre-checked boxes before you submit your card information. Failing to un-check boxes may bind you to unwanted terms and conditions.
- Review your card statements for any unauthorized charges, and notify the card issuer promptly of unauthorized charges.
- Try to resolve the situation with the merchant. If unsuccessful, contact the card issuer immediately to dispute the charge.

BOOKS

Mr. and Mrs. Biblioracle recently re-watched and enjoyed all 76 episodes of the TV series "Friday Night Lights." But after devouring five seasons in a little over two weeks, Mr. Biblioracle realized that this sort of reconnection is even better with books.

PAUL DRINKWATER/NBC

Revisiting small-screen gem

Re-watching a TV series is pleasurable, but it doesn't stack up to rereading books

By John Warner
Chicago Tribune

Mrs. Biblioracle and I recently finished what I believe to be our third (or possibly fourth) re-watching of the "Friday Night Lights" television series. Seventy-six episodes originally aired over five seasons were consumed in a little over two weeks. I'll let you do the math on the episodes per day.

Following the final episode, we both felt a little bereft, mourning the end of a world in which we'd spent so much time with such pleasure. Our re-watchings are spaced out sufficiently in order to purge many of the specifics from our memories, so while the overall trajectory is known, the show maintains the capacity to surprise.

And, of course, seeing something again allows us to recognize the previously obscured. NBC marketed the show to teens — to low ratings — but it's pretty clear in hindsight that it's an extended narrative about a marriage of equals in a world that doesn't treat men and women equally. With Mrs. Biblioracle and I having recently marked our 17th year of marriage and 25th as a couple, I appreciate this more each time through.

Another byproduct of finishing "Friday Night Lights" was recognizing that this sort of connection happens all the time with books. Not every time, not every book, but maybe 15 or 20 times a year. Most recently it was with Jonathan Dee's "The Locals," a kaleidoscopic look at a small Massachusetts town in the years between 9/11 and the 2008 financial meltdown. Populated with a dozen memorable characters, my time inside Dee's world erased any concerns I had inside my own.

The television shows that can deliver the same power are relatively few and far between for me: "The West Wing," "ER," "Freaks and Geeks," "The Wire," "Deadwood" and "Breaking Bad" among them.

The very thought of this kind of immersive television is relatively new. You won't see many people celebrating the re-watching of the prime-time hits of my youth — "Dallas," "The Love Boat," "Dynasty" — as anything other than exercises in mocking nostalgia.

On the other hand, on a whim, I recently reread "Bridge to Terabithia" by Katherine Paterson for perhaps the 30th time since I first encountered it in grade school. I'm staring at Katherine Dunn's "Geek Love" on the shelf thinking it's about time for another trip through the universe of the Binewski family circus. And right next to "Geek Love" is "Skippy Dies" by Paul Murray, which I have not yet reread, which seems a foolish oversight. There are Flannery O'Connor's "Wise Blood," Laurie Colwin's "Goodbye Without Leaving," John Williams' "Stoner," Evan S. Connell's "Mr. Bridge" and "Mrs. Bridge," Richard Ford's "The Sportswriter" and Frederick Exley's "A Fan's Notes."

Just thinking about the books makes me feel fuller, more human.

I enjoy many television shows, but the ones I want to watch again and again are few. I'll keep searching out those transcendent TV experiences, but books will always remain a more reliable source for what I'm craving.

Book recommendations from the Biblioracle

John Warner tells you what to read next based on the last five books you've read.

1. "Island Beneath the Sea" by Isabel Allende
2. "All The Light We Cannot See" by Anthony Doerr
3. "The Nightingale" by Kristin Hannah
4. "Lilac Girls" by Martha Hall Kelly
5. "The Zookeeper's Wife" by Diane Ackerman
— Marilyn A., Des Plaines

This week all recommendations will be books I wish I had time to reread. In this case, one I already mentioned: "Goodbye Without Leaving" by Laurie Colwin.

1. "Stay With Me" by Ayobami Adebayo
2. "Radium Girls: The Dark Story of America's Shining Women" by Kate Moore
3. "The Tea Girl of Hummingbird Lane" by Lisa See
4. "Trials of the Earth: The True Story of a Pioneer Woman" by Mary Mann Hamilton
5. "Kiss Carlo" by Adriana Trigiani
— Joanne C., Evergreen Park

This is a writer whom I'm hoping has another book coming soon: "The World Without You" by Joshua Henkin.

1. "Meddling Klds" by Edgar Cantero
2. "Ten Dead Comedians" by Fred Van Lente
3. "The Woman in Cabin 10" by Ruth Ware
4. "Six of Crows" by Leigh Bardugo
5. "The Night Sister" by Jennifer McMahon
— Nicole E., Merrillville, Ind.

Mystery and suspense is sometimes a tough genre for a reread, since so much of the power rests on the reveal, but Kate Atkinson's "Case Histories" — the first in her Jackson Brodie series — makes both a good first impression and stands up to a second bite.

La Lumiere School

La Lumiere School believes that education involves the formation of the entire person, and there are no shortcuts in an enterprise of this importance. On La Lumiere's wooded campus in La Porte, Indiana, relationships are forged founded on the dignity of every member of its community. From there, the school challenges and supports one another as together they develop character, ignite scholarship and cultivate faith. Graduation finds seniors who are well on their way to growing into the best versions of themselves. Hungry for the next challenge, students believe that they're at the helm of their own journey and are ready to shine their light in the world.

La Lumiere School is located at 6801 N. Wilhelm Road in La Porte, Indiana. For more information, call 219-326-7450 or visit lalumiere.org.

Lake Forest Country Day School

Lake Forest Country Day School delivers a diverse and rich educational experience grounded in academics, arts and athletics to 2-year-old through eighth-grade students. LFCDS places an emphasis on the whole child, including rigorous academics coupled with a strong social-emotional learning curriculum.

"Focusing on social-emotional learning doesn't come at the expense of academics. In actuality, it serves to dramatically amplify a child's success as a student," says Head of School Bob Whelan. Whelan notes that scores for students with social-emotional instruction are 11 percent higher than those of students without this training.

In 2015, LFCDS launched a highly successful fall Special Speaker Series, which focuses on providing parents with access to leading child-development experts. This year, LFCDS welcomes "New York Times" parenting columnist and best-selling author

Dr. Lisa Damour who will discuss "Untangled: Guiding Young People Through the Seven Transitions into Adulthood." Damour's lecture takes place at 10 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 26. Earlier this fall, LFCDS hosted Director of the Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence Dr. Marc Brackett who spoke on "Educating the Whole Child, A Community Conversation on Emotional Intelligence." All of the speaker events are free and open to the public.

To learn more about the LFCDS Experience, visit the fall Open House offered at 9 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 19, and Tuesday, Nov. 14. Open Houses provide an opportunity to tour the campus, speak with teachers and students, observe classes in session, and meet families from the LFCDS community.

LFCDS is located at 145 S. Green Bay Road in Lake Forest. To register for LFCDS events, visit lfcds.org or call 847-615-6129.

How to keep school uniforms looking like new School uniforms can simplify dressing for school and may even bolster school pride among the student body.

The U.S. Department of Education says that wearing a uniform may help decrease the risk of violence and theft and instill discipline while helping school officials more easily recognize potential intruders.

Although once found only at religious and private schools, school uniforms are now worn at many public schools across the United States. The National Center for Education Statistics indicates roughly 20 percent of public and private schools across the U.S. required students to wear uniforms in the 2011-12 school year — the most recent year for which data is available.

School uniforms may help families save money on clothing. Although the initial cost of the uniform may be higher than some other clothes parents may purchase for school, uniforms can be worn again and again, saving parents the expense of buying many outfits for their kids to wear to school. Uniforms may even be available for purchase from multiple places, allowing families to shop around for the best prices. Some uniforms may be simple, such as a white shirt and khaki pants, so that parents have more options.

School uniforms require an investment, and it is important to take care of the uniforms so they can handle the wear and tear of daily use, as well as all of the potential hazards kids might experience in a typical day. These tips can help families keep school uniforms in the best condition possible.

Launder gently. Wash clothes in cold water to prolong the life of the clothing. When possible, line-dry items or tumble dry on low.

Have a few backups. Purchase a few pairs of pants, skirts and shirts that can be interchanged each day. This will cut down on how frequently uniforms need to be washed.

Spot-treat stains immediately. Kids seem drawn to stains from ink, grass, grease, and more, and these stains can permanently ruin clothing if they are not addressed promptly. Rely on some of these stain-removal techniques to keep uniforms looking newer longer:

- Soak clothes in cola for 30 minutes prior to laundering to remove greasy marks or food stains.
- A paste of white vinegar and baking soda can remove grass stains when worked into the stains and then washed.
- Spray pen marks with hair spray then blot to lift off the ink. Repeat as needed before laundering.

Skip some washes. If the uniform isn't especially soiled or smelly, it may be possible to wear it again without washing. Clothes can often be "re-freshed" by using at-home dry cleaning kits.

Reinforce buttons. Use a thin coating of clear nail polish to serve as a protective barrier on button finishes. This will help the buttons look newer longer. The polish also can strengthen the thread that holds buttons on.

Maintain a safe school bus stop

School buses are safe modes of transportation for children.

School buses are large and heavy vehicles that protect riders during collisions. School buses also help keep a greater number of passenger vehicles off of the roads during high-traffic school times.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says that each year approximately 450,000 public school buses transport 23.5 million children to and from school and school-related activities around the United States. Although safety is enforced while students are on the bus, it is also vital for students to remain safe before they board. Ensuring a safe bus stop requires diligence.

Safety starts with students and parents. Students are under the authority of the bus driver while they are on the bus. But before they board the bus, students typically are not supervised. Chaperoned bus stops can help deter rowdy actions, particularly at crowded bus stops. Parents can rotate standing watch and keeping tabs on bus stop behavior.

Arrive early at the bus stop.

Accidents can happen when people are rushing and not paying attention. NHTSA advises getting to the bus stop at least five minutes before the bus is scheduled to arrive.

Stand at a safe distance. Children should remain no less than six feet away from the curb or roadway while waiting for the bus to arrive. Parents should routinely remind students not to run and play at the bus stop.

Lobby for safe bus stop locations.

District transportation directors are often tasked with choosing school bus stop locations based on local policies and attendance. Only basic requirements may be addressed, such as distance between stops. Parents and community members might be able to offer feedback regarding roads with low traffic volume and spots that offer maximum visibility during all seasons.

Minimize street crossings. Parents can drop children off on the side of the road where the bus will stop so the kids do not have to cross roadways unattended.

Use traffic assistance whenever possible. Children who walk to bus stops are urged to walk in crosswalks and on sidewalks and obey traffic controls. Parents can work with their children to find the safest routes to the bus stop, such as on residential streets rather than high-traffic roadways.

Familiarize yourself with the route to the bus stop. Parents are urged to research the area and know where potential hazards on the route to the bus stop may lie. This includes potential human hazards. According to BusBoss, a school bus routing and tracking company, it's important for parents to know where registered sex offenders live and ensure kids avoid these homes on the way to the bus stop. Other hazardous areas include spots where drug activity or other illegal behavior occurs.

Drive cautiously during school hours. Drivers should exercise extra caution and reduce speeds when schools are opening and closing. There will be lots of students on the roads between 8 and 9 a.m. and again between 2 and 4 p.m.

Maintaining school bus safety is of the utmost importance. Students, parents and the school district can work together to make security a priority.

meaningful differentiation in the classroom. State-of-the-art technology is used in every classroom to make lessons dynamic and provide resources beyond traditional textbooks. The accelerated curriculum means St. Norbert students are well prepared for whatever high school they choose to attend.

While academics are the focus of the school, faith is the heart. Catholic values are integrated into the school day so the students aren't just learning their faith; they're living it. In addition to religion classes, students participate in Mass together every week. They prepare for the sacraments and look forward to religious celebrations.

Students at St. Norbert are encouraged to lead lives of service. The school's buddy program pairs older students with a younger buddy. They attend school Masses together and they participate in other activities together throughout the year. The students also initiate various community service projects including packing food for a local food pantry and visiting residents at a local nursing home.

At St. Norbert School, "Think Ahead" isn't just the school's tagline. It is the way it lives its mission. St. Norbert School prepares students to be lifelong learners, rooted in faith and committed to service. St. Norbert School prepares them to be successful; not just in high school, but in life.

Finding balance with extracurricular activities

Many high schools, colleges and universities emphasize their goals of producing well-rounded students.

Extracurricular activities teach students important life lessons, provide them opportunities to socialize and often stimulate their minds and bodies in ways that differ from the stimulation provided in the classroom.

Data from the U.S. Census Bureau states that, in 2014, 57 percent of children between the ages of 6 and 17 participate in at least one after-school extracurricular activity. Children are more likely to participate in sports than clubs or lessons, such as music, dance and language, but each of these activities can be beneficial to students' development.

Students who participate in extracurricular activities may want to limit their participation to 20 hours per week. This is according to a group of professors from Stanford University and Villanova University who have been collecting data on the issue since 2007. In their report "Extracurricular Activity in High-Performing School Contexts: Stress Buster, Booster or Buffer?," Jerusha Conner and Sarah Miles found that 87 percent of kids who would be considered to have packed schedules were perfectly happy unless they were doing more than four hours a day.

The "over-scheduling hypothesis" may be overhyped. This is the concern that too much organized activity participation leads to poor developmental outcomes. This hypothesis also suggests that hectic schedules also undermine family functioning, detract from schoolwork and possibly increase the risk of copycat behaviors and excessive competitiveness. However, in the study "The Over-Scheduling Hypothesis Revisited: Intensity of Organized Activity Participation During Adolescence and Young Adult Outcomes," researchers J.L. Mahoney and Andrea Vest determined that, controlling for demographic factors and baseline adjustment, extracurricular intensity was a significant predictor of positive outcomes and unrelated to indicators of problematic adjustment (e.g., psychological distress, substance use, antisocial behavior) at young adulthood.

Even though extracurricular activities are largely positive — even when schedules are packed — parents need to be aware of the diminishing returns of too many activities. This is something called the "threshold effect." Benefits from extracurriculars can level off when too many activities are being juggled. If a child is experiencing anxiety, sleeplessness or depression, or seems overly stressed, it could be time to reduce students' time spent doing structured activities.

It's essential that families use the cues given by kids to assess what students can handle.

How smart home technology can help you eliminate stress

Many parents have worries around the back-to-school season, especially if kids will be alone for a portion of the afternoon or in the morning before catching the bus.

What if you could keep a better eye on things when you're not physically there? Here are some ways to use smart home technology to simplify daily routines and minimize stress knowing the kids are safe.

Start with a hub

A hub is like the brain of your home tech and connects to your router, allowing devices like locks, thermostats and lighting to communicate with one another. The hub can even send notifications to your mobile phone, so you can monitor and control your home remotely. With hubs such as SmartThings, Wink or Nexia, setting up your devices and customizations is simple. However, you may prefer a hub disguised as security panels, such as ADT Pulse or Vivint, or those that work with popular voice speakers, such as Amazon Echo and Google Home.

Customize

Scenes are an easy way to sync smart devices to perform a series of actions that make life more convenient. For example, you can wake your kids with a "good morning" scene that turns lights on and plays music via an Echo or Google Home.

Worried about energy bills? Keep kids from cranking the air after school with a smart thermostat, which lets you control the temperature throughout the day.

After homework and chores are complete, a voice control assistant will keep kids entertained with music, and a movie scene can lower lights and turn on speakers. Finish the day with a "good night scene," that shuts off lights, lowers the temperature, locks the doors and arms the security system.

Think safety

Your smart home can keep a watchful eye on kids. Smart door locks like Schlage or Kwikset eliminate the need for kids to keep track of housekeys, and let you know if they forget to lock the door when they leave. When they get home, you'll receive a notification letting you know they've arrived safely.

Security-focused solutions like the Piper NV camera and hub, or Abode's DIY security solution alert you when someone enters and exits, and even provide video clips to your phone. Smart sensors, such as those from Aeotec, can notify you whenever a window, door or even a cabinet drawer is opened.

During emergencies, kids can press Fibaro's Button device to activate an emergency scene that signals an alarm and sends a notification to your phone indicating they need help.

Future-proof your tech

Smart home tech doesn't have to be expensive; you can start small with a hub and a few devices and add more as your needs change. Just be sure all your devices can talk to one another now and in the future. With Z-Wave technology for example, devices from different manufacturers can communicate, no matter where you bought them, so consider looking for the Z-Wave logo when shopping for smart home technology. For smart home ideas and customer support, visit z-wave.com.

Alleviate back-to-school stress with new tools that help you keep kids safe and streamline your day.

New ways technology is changing classes

Today's classrooms are in flux. And these changes, rooted in technological innovation, are making it easier for students to become more engaged and collaborative.

Here are several areas where technology is changing the way lessons are taught and information is absorbed.

Collaborative apps. While in the past, group study sessions and group projects could become logistical headaches, today, there are a wealth of free apps that allow students to share, collaborate, edit and provide feedback simultaneously and in real-time, from the comfort of home or while on-the-go using mobile devices. Teachers and students are also using these same technologies to share homework and receive feedback. With so much communication taking place among students and teachers at their convenience outside the classroom, class time is becoming more productive and efficient as a result.

Modern mathematics. The latest graphing calculators are a far cry from the kind you may remember from your own high school days. Certain models today feature the ability to draw 3D graphs and view them from various angles in order to better understand their shapes, as well as offer picture-plot function, for plotting graphs over real-life scenes. In the past, students may have felt isolated working out problems on their own, however, with the latest models, such as the fx-CG50 from Casio's PRIZM line, teachers can now easily display and share lessons with the entire classroom thanks to full-color textbook-style LCD display, and direct projector and USB connectivity.

Modern music. In many classrooms today, students are learning to read, write and play music on the most up-to-date digital pianos. Many such models offer the performance and playing comfort of acoustic pianos, but with the benefits of modern tech, such as split and layer capabilities, multiple audio outputs and two-track recording. To learn more, visit CasioMusicGear.com.

Smart gaming. Many students find traditional lectures a bit dry. But cutting edge educational gaming is more dynamic and exciting than ever before, with some classrooms even using immersive virtual reality experiences to help students understand history in unprecedented ways.

Connected projections. The modern lesson plan has nothing to do with chalk and chalkboard. Today, teachers are using the latest projectors to better connect students with the material. For example, Casio's XJ-UT351WN not only enables projection from data files stored on a USB memory device, but also allows wireless connection to smartphones with a downloadable app. The ability to display and annotate presentations as well as open an internet browser and display content in real-time, makes for dynamic delivery of lessons.

Classrooms that keep up with the pace of technological innovation offer their students more opportunities to connect and collaborate with each other and engage with the material.

Fun ways to get kids to enjoy math

For some kids, one of the toughest parts of the back-to-school season is getting back into the swing of math class. You can help ease the transition this fall and beyond by making math a wholly integrated part of the day.

Math plays a hidden role in so many aspects of daily life. By pointing out these connections in ways that are fun and engaging, you can help make math one of your child's favorite subjects — or at least less feared.

Bake your lesson plan: Learning fractions? Use pies and cookies to demonstrate the concept visually. It's a tasty and fun way to learn how fractions and percentages work.

Calculator fun: Get out the calculator and help children explore patterns. First to third-graders can add or subtract the same number repeatedly. Children will observe patterns that emerge and get a better sense of arithmetic. Children can even make their own "pattern puzzles," which are number sequences where some numbers are omitted. For example: 7, 14, __, __, 35, __, 49. The activity can make addition and multiplication more comprehensible. Look for a model that will be useful for the next several years of math class, such as the fx-300ES from Casio, which offers 2-line display and 240 functions. Free educational resources and activities to try on the calculator can be found at CasioEducation.com.

Money math: At home, use spare change to teach children simple addition and subtraction. Set a timer and see if they can make proper change in record time. Ask kids to solve increasingly difficult problems, and when they answer correctly, give them the change as a reward.

Make it interdisciplinary: Leverage your children's favorite school subjects and hobbies to pique their interest in math. If they love reading, help them select literature that celebrates math. If they find history fascinating, have them read about famous mathematicians and scientists who used math to make discoveries. For young athletes, there are always ways to turn that pick-up game in the park into a math lesson. Angles, distances, times and averages all figure into sports. Using these concepts in an applied way can make math more interesting.

Help kids get off to a great start this back-to-school season by making math fun and engaging.

Girlfriends give back with special breakfast

Ask any woman what her girlfriends mean to her and she will undoubtedly tell you they are a huge part of her life. Whether they are power walking around the neighborhood, shopping at a new local boutique, sipping wine at a book club, doing a yoga class or sitting together at a Starbucks for a much needed counseling session, good girlfriends always find time to get together, even when life seems busy and overwhelming.

But there's something else girlfriends find joy in doing together — giving back. That was the idea behind the annual Girlfriends Breakfast, a charity event started 13 years ago by six women who wanted to bring girlfriends together to help make a difference in the lives of children in the community.

It all started in 2004, when about a half-dozen working moms who lived in Glenview and Northbrook launched Friends of Youth Services, an organization that aimed to raise money and awareness for Youth Services of Glenview and Northbrook. Youth Services is an agency that offers programs focused on early intervention, intervention and crisis response for children and their families.

While developing the concept of FOYS and planning fundraising events, members of the newly formed board thought of an idea they felt was untapped.

"There were lots of elaborate Saturday night gala events that you could go to as couples, but you had to dress up and get a baby sitter," said Julie Shechtman, a Glenview-based financial adviser for Morgan Stanley and mother of four, who was one of the original board members. "There wasn't anything out there for girls to get together during the day while our kids were at school. It was unique. It was like a daytime party."

The first Girlfriends Breakfast took place at a Glenview venue that held 125 guests, which at the time seemed like a lot of spots to fill.

"Ironically, I was a totally glum about the first one," said Patty Patt, an original board member and mom of three, who remained on the board for nine years and who served as president of Friends of Youth Services for two. "I was sure we would never get 125 women to come. Not only did we get that, but we ended up with a huge waiting list. We moved to a bigger venue the next year."

"The board was instrumental," said

JACKIE PIROSSOPH
Love Essentially

Shechtman, a past president of FOYS, as well as both an annual sponsor and hostess of the event. "We didn't do any advertising. We reached out to our girlfriends with handwritten notes and told our story and asked them to come. I think we hit a nerve because people wanted to give back in a way that was easy and fun."

According to Shechtman, the event has sold out every year, and organizers have changed venues a few times to accommodate larger crowds. The expected attendance of this year's Girlfriends Breakfast, scheduled for Nov. 3, at the Northbrook Hilton, is 350.

So what goes on at the Girlfriends Breakfast? Everything girlfriends love: drinking mimosas and coffee, eating breakfast, socializing and the biggest attraction — shopping in a room filled with boutique vendors selling clothing, accessories, jewelry, art and gifts. A percentage of every sale is donated to Youth Services.

"They have really unique, creative things, great for holiday or client or hostess gifts," said Missy Jerfita, a Glenview-based Realtor who is a current board member and sponsor of the event.

Jerfita, who has participated in the Girlfriends Breakfast for several years, said for most girlfriends, the event has become a tradition.

"It's a great way to connect, to network, to see lots of friendly faces and old friends, and to meet friends of friends," she said.

Through ticket revenues, advertisers, sponsors, raffle tickets and vendor sales, the Girlfriends Breakfast has raised over $600,000.

I have personally attended The Girlfriends Breakfast for several years in different capacities.

I have gone as a guest, as a journalist and as a vendor! What I always see is the beauty of women who are so delighted to run into each other. They hug, they giggle, they laugh, they network, they catch up and they buy! You go home from the event proud and happy to be a part of a community of people who care, not only for each other, but for those in need.

"When listening to the speeches during breakfast, tears come to people's eyes," Shechtman said. "We are thinking, 'thank God I don't need these services, but if I did, these people are here for me.' It's really a feel-good event."

ASK THE DOCTORS

Connection between aluminum and Alzheimer's not known

By Dr. Robert Ashley
Ask The Doctors

Dear Doctor: My husband and I have been reading about a possible connection between aluminum and Alzheimer's disease. Some reports even discourage the use of aluminum foil for cooking. Is there a connection between aluminum and Alzheimer's?

Dear Reader: Your worries center around the most-abundant metal and the third-most abundant element, one that by mass makes up 8 percent of the Earth's crust. Plants and animals have evolved in an environment in which aluminum is common. In fact, aluminum is even present in the human brain. This most fundamental of organs contains, on average, 1.02 micrograms of aluminum per gram of brain tissue. Further, brain levels of aluminum increase with age, causing researchers to take a look at how that happens — and what might be the result.

The human body absorbs aluminum from compounds in water, food, aluminum-based utensils, deodorants and drugs. But at toxic levels, aluminum can damage neurons in the brain as well as DNA within neurons. The aluminum ion can affect normal cellular reactions in the brain, cause brain inflammation and lead to neurofibrillary tangles and amyloid deposits that are the hallmark of Alzheimer's disease. In fact, aluminum chloride in combination with the sugar D-galactose injected in rats and mice induces many of the brain changes and behavioral changes seen in Alzheimer's disease.

In one important study

Aluminum foil, which is used in food preparation and storage, is one way people are exposed to aluminum.

researchers studied the postmortem brains of 12 people with familial Alzheimer's disease in England. They found elevated aluminum content in all but one of the brain samples. The researchers also found aluminum concentrated near neurofibrillary tangles and amyloid deposits, which have been linked to Alzheimer's. They couldn't conclude that aluminum was the cause of the dementia; it may be that degenerative brain diseases concentrate and retain aluminum within the brain. Still, a connection seems clear.

The findings are alarming. Aluminum is more ubiquitous today than ever before. Aluminum hydroxide, aluminum sulfate and aluminum chloride are used in drinking water treatment and waste water management, and we use aluminum foil and aluminum in our food preparation and storage.

Considering such exposure, it's important to ask questions about the potential impact.

A 15-year study in France assessed the aluminum levels in drinking water and the rate of Alzheimer's disease in multiple areas of southern France. The concentration of aluminum in the water varied from 0.001 to 0.514 mg/liter depending on location. Of the 1,677 people over the age of 65 who completed the study, 461 were diagnosed with dementia. Those whose aluminum intake was more than 0.1 mg per day had 2.26 times the risk of dementia compared with those whose intake was less than 0.1 mg per day.

All of that said, neither I nor medical science overall can provide a hard and fast answer to your question about the risk of aluminum exposure. It is heartening, however, to know that water boards measure the amount of aluminum in drinking water at a time when the correlation between human exposure to high levels of aluminum and dementia is still largely unknown.

PEOPLE'S PHARMACY PRESCRIPTIONS AND HOME REMEDIES

Craving ice? It could be a sign of celiac disease

By Joe Graedon
and Teresa Graedon
King Features Syndicate

Q: My wife developed an intense ice craving. She crunched ice relentlessly at home and even when we ate out.

As it turned out, she was seriously anemic and osteoporotic as well. After almost four years of iron pills and blood infusions, a biopsy of her small intestines revealed celiac disease. This was in the days before diagnostic blood tests and general awareness of gluten intolerance. You have written frequently about ice cravings, but you haven't mentioned celiac disease as a potential causative factor?

A: A craving for nonfood substances such as ice, cornstarch or clay is called "pica." Anemia brought on by iron deficiency can trigger this condition.

As you correctly point out, anemia can be caused by celiac disease. This autoimmune disorder can damage the lining of the small intestine when susceptible people consume gluten from wheat, barley or rye. When this happens, it is hard to absorb nutrients like iron. Other minerals that often are affected include calcium, magnesium and zinc.

People with unexplained anemia and ice cravings should be tested for celiac disease. They also should be checked for other nutritional deficiencies.

Q: I am caught in a terrible situation. I have arthritis that affects my fingers, knees, hips and back. I also have a family history of heart attacks and strokes. Five years ago, I got two stents because of blockage.

My doctors told me

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

that I cannot take NSAIDs for inflammation because of my heart condition. My rheumatologist will no longer prescribe hydrocodone for the pain. Without pain meds, my blood pressure goes way up, and I cannot sleep. What can I take to ease this agony without harming my heart?

A: You are caught in a classic double bind. The Food and Drug Administration has warned that NSAIDs like diclofenac, ibuprofen, meloxicam and naproxen have been linked to an increased risk of both heart attacks and strokes (July 9, 2015). If you were put on antiplatelet therapy to prevent a blood clot after the stents were placed, NSAIDs could raise your risk for gastrointestinal bleeding (Medicine, January 2015).

With these constraints, you may want to consider nondrug options such as ashwagandha, boswellia, bromelain and tart cherry juice.

Acupuncture or apitherapy (bee stings) also may provide some benefit. To learn more, you may wish to read our online resource "Graedons' Guide to Alternatives for Arthritis." It is available for $4.99 at www.peoplespharmacy.com.

Before you start on any supplements, however, make sure to check with your physicians about the potential for interaction with your medications.

Q: My plantar fasciitis was off-the-charts painful. Shoe inserts just made it worse.

I started taking one of your remedies: 1 tablespoon Certo in one cup of Welch's Concord grape juice. Within a few days I started experiencing relief. I now walk 5-8 miles a day with very little discomfort.

A: Other readers have reported success with this approach to plantar fasciitis. We're glad it was so helpful.

Q: I usually fall asleep OK, but then I wake up in the middle of the night. A friend told me to take magnesium before bedtime. That worked! I rarely wake up at 3:30 a.m. now.

A: Magnesium is indeed essential for good health.

Many people develop insufficiency in this mineral, especially as they age. A small placebo-controlled trial concluded that there was significant improvement in both subjective and objective measures of insomnia with magnesium supplementation (Journal of Research in Medical Sciences, December 2012).

Too much magnesium can lead to diarrhea, however. In addition, those with reduced kidney function should steer clear of this element.

In their column, Joe and Teresa Graedon answer letters from readers. Send questions to them via www.peoplespharmacy.com.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING VILLAGE OF NORTHBROOK ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS OCTOBER 23, 2017

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Village of Northbrook Zoning Board of Appeals will hold their regular meeting in the Board Room of the Village Hall, 1225 Cedar Lane at 7:30 PM on Monday, October 23, 2017. During this meeting the Zoning Board of Appeals will conduct a public hearing regarding the following matters:

1. DOCKET NO. ZBA17-0006 (2051 WALTERS-DETACHED GARAGE)-Petition by Randolph Liebelt, LA Design, 900 North Shore Drive, Suite #100, Lake Bluff, IL 60044 on behalf of Joel and Marilyn Fish, as property owners, for a Zoning Code variation to reduce the required rear yard setback requirement for a building in the R-5, Single Family Zoning District from 5' to 2'-2". The Property is commonly known as 2051 Walters Avenue (PRE No. 04-09-4-12-021) and is the site of a single family home. The variation has been requested to construct a new 2-car detached garage.

At said public hearing and at any adjournment thereof, all persons interested are invited to attend and be heard. If you have any questions regarding these petitions, please contact the Zoning Administrator at 847-664-4055 or via email at Jennifer.Maisch@northbrook.il.us. The decisions of the Northbrook Zoning Board of Appeals are final. Any appeal of this final administrative decision of the Village of Northbrook's Zoning Board of Appeals must be in compliance with the Administrative Review Law, 735 ILCS 5/3-101 et seq and filed within 35 days from the date of the ZBA's decision. 10/5/2017 5219468

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY - LEGAL NOTICE

Men - Women / An Equal Opportunity Employer
NOTICE, pursuant to state law, the Board of Fire & Police Commissioners for the Village of River Grove, Illinois, will hold competitive examinations in River Grove to provide an eligibility list for the position of Patrol Officer within the River Grove Police Department.

Patrol Officers, if appointed by the Board, as of May 1, 2018, shall be compensated $46,338.29 during the initial and first 12 months of probationary employment; $51,871.62 during the second 12 month period of employment; $57,515.63 during the third 12 month period of employment; $63,048.96 during the fourth 12 month period of employment; $68,582.30 during the fifth 12 month period of employment; $74,004.97 during the sixth 12 month period of employment; and $80,375.99 if full patrol officer status is achieved after the sixth 12 month period of employment. Fringe benefits presently include pension fund, longevity pay, hospitalization, uniform allowance, post-employment health plan, and overtime pay.

The competition for placement on the eligibility list is open to any applicant of good record and good character, residing in Cook, Du Page, Kane, McHenry, or Lake Counties, Illinois, for a period of one (1) year, and who is at least 21 years of age and under 35 years of age (as of February 1, 2018). Individuals who are 20 years of age with two (2) years of qualified law enforcement training also qualify for examination. Individuals must complete an application, have vision in each eye that is 20/20 or correctible to 20/20 vision with a prescription, possess a valid Peace Officer Wellness Evaluation Report (P.O.W.E.R. Certification Card), and sit for written and oral examinations to qualify for the eligibility list; further must pass polygraph and psychological examinations and obtain necessary certification and training to qualify for appointment to any available position. Failure to pass any examination or obtain any certification and training is sufficient cause to remove an applicant from any remaining examinations and further consideration for the eligibility list or employment. All individuals must be citizens of the United States, have a high school diploma or its equivalent, have a valid Illinois Driver's License, and have the ability to speak English fluently. A copy of the applicant's birth certificate and high school diploma (or its equivalent) must be attached to the application. Failure to attach both documents to the application will disqualify an applicant from the competition. Any individual subsequently appointed by the Board must complete the probationary period of employment, and may be required to reside within the boundaries established by Village ordinance.

All applicants must pay a $25.00, non-refundable, processing fee in advance. Applications and further information may be obtained from the Administrative Offices located at 2621 Thatcher Avenue, River Grove, Illinois during regular office hours. All applications must be completed and delivered to the Administrative Offices at or before 4:00 p.m. on Friday, October 20, 2017. Applications received or delivered by mail or personally after this deadline will not be accepted. P.O.W.E.R. testing available through Triton College on September 23, October 7 and 21, and November 4, 2017. Also, written examinations and oral examinations are scheduled for November 18 and between December 16-23, 2017, respectively. Final eligibility list to be published on or about February 1, 2018.

Military service, certified standard law enforcement training with current full-time or part-time employment as a law enforcement officer within Illinois, and/or having an associate's degree in the field of law enforcement or criminal justice, or a bachelor's degree may provide an applicant with special preference, and proof of such service, training or degree(s) must be furnished by the applicant within 10 days of the posting of the initial eligibility list by the Board.

The Village of River Grove is an equal opportunity employer seeking qualified Black, Hispanic and other minority applicants as well as White applicants for employment without regard to race, color, sex, or ethnic origin. Applicants with qualified disabilities will be reasonably accommodated upon prior notification.

Ordered for publication by authority of the Board of Fire & Police Commissioners for the Village of River Grove, Illinois.

Carrie Mae Weems: Ritual and Revolution: Carrie Mae Weems often creates works that blur the lines between fiction and documentary to explore universal human experiences through the black subject. Composed of 18 diaphanous printed cloth banners with a poetic audio track, Ritual and Revolution (1998) explores the historic human struggle for equality and justice. 10 a.m. daily, Mary and Leigh Block Museum of Art, Northwestern University, 40 Arts Circle Drive, Evanston, free, 847-491-4000

William Blake and the Age of Aquarius: This exhibition explores the impact of British visionary poet and artist William Blake on a broad range of American artists in the post-World War II period. This considers how Blake's art and ideas were absorbed and filtered through American visual artists from the mid-1940s through the 1960s. This is when Blake became a model of non-conformity, individuality and resistance to authority. 10 a.m. daily, Mary and Leigh Block Museum of Art, Northwestern University, 40 Arts Circle Drive, Evanston, free, 847-491-4000

Soccer helped Niles North's Odicho assimilate

BY JAKUB RUDNIK
Pioneer Press

Amcy Odicho was, by his own account, quite small as a freshman. He spent his first high school soccer season on the Niles North freshman B team.

It was the same fall he was taking classes in full-speed English for the first time, and taking (and sometimes failing) the same spelling tests as classmates who were native English speakers.

Fast forward three years, and Odicho is a captain and vocal leader on the Vikings varsity team. Niles North boys soccer coach Filip Cejovic said Odicho's been perhaps the best player on a team that is out-performing expectations at 8-6-5 through its 1-1 draw against Prospect on Saturday. And he's excelling in school and taking an AP government class.

Odicho, who lived in Tell Tamer in northeastern Syria until he was 10, immigrated to the U.S. with his parents and three brothers because his parents wanted them to get the best education possible, and they already had some family in the U.S.

When he came to the country he spoke no English — he was taught Arabic in school and spoke Assyrian at home — and in middle school he took English Language Learners classes. But from the get-go, Odicho said he found easy friendships through soccer. He's continued to grow through the sport as the years have gone on.

"(For immigrant students) there's a language barrier, maybe there's a confidence barrier, maybe there's an assimilation barrier, but maybe sports is a way to fight through that," Cejovic said. "I feel like in his case he found himself in soccer, and he found confidence and inspiration and wanting to be the best he could be, and I think soccer was a vehicle, a tool for him, to grow not only as a soccer player but as a human being. His transformation has been nothing short of impressive."

Odicho now lives in Skokie has played center back since his first coach at Old Orchard Junior High played him there in seventh grade. His current coach said Odicho isn't spectacular in any certain area on the field, but that doesn't mean he isn't an exceptional player. Cejovic said Odicho's work ethic — he never missed a summer practice or workout and attended every open gym — and appreciation of his chance to play the sport are what sets him apart.

"He's the kind of kid who understands how amazing it is to be a high school athlete from a much broader level than an average American high schooler," Cejovic said. "He's appreciative of that. He invests himself fully in every opportunity that he's afforded."

At Niles North, Odicho has found commonality with his coach. Cejovic was 13 years old when he immigrated to the U.S. in the 1990s from Serbia, which saw strife at the end of the decade, culminating in the NATO bombing of Yugoslavia. He also arrived speaking no English, but graduated from Maine South in 1997 before playing soccer at DePaul. The pair have developed a bond through their similar experiences.

"He had to start all over, and I think soccer was what got him started, or boosted him I think, like it did to me," Odicho said. "He understands the struggle. I think he learned a lot of lessons when he was younger and moved here, I think that might help him connect with players more since he has such a diverse program and diverse school."

Odicho is now looking to follow in his coach's example and play soccer collegiately. He wants to study business. Cejovic said his player has the skill and the grades to make it happen.

Whether Odicho plays somewhere next fall or not, he's come a long way since he first came to the U.S., and soccer has been key to his journey.

"I've always used soccer as a motivation to keep my grades up, since if you're failing classes you can't play," Odicho said. "It also helped me gain a lot of friends. It is easier to make friends with soccer, especially not speaking English at all in fifth grade. ... All you have to do is say 'pass' or 'ball,' you only have to learn that one word and that's it, that's all you need to know. The sport's worldwide. ... It's a great icebreaker if you ever need it."

CENTRAL SUBURBAN LEAGUE GIRLS GOLF NOTES

Deerfield wins tourney, Highland Park wins conference

BY STEVE SADIN
Pioneer Press

Warriors junior Kailey Bertram recorded the first eagle of her career during the Central Suburban North meet and helped Deerfield win the tournament.

On the 261-yard, par-4 14th at Wilmette Golf Club, Bertram used a 4-wood on her drive and the ball settled 85 yards from the pin on Sept. 27. Then she selected her wedge.

"I was facing downhill so I decided to punch it," Bertram said. "I watched it go in the hole from there."

It was her eighth hole of the tournament, which had a shotgun start, and she worked to keep her composure.

"I was so excited," said Bertram, who went on to earn medalist honors with a 76.

Though the Warriors won the tournament with a 335, they finished second to Highland Park in the final league standings. The Giants, who finished with a 350, went 4-0 in league dual meets.

Highland Park

Giants girls golf coach Cathy Nachman said freshmen Emilia Schwenk and Samantha Fahn added a spark to Highland Park's run to the Central Suburban North title with continual bursts of enthusiasm.

"Their love of golf is a big part of our success," Nachman said.

Fahn carded a 97.

Schwenk, who tied for seventh with an 87 at the conference meet on Sept. 27, likes the way golf makes her think.

"I love the mental part of the game," Schwenk said. "You have to figure out the right shot all the time."

Maine South

Golf gave a second athletic life to Maine South senior Emilie Kracik. She was a three-sport athlete playing volleyball, basketball and softball for the Hawks.

After she suffered three concussions and was forced to spend a significant amount of time out of school while she recovered during her sophomore and junior years she is now in her fifth year of high school.

Kracik said she did not want to give up sports so she tried out for golf in the fall of 2015 and is now the captain. She is scheduled to graduate in the spring.

"It gave me friends I never would have had if it were not for golf," Kracik said.

She shot a 96 at the Central

Suburban South meet on Sept. 27 at Wilmette Golf Course. The Hawks placed third with a team score of 361.

Niles West

Alena Sirichotiratana, a Niles West junior from Morton Grove, tied for ninth at the Central Suburban South meet with an 87 on Sept. 27 at Wilmette Golf Club. Said she shaved 10 strokes off her game in the last year by making better decisions.

"Rather than using my 4-wood to try to hit the ball 240 (yards) I'll use a 4-iron and 8-iron to get closer to the hole," Sirichotiratana said.

The Wolves finished fifth as a team at the conference meet with a 416.

CENTRAL SUBURBAN SOUTH BOYS GOLF NOTES

Curcio enjoys strong day at conference meet

BY STEVE SADIN
Pioneer Press

Jack Curcio, a Maine South senior, almost recorded back-to-back eagles at the Central Suburban South meet.

Thanks to an eagle on the par-4 16th and a birdie on the par-5 17th, he ended with a 73 on Sept. 26 to finish in a tie for fourth at Sportsman's Country Club in Northbrook.

Curcio, a Park Ridge resident, drove the green on the 16th and made his putt for the eagle.

"To be able to see him do it was cool," said Niles West freshman Kyle Gibson, who was part of Curcio's foursome. "He two-putted on the next hole or he would have had another eagle."

Curcio said his drive landed 243 yards from the green on 17 and he put his second shot 15 feet from the hole with a 4-hybrid. He said he concentrates on every putt, but never gets nervous.

"If it goes in it goes in," Curcio said. "If it doesn't it doesn't."

Niles North

Niles North boys golf coach Tom Zera created an intramural contest to help his players compete and stay focused, even after a string of bad holes.

The rules are simple: Whoever has the best score for any three consecutive holes wins a sleeve of three golf balls.

"It keeps it fun," Zera said. "Even if you have a few bad holes you still get a chance to start over and win."

Niles North recorded a team score of 389 and placed sixth out of six teams at the Central Suburban South meet on Sept. 26. The tournament was held at Sportsman's Country Club in Northbrook.

Niles West

Niles West coach Mitch Stern is excited about the Wolves' future with every member of his varsity team scheduled to return next season.

Among the players expected back are three current freshmen: Kyle Gibson from Niles, Christopher Villanueva from Morton Grove and Elijah Kim from Lincolnwood.

Stern said a number of athletes who started playing golf as underclassmen dropped the game as they got older, giving the three freshmen an opportunity to play varsity golf. He expects a lot of improvement from them.

"They have no idea how much better they're going to get," Stern said.

Niles West placed fifth at the Central Suburban South meet with a 333 on Sept. 26 at Sportsman's Country Club in Northbrook.

Maine East's Cashen scores season-best 85

BY GARY LARSEN
Pioneer Press

Maine East junior Will Cashen posted his best score of the season at the Central Suburban North meet, finishing with an 85 at Glencoe Golf Club on Sept. 27.

"I think he's been in the low 90s this year but never in the 80s," Maine East coach Tony Montesano said. "I really notice that his course management has been better over the last couple weeks: He's taking an easier swing and being more aware of his capabilities. He's not taking those risky shots and it's been paying off."

Playing aggressive golf might be fun, but playing intelligent golf is what has carried Cashen at season's end.

"We all tend to have a perfect shot in our mind but most of the time, that's not what happens," Montesano said. "Will has been better about managing that tendency and playing smarter."

Gary Larsen is a freelance reporter for Pioneer Press.

COLLEGE NOTES

St. Joseph grad Becton paces Middlebury football

BY SAM BRIEF
Pioneer Press

Elmhurst native Wesley Becton was named Co-Defensive Player of the Week in the New England Small College Athletic Conference on Sept. 18.

Becton, a St. Joseph graduate, is a senior linebacker at Division III Middlebury College in Vermont. He dominated in the Panthers' 30-27 win against Wesleyan on Sept. 16. He had 10 tackles, forced a fumble and added a sack. In a 41-14 win against Bowdoin the following week, the 6-foot, 205-pound Becton amassed four tackles, including a sack.

Maine South's Justin Fahy, Ibrahim Nasir and Jack Pistorius join Becton on the Panthers' roster.

Radtke already a force for NIU volleyball

Stevenson graduate and 2016 Pioneer Press girls volleyball Player of the Year Jori Radtke has been stuffing the stat sheet for the Northern Illinois women's volleyball team.

The freshman outside hitter from Buffalo Grove ranks in the top three on her team in points and kills. Radtke, the Stevenson record-holder for kills in a season and in a career, has also notched six service aces this season, tied for the most on the team.

Radtke is joined by Maine South alumna Destiny Deyro, a freshman who has recorded 15 digs in nine matches this season.

Locals boosting Illinois State women's soccer

Two local athletes have been a driving force for the Illinois State women's soccer team this fall.

Hinsdale South graduate and redshirt senior goalkeeper Vanessa Niestrom has yet to allow a goal in 56 minutes, 20 seconds of action. She posted 45 minutes of shutout soccer against Eastern Michigan on Aug. 18, and she stopped the only shot she faced in 11:20 of playing time against IUPUI on Sept. 10.

Kelli Zickert, a Buffalo Grove alumna and a senior forward/midfielder, has one goal and leads the Redbirds in shots on goal.

Austin finds the end zone for Elmhurst again

Lyons alumnus Hasahn Austin, a wide receiver for the Elmhurst College football team, scored on Sept. 23, marking back-to-back games with a touchdown.

Austin hauled in a 10-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Orlando Hernandez to open the scoring against Wheaton College, the fourth-ranked Division III team in a recent American Football Coaches Association poll. Austin, a 5-10, 160-pound freshman, finished with three catches for 55 yards, including a 35-yard reception.

The previous week, Austin caught an 18-yard touchdown pass as part of a three-catch effort in Elmhurst's 23-20 win against North Park. Meanwhile, Austin's teammate Matt Brachmann, an Elmhurst resident, increased his season totals to 206 yards receiving and four touchdowns.
